WHEAT ABOUT STEADY

The Early Market Was Easier, But Corn Strength Brought a Rally

WEATHER INDICATIONS HELPED

Prospect of Colder Caused a Slight Rally—Expectation of Early Opening of Lake Navigation Has Strengthening Influence On Corn—Cattle Slow And Lower—Hogs Strong.

Chicago, March 9.—Wheat opened a trifle easier on lower cables and larger world's shipments. Initial sales on May were a shade lower at 73 1/2 to 74 1/2. There was considerable local selling on bearish news, May selling to 74 1/2, but the prospects of much colder weather and strength in corn, brought about a rally and the market held fairly steady around the opening figures. Receipts were thirty-six cars.

The market was unsettled through the latter part of the session and prices had wide fluctuations. May selling off to 73 1/2 on the general selling movement. There was a rally toward the close and the final figures were 74 1/2, a loss of 1/4 of a cent for the day.

Lower cables caused an uneasy feeling in corn at the start. May opened unchanged to 1/4 lower at 47 to 47 1/2. Good general demand developed soon after the opening, which was aided by the announcement of the probable early opening of lake navigation, May advancing to 47 1/2. Receipts were 329 cars.

Weakness in wheat affected corn temporarily, but a generally bullish sentiment prevailed and the close was strong, May 1/2 of a cent higher at 47 1/2.

Oats opened steady with only a fair trade. May was unchanged at 34 1/2, but firmed somewhat on the strength in corn. Receipts were 226 cars.

Provisions opened on higher prices for hogs. Early trading was moderate and the market held about steady.

THE LIVESTOCK REVIEW.

Cattle Supply Was Large Today and Buyers Insistent—Hogs Steady.

Chicago, March 9.—Cattle—Today's unexpectedly large supply caused buyers to assume a very independent stand and it was a foregone conclusion that prices would weaken and sales were on an average, 10 and 15 lower, except for choice of beefs.

Hogs—Last week's receipts were trade was active today at firmer prices.

Famous Rockwell Farmers' Co-operative Concern Weathers a Year of Bad Crops

THE ANNUAL MEETING HELD

Three Quarters of a Million Dollars Worth of Business Transacted, Despite the Fact That Crops Were Only About Half a Yield—Additions To The Surplus.

Special to Times-Republican.

Rockwell, March 9.—The Rockwell Farmers' Co-operative Association held its fifteenth annual meeting here Saturday and despite the fact that the crops, especially the corn crop of this county, were almost cut in half by the early frost, the business of the association has amounted to over $601,000. Last year the business was $616,000 and the year previous $825,000, so that with an unfortunate year in the production of the farms of the members of the association the record this year is surprising. Many were about to ask the question if the association had not finally begun its decline. There were reasons for it. Last year at the meeting there was reported more suspensions of members who had refused to pay their commissions than in any year before.

The original founders had left the association. About a month ago the elevator of Moore Bros. began paying more for grain than the co-operative agent could pay and secured most of the grain which came to market.

It was said that the commission men were paying this private elevator better prices than the co-operative association and consequently here was another attempt to undermine the farmers' association. The help of corn, and the poor quality of the oats and the high price of coal all it was predicted would make as marked an inroad into the business of the association, but the report has demonstrated that the predictions were from the order of banter and prophetic and created great surprise and likewise great joy in the breasts of the members. The meeting held in the local opera house was as largely attended as usual, despite the fact of the fearful muddy roads, and the old tow meeting made famous by Patrick Henry and the Boston patriots was enacted again. Every year the facts which brought the association into being, the oppression of the grain merchant and the grocery store and the dry goods vendors, and the struggles for freedom are recited by the patriarchs of the body who were its founders and are still living. The young men have grown up to believe in the association as in their hearts they are, and they are enthusiastic. This year, to obviate any temptations to refuse to pay commissions, the directors bought the stock of those who wished to sell in the best market without rebating to the stock, and the directors are to be congratulated for their wisdom.

The corner stone of the society is to sell at their own elevator if possible, but if other elevators offer a better price to sell there, but pay a rebate of 1/4 of a cent per bushel to the elevator manager. It is this that would keep up the expense of the elevator if not a bushel of grain was sold or handled by it. It is this principle which has kept the great corporations from disintegrating the society and it would seem as if after fourteen years that this co-operative plan was as certain of endurance as the institutions of the government. Besides the showing of the manager for the past year the auditing committee reported that after all the expenses had been paid and the certificates redeemed that there was a surplus of $13,000, which has grown this year by $1,900, and steadily increased each year of the society. The present manager, Frank Campbell, is the second of the only two managers the association has had and was re-elected for the ninth time. James Trestone, who has been elected cashier for the Farmers' Bank, resigned and J. H. Brown, a former president, was elected to the place. It was agreed to study the political principle of the society it is in the fact that there is at the basis both the patriotic sentiment and the inducement for better prices, and patriotic accomplishment, with the sure reward of better financial conditions is a condition which can not be successfully combated even by a corporation of the Standard Oil Company potentiality.

Return to the Village. Again to my village home. With its scenes so dear, I go; To the rugged mountain dome. Where the wild sweetbriars grow, And I would seem A bright dream Throws a gleam To illumine my soul in its glow.

I shall see the cross which bends O'er the brow of the Alpine peaks. In the thicket of hawthorn stocks, And the moss, Remains until the first of the month At the company's headquarters, familiarizing himself with his new duties.

Mr. Letts, or as he is familiarly known, "Mad," came to the Letts, Fletcher Company, and who, since the time he has been chosen to fill the position of assistant manager, has represented the company on the road, will, on April 1, be made assistant manager of the Letts, Fletcher Company, of St. Joseph, Mo. Mr. Letts is at present in Chicago, and immediately following the lockout of Feb. 24 the defendants have visited her employees' homes threatening them with personal violence unless they became members of the union and joined the strikers. Unless this was done the husbands and families of the employees would meet with personal violence and social ostracism.

She also says pickets have been placed near the factory at Bidinger, who have threatened the employees and, being by a mob of men and boys would block the sidewalks, jostle the employees, and direct the attention of the mob to the employees, and use and apply approbations and indecent language to the plaintiff and her employees. Upon such employees being pointed out, the mob would throw missiles at them, severely injuring many.

Miss Schoen holds that the defendants' design by such acts to compel her to sever against her will to the demands of the union, by acts of violence and lawlessness and such acts will be continued unless restrained by the court. She claims to have suffered great pecuniary loss and damage, arising out of her inability to perform her contract.

She alleges that the defendants are without means and property sufficient to compensate her in damages, as they are without property subject to sale and sale on execution. She therefore demands judgment restraining them from interfering with the management of her business and from compelling any person to quit her service, or from intimidating her employees, wives or families. She also demands judgment to recover $10,000 damages for the wrongful acts sustained.

TEA COMPANY GOES UNDER.

Iowa Tea Company Assigns for Benefit of Creditors Late Saturday Afternoon.

The Iowa Tea Company, doing business at 110 East Main street, a partnership business in which E. U. Emery and Charles F. A. Lair were equally interested financially, suspended business late Saturday afternoon. This action was taken to protect the creditors, the principal ones of which, through their attorney, had made an offer to the company to settle on a basis of forty per cent. An effort was made to raise the necessary amount, which was successful, and rather than be forced into bankruptcy the company assigned. G. W. Lawrence was made assignee. The place of business will be closed for a time, until an inventory can be made, when the stock will be disposed of and the proceeds divided among the creditors. The failure of the company is attributed to a series of small business misfortunes which came at a time when the company was in a strained condition, and to the effort to conduct the business on too large a scale with limited capital. The cash value of the assets are estimated at about $35,000, while the liabilities are $60,000. The principal creditors are wholesalers and banks of this city, the Marshalltown Grocery Company, Marshalltown State Bank, Letts-Fletcher Company, and First National Bank and Sprague Warner & Co., of Chicago.

"TOUCHED" FOR TWENTY.

Charles Sheick, a Farm Hand of Ackley Robbed While Asleep at the Center House Friday Night.

Charles Sheick, a farm hand, whose home is in Ackley, is sorry for the first visit he ever paid to Marshalltown, as he claims to have been robbed of $20, all the money he had, while occupying a room at the Center House. He was compelled to borrow the money to return home. Luckily he had a friend in the city who advanced him the necessary amount.

Sheick came to the city to visit his friend, Charles Steffin, who is employed at the Hanson restaurant. The two men slept together at the Center House Friday night, retiring about midnight. As Steffin was compelled to be at his work early in the morning, Sheick claims he notified the clerk to call them at about 4 o'clock. He alleges that the night clerk said he would do so if they would leave the door of their room unlocked. This they did, and Sheick says the night clerk came into the room and called them twice before Steffin arose, about 6 o'clock. Sheick did not get up until two hours afterwards and when he did discovered that he was short $20, all the money he had, which he left in his trouser pocket the night before. He says he did not know exactly what to do, so did not report the theft to the police until Saturday evening, just before he was leaving the city.

NOVEL DAMAGE SUIT

Garment Workers' Union Is Sued For $10,000 By Schoen Manufacturing Co.

ROSA SCHOEN IS THE PLAINTIFF

The Outcome Will Be Of Great Interest To Union Labor Leaders and Employers, As It Involves An Important Phase Of The Labor Question—Defendant Was Attacked.

Racine, Wis., March 9.—Union labor leaders and employers throughout Wisconsin are watching curiously for the result of the novel suit for damages which has been instituted by Rosa Schoen of the Schoen Manufacturing Company against the Garment Workers' union for $10,000 damages growing out of a strike at her factory.

In taking this action Rosa Schoen has apparently taken her cue from the Taff-Vale case in Great Britain, where a railroad company recovered damages from a union for losses sustained by the company during a strike.

Twenty-two members of the local union of the International Garment Workers are the defendants, and an injunction order has been signed by Judge Belden restraining them from interfering with the non-union employees or gathering about the factory. They are charged with attempting to ruin the company's business, threatening the plaintiff and her 100 employees with personal violence and social ostracism, demanding that the company conduct its business according to rules and regulations of the Garment Workers' union and hiring such employees as the union may dictate.

For a period of two months there have been difficulties between the company and employees, caused, it is alleged by the objections of Rosa Schoen to certain employees joining the local union. A lockout followed, and Feb. 24 an agreement was reached by a board of arbitration. The following day the employer broke the agreement, it is charged, and a strike followed.

Since then crowds have gathered at the Schoen factory, and the non-union employees have been threatened and the hiring of strikers so that police protection was demanded to prevent more mobs gathering and compelling a shutdown of the factory.

In her bill in the suit the plaintiff alleges that Math Bidinger, who was the social democratic nominee for governor of the state and is the president of the Trade and labor council, is the advisor of the strikers. She also says he and the other defendants have combined and conspired to interfere with the management and control of the plaintiff's business and control of the employees and to compel the plaintiff to employ persons against her will and discharge the persons now employed.

Continuing, the bill states that immediately following the lockout of Feb. 24 the defendants have visited her employees' homes threatening them with personal violence unless they became members of the union and joined the strikers. Unless this was done the husbands and families of the employees would meet with personal violence and social ostracism.

She also says pickets have been placed near the factory at Bidinger, who have threatened the employees and, being by a mob of men and boys would block the sidewalks, jostle the employees, and direct the attention of the mob to the employees, and use and apply approbations and indecent language to the plaintiff and her employees. Upon such employees being pointed out, the mob would throw missiles at them, severely injuring many.

Miss Schoen holds that the defendants' design by such acts to compel her to sever against her will to the demands of the union, by acts of violence and lawlessness and such acts will be continued unless restrained by the court. She claims to have suffered great pecuniary loss and damage, arising out of her inability to perform her contract.

She alleges that the defendants are without means and property sufficient to compensate her in damages, as they are without property subject to sale and sale on execution. She therefore demands judgment restraining them from interfering with the management of her business and from compelling any person to quit her service, or from intimidating her employees, wives or families.
