Called Forth Enemy's Cheers.

In the winter of 1864 Lee's army was in the camp along the Rapidan river. The union forces under Meade occupied the country across the river.

Important Decisions

ALHOJING OWNERS—FENCES. Plaintiff and defendant owned adjoining farms, which were separated by a fence constructed of posts and three strands of wire stretched and fastened with staples to such posts.

Defendant had permitted his portion of this fence to become broken down and in need of repair. Plaintiff turned into his inclosure 100 head of cattle, to graze on the grass thereon growing, and while there they broke thru that part of the division fence which defendant was bound to maintain, and entered his inclosure, damaging his crop of corn. The defendant drove all of them out, except three head, which he detained for the damage done to his growing crop of corn.

It was finally decided that the only way to make the enemy show his portion of the fence to be broken down in our front. If this succeeded, the enemy was to be driven out of his works if possible; if not he would drive us back across the ford, probably with severe loss to our troops.

Leading the advance guard, which consisted of a squadron of cavalry, was Captain Ash. His instructions contemplated that only his advance guard should cross. It was hoped that this maneuver would draw the enemy from behind the breastworks and cause him to display his force. Ash advanced with his squadron amid the strains of the music. The skirmish which prevailed showed that the enemy was intent on keeping us in ignorance of their numbers and determined to make us pay heavily for the information.

The anxiety was increased. We knew that when the enemy opened fire at short range our loss would be great, and that the advance guard must be the first and greatest sufferers. Ash, with his small command, moved forward, and the silence which prevailed showed that the enemy was intent on keeping us in ignorance of their numbers and determined to make us pay heavily for the information.

Just then the confederates opened fire with a withering volley. Suddenly Ash commanded his squadron to retire, while he, bending forward on his horse's back, rode a rapid gallop to the breastworks, followed as he came opposite each new part of the works, by volley after volley.

There seemed no hope for him, and we waited in agonizing anxiety. On he kept, in spite of the storm of lead. Then he reached a point where his view of the confederate lines was still more extended, he raised his hat, and waved it over his head. It was a signal of triumph.

To our amazement, the confederates, moved by admiration, ceased firing. Instead they mounted their breastworks as thick as they could stand, and throwing their hats into the air, cheered him again and again.

Ash reined up his horse, and, turning toward the confederates, raised his hat in a graceful salute. Then he rode leisurely into our own lines, amid the cheers of both sides. He had accomplished the feat which he had undertaken, and had for himself seen, and displayed to everyone else, a full force of infantry occupying the confederate works.

INSURE TO PASSENGERS. Plaintiff, a commercial traveler, repaired to the depot of defendant company at Vicksburg, for the purpose of taking passage on its train to Natchez. He procured a ticket, and handling of his baggage was entrusted to another person also an employee of the company. The porter roughly prevented the boy from getting on the train, and plaintiff, who was some twelve feet behind, could not hear what was said, but supposed that the boy was making an admission because he had no ticket. When the plaintiff arrived at the train the porter refused him admission, saying that he could not get on there and although plaintiff showed him a ticket, the porter persistently refused to allow him to enter, but did not assign any reason for his refusal. Plaintiff was not aware that this was the compartment for colored passengers only, and after considerable talk with the porter, who acted in a surly manner, and then walked away, plaintiff was admitted to the train. He then brought action for damages.

HELD, that plaintiff was entitled to recover, but that a verdict of $2,500 was not excessive as exemplary damages. Yazoo vs. M. V. R. Co. 37 So. (Miss.)

SICK HEADACHE. This distressing ailment results from a disordered condition of the stomach. All that is needed for the cure is a dose of two of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. In fact, the attack may be warded off, or greatly lessened in severity, by taking a dose of these tablets as soon as the first symptom of an attack appears. Sold by all druggists.

Very Low Rates to Inauguration of President Roosevelt at Washington, D. C. Via the Northwestern line, Excursion tickets will be sold to New Orleans, Orleans on March 6, for trains arriving at New Orleans by noon of March 7, with favorable return limits. Excursion tickets are also on sale daily, at reduced rates, to the principal winter resorts in the United States and Mexico. For full information apply to agents Chicago & Northwestern railway.
