

CONTINUE RATE FIGHT

Royal Arcanum Members of New York Will Ask Supreme Council to Reconvene

THE COMMITTEE NOW AT WORK

Signatures of Thirty-nine Representatives of the Supreme Council Necessary to Secure a Special Council—Plan to Have Option A of the New Rates Amended.

New York, July 8.—The effort of the committee of nine, appointed by the Royal Arcanum councils of this city to force the supreme council to reconvene and reconsider the new schedule of rates, so universally objected to, will, it is asserted, prove availing. Steps have been taken by the committee to get the signatures of thirty-nine representatives of the supreme council to a request for the reconvening of the supreme council. Ten of the fifteen representatives accredited to the supreme council, from this state have pledged their signatures.

There will be no trouble in getting the required signatures, said William H. McCabe, chairman of the committee, yesterday. "For I honestly believe that nearly two-thirds of the membership of the order is opposed to the new rates."

"No one knows better than the representatives to the supreme council the feelings of the members, both old and young, and it is my belief that the supreme council will be reconvened and a change made in the new rates."

"The committee of nine continued their work yesterday, and the convention of the councils held in the Aurora Casino cathedral, Brooklyn, to secure a change."

"The plan to have option A of the new rates amended so as to make it prevail at the original age of government is our plan, and we are pledged to it. Under its provisions the increase in receipts would not only sustain the order but establish a large reserve fund."

Council's Action Confirmed. Pittsburgh, Pa., July 8.—The executive committee of the Royal Arcanum has reaffirmed the action of the supreme council of the order in rearranging the schedule of rates, to which there has been so much opposition. The report, just issued, says in part:

"The perpetuity of the order demanded that no makeshift of temporary expedient be adopted, but that the whole order should at once be put on a permanent, enduring basis, providing sufficient funds to carry the Royal Arcanum for all time and meet obligations. This has been done. Since 1901 this committee has given the most careful and painstaking consideration to the whole matter."

"It examined the statistics and workings of other fraternal orders and companies doing business in this country. It consulted many of the men most skilled in solving such problems. It found in detail from Royal Arcanum experience the precise cost of Royal Arcanum protection and apportioned that cost among the different ages fairly and justly, with due regard to the rights of every member, old or young. The report, after the fullest examination and discussion, was adopted."

"No increase in the rates could be made without increasing hardship somewhere. Had our condition not been such as to make some radical change a vital necessity, not only to the supreme council would have been cast in favor of the present law. The responsibility was there and had to be met."

"The legislative committee since the supreme council adjourned has had before it various protests, tables, rates and remedies suggested by various dissatisfied members. All such rates and remedies and very many others were considered by the committee during the long investigation. No one of them would collect sufficient money to make it last for all time and the committee now reaffirms, as absolutely correct and incontrovertible, its conclusions as set forth in its report to the supreme council."

ROOT AND PRESIDENCY.

His Appointment as Secretary of State Makes Him Possible.

Washington, July 7.—Washington received the news of Root's appointment with surprise, which was quickly followed by a warring of tongues. The announcement, coming in the dull summer days of an off year, has furnished the political gossips with a fine topic for speculation. It has started the presidential ticket makers into active work three years ahead of the next national convention. The far-seeing ones declare the former secretary of war has his eyes on the White House.

The surprise came thru Mr. Root's acceptance rather than his selection by the president for the premiership. And because the politicians have been given to understand by Mr. Root himself that he was done with official public life when he resigned the secretaryship of war to take up his neglected and very remunerative law practice, his sudden change of mind in the absence of a crisis or pending international complications has forewarned the politician that ambition for higher honors has found a place in his breast.

As secretary of state and the president's chief adviser, Mr. Root, if he has a presidential bee buzzing, can well afford to sacrifice a princely income to further his aspirations.

With the limelight focused on him, reciprocity with Germany, Chinese exclusion and a few other questions of some pressing importance to arise next winter, Mr. Root can easily be advanced politically to the center of the stage and compete in leading roles with Vice President Fairbanks, Senator Foraker, Secretary Taft and others whose names have been suggested as presidential possibilities.

One story given circulation tonight even goes so far as to say that Mr. Root consented to become secretary of state only after President Roosevelt had given assurance that he would support him for the nomination for the presidency in 1908. Secretary of War Taft, to give the story added probability, is declared to have agreed to stay out of the presidential race, as a reward for which he will be given a seat on the supreme bench.

Mr. Root's name has appeared in nearly every celebrated legal case in the business and political world of New York since he left the war department. He appeared in the New York securities case. He is counsel in the anti-Canada agitation, which will see as Governor Odell's $100,000,000 canal project defeated by the courts.

He is personal counsel for Thomas F. Ryan and the Metropolitan Street Railway interests. He was retained by Paul Morton and Mr. Ryan in the Equitable Life Assurance Society's reorganization scheme. He was retained by Mayor Weaver of Philadelphia as personal counsel at the outset of the war against the Philadelphia rink. He has appeared on many occasions before both the United States supreme court and the court of appeals in New York state. His income, it has been said, is measured only by physical ability.

This is what Mr. Root has sacrificed for an $8,000 salary in Washington, to say nothing of a possible presidential candidacy and social obligations, and a method of living which will probably require an expenditure of $30,000, $50,000 a year. Official life in Washington, when it comes up to the standards set by men such as Mr. Root and Mr. Hay, requires a long purse.

AGAINST MINE OPERATORS.

Arbitrator Gray Says They Must Share Expense of Shot-Firers' Work.

Springfield, Ill., July 8.—By the decision of Judge Gray, fifth member of the board of arbitration to settle the controversy between the United Mine-workers of Illinois and the Illinois Operators' Association, the operators and miners alike must share the expense of the operation of the shot-firers' work.

The decision was made public last night after the report of the scale committee of miners and operators. In his decision Judge Gray cites among his reasons for the stand he has taken the fact that the provision for the inspection included in the duties of the shot-firers is a benefit to the operators and that its mission is one of humanity.

The operators' association takes the decision of Judge Gray with much disappointment. "The decision is a bitter disappointment to the operators," said Herman Just, commissioner of the association last night. "But having agreed to arbitrate the question in dispute, the operators will swallow their medicine and make as few grimaces as possible. The decision is neither milk nor water."

The miners look at the decision in a different light. Secretary W. D. Ryan said:

"I am satisfied. While the decision divides the expenses, the miners' organization is exonerated of any violation of its contract."

The operators said last night that the mine of the state would be placed in operation. The wages agreed upon for the shot-firers and inspectors is $4 a day. The day will consist of eight hours.

GIVES UP $300,000 TO BE A JUDGE.

James B. Dill, Corporation Lawyer, Appointed New Jersey Bench.

New York, July 7.—James B. Dill, one of the foremost corporation lawyers of America, was appointed yesterday by Governor Stokes of New Jersey a judge of the courts of errors and appeals of the state. He surrenders an income of $300,000 a year from his law practice to become a judge with a salary of $30,000. His last private act was to refuse a retainer of $25,000 offered by an insurance financier.

Within twenty days Mr. Dill has placed on file in Albany his resignation as director in ninety-one companies of the state of New York. In New Jersey he has withdrawn from many more corporations. He has no clients, that he can no longer serve them. Henceforth his duty is to the state.

On this account, the Standard Oil Company, the steel trust and the Public Service Corporation filed just yesterday with the governor and opposed the appointment.

Mr. Dill's fees have been enormous. It is said that for adjusting the affairs of the Carnegie company and bringing about an amicable settlement of difficulties between Andrew Carnegie and H. C. Frick, he received $1,000,000.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

Child Not Expected to Live From One Hour to Another But Cured by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Ruth, the little daughter of E. N. Dewey, of Agnewville, Va., was seriously ill of cholera infantum last summer. "We gave her up and did not expect her to live from one hour to another," he says. "I happened to think of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and I got a bottle of it from the store. In five hours I saw a change for the better. We kept on giving it and before she had taken the half of one small bottle she was well." This remedy is for sale by all druggists.

Treat Your Kidneys for Rheumatism.

When you are suffering from rheumatism, the kidneys must be attended to at once, so that they will eliminate the uric acid from the blood. Foley's Kidney Cure is the most effective remedy for this purpose. R. T. Hopkins, of Polar, Wis., says: "After unsuccessfully doctoring three years for rheumatism with the best doctors, I tried Foley's Kidney Cure, and it cured me. I cannot speak too highly of this great medicine." B. A. Morgan.

"DUNNITE" IS NEW WAR TERROR

Explosive Invented by American Army Officer Causes "Shooch."

New York, July 7.—That a twelve-inch shell loaded with only a small charge of dunnite, the world's most effective explosive, will crumble in the side of the heaviest armor-clad vessel, though the shell fell short of its mark by twenty feet, has just been demonstrated at the beginning of a series of tests at the government proving grounds at Sandy Hook.

The great value of this explosive lies in the fact that the shell will pierce armor and explode in the interior of a vessel.

WELL FOUND FULL OF FISH.

Underground Lake Tapped and Wagon Loads Are Taken Out.

Fergus Falls, Minn., July 7.—Persons from the flats west of the city bring news of the tapping of an underground lake on the farm of Mr. Sims near Bureau postoffice. There are flowing wells all over that locality and Mr. Sims had just sunk one from which a large stream of water is pouring out and with it come wagon loads of fish.

The fish are small and the smaller ones are entirely without eyes, while the larger varieties have very small organs of sight. The fish come up by thousands and four wagon loads have been hauled away from the mouth of the well.

There is nothing remarkable about the tapping of an underground stream or lake, but the people cannot understand how so many fish could have lived there and why they now come to the surface.

A Self-Made Merchant.

Colleges Make Neither Fools Nor Bright Men.

Dear Pierpont—Your ma got back safe this morning, and she wants me to be sure to tell you not to overstudy, and I want to tell you to be sure not to understudy. What we're really sending you to Harvard for is to get a little of the education that's so good and plenty there. When it's passed around, you don't want to be foolish, but reach right out and take a big helping every time, for I want you to get your share. You'll find that educating about the only thing lying around loose in this world and that it's about the only thing a fellow can have as much of as he's willing to haul away. Everything else is screwed down tight and the screwdriver lost.

I'm anxious that you should be a good scholar, but I'm more anxious that you should be a good, clean man. And if you graduate with a sound conscience I shan't care so much if there are a few holes in your Latins. There are few parts of a college education that you get in the school room from the professors and the part that you get outside of it from the boys. That's the really important part. The first can only make you a scholar, while the second can make you a man.

Education is a good deal like eating—a fellow can't always tell which particular thing did him good, but he can usually tell which one did him harm. After a square meal of roast beef and vegetables and mince pie and watermelon you can't say just which ingredient is going into muscle, but you don't have to be very bright to figure out which one started the demand for pain killer in your insides or to guess next morning which one made you lie in a personal devil the night before. And so once a fellow can't figure out to an ounce whether it's Latin or algebra or history or what among the solids that he builds him up in this place or that, he can go right on—

Talks on Love

He Tells What It Is in a Lecture to Fellow Countrymen of Harper's Corners.

FELLOW-Countrymen of Harper's Corners—The subject of my lecture this evening has already been announced by handbills, but as some of you may have got things mixed up I will say that it is "Love."

Let me begin business by asking, What is love? No one can give a technical answer, but we've all been there and know how it is. Perhaps it is needless to tell you that love began in the garden of Eden. Adam had been sloshing around for weeks and weeks all alone in the world and boss of everything, but he wasn't exactly yearning and looking about for something that wasn't there. Day by day the feeling grew stronger, and he couldn't shake it off by climbing trees or jumping over fences. It may seem ridiculous to that old baldhead sitting on the back bench, but that, my friends, was the budding and the beginning of love in the human breast.

One day Adam found Eve as he was strolling around, and I don't suppose it was two hours before he was wooing her hand and calling her an angel and telling her how much he loved her.

Love today is the same as it was in the beginning. There has been no change. The feeling seems to begin way down in our toes and work up until it lifts the hat off our head. Sometimes there is loss of appetite connected with it; sometimes it makes one hungry; sometimes it makes one sleep and dream of cherubs flying about; sometimes it keeps one awake and pacing the floor all night.

There is no other human sentiment so strong. Ambition will send a man out to a ward caucus on a dark night, but love will oblige him to walk three miles in a snowstorm to see the outside of the house in which his girl resides. You may hate a man and keep it up for three or four weeks, but it finally falls on you, and you let go. Not so with love. It hangs right to you like a dog man or she throws you down with a dull thud and breaks your heart. It has been truly said that if the sentiment of love was eliminated from the human heart we would degenerate into either wolves or donkeys, and no one can doubt it.

In all times and all ages love has been the spur to incite a man to greater efforts. I cite you the case of Alexander at a pretty good gait at the age of twenty-three, but the highest aim he had in view was to command a hundred soldiers and be addressed as "Cap." One evening when he was out to a candy pull or something of the sort he met a red-headed girl with willow form and fell in love with her at the drop of the hat. He saw her home from the party, and he had hardly left her at the gate before he was ambitious for place and power. He took a jump upward from that very hour, and he continued to jump, and history has told you the pinnacle he finally reached. In due time their cards read, "Mr. and Mrs. Alexander the Great," and love was the cause of it.

You have heard of Diogenes of course. He was the old chap who sat around in his tub most of the time, but upon occasions went about with a lantern in the daytime looking for an honest man. He got off a lot of stuff he called philosophy, but it was no thicker than the grime on the back of his neck. He got the reputation of being an old crank, and he would have died in his tub and been dumped into sewer if he hadn't met up with a certain widow named Ladia. She was fair, fat and forty and had about $100,000 in cash behind her, and old Diog was no chicken.

When he saw that she was a little sweet on him, he got out of that tub, washed his face and had his hair cut and inside of two weeks was courting her and forgetting all about philosophy. He felt the glow of love from his head to his heels, and he got his hair dyed and some of the wrinkles rubbed off his face, and they were married and lived happily for years and years. Under the spur of love he opened a bank or a pawnshop, and the way he did get up among the millionaires was good to see.

When you think of Cleero, whose oratory made a nation cheer or weep, it is hard to think of love in connection with him, and yet he loved, and it was love that put him in the front on the charge of burglary, expressed a willingness to plead guilty and receive sentence.

The law provides that prisoners who wish to do so can plead guilty without awaiting indictment by a grand jury, and, as the district court does not convene until September, LaValley will begin serving time just as well begin serving time once. He accordingly admitted his guilt and was sent to the St. Cloud reformatory for an indefinite period. He had broken into a building at Dent, and stolen some money and a few articles.

So far as known, this is the first time this law has been applied in this state. Its enactment was made possible by the adoption of the constitutional amendment relating to grand juries.

The Diamond Cure.

The latest news from Paris, is that they have discovered a diamond cure for consumption. THE APPOINTING POWER.

A Story of President Grant and an Obstinate Subordinate.

General Grant's generosity to his foes, his many private and official kindnesses to the widows and orphans of Confederate soldiers, is an old tale, but it bears repetition in the form of an incident which Helen D. Longstreet gives in "Lee and Longstreet at High Tide."

The widow of a Confederate officer applied to the postoffice department to be appointed postmistress in a small southern town. As she heard nothing of her application, she went to Washington to press it. She was unable to move the authorities at the postoffice department and was about to go home in despair when a friend suggested that it might be worth while for her to see the president.

With much effort she summoned courage and appeared at the White House. The president received her in a most friendly manner and after hearing her story took her application and wrote a strong but brief indorsement on the back of it. She hurried in triumph to the postoffice department.

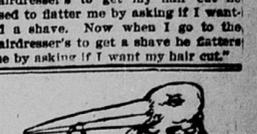

The official to whom she presented the application frowned and pondered over it for some time and then wrote under the president's indorsement, "This being a fourth class office, the president does not have the appointing power."

The application was handed back to her, and she went away in deep distress, and was again preparing to return home when another friend told her by all means to take the paper back to the president, so that he might see how his indorsement had been received. When the president read it he wrote under the last indorsement, "While the president does not have the appointing power in this office, he has the appointment of the postmaster general" and, summoning his secretary, President Grant directed him to accompany the lady to the department and in person deliver her application to the postmaster general.

She received the commission before she left the office.

"Ah, yes," mused Mr. Ombro, "when I was a young fellow and went to the hairdresser's to get my hair cut he used to flatter me by asking if I wanted a shave. Now when I go to the hairdresser's to get a shave he flatters me by asking if I want my hair cut."
