Young Jewess Sold Into Slavery and Life of Shame Rescued at Sioux City

ARREST MAX SOLAR, OF OMAHA

He is Said to Be Cousin of the Girl, and Brought Her From Chicago to Omaha Under Promise of Marrying. But That She Was Spirited to Sioux City Resort.

Special to Times-Republican.

Sioux City, July 17.—Induced by Max Solar, now in jail at Omaha, to go with him to that city from the home of her cousin in Chicago, under the promise that he would marry her; seduced by her trader, who then attempted to sell her for $20 to a keeper of a house of ill fame, and then spirited out of Omaha to Sioux City, where a carriage met her and took her to the resort of Mable Moore, 307 Pearl street, Rosie Stein was rescued and is now with a respectable family on the west side.

Oscar Rubenstein, acting for a local Hebrew society, left Sioux City for Omaha, to gather evidence, looking to the prosecution of Solar, and to confer with Chief of Police J. J. Donahue of this pretty 17-year-old Russian-Polish girl for a forced life of shame is as sensational as it is pathetic the story she tells of the manner in which she was tricked by the man who professed to love her, but who is suspected of being one of the band of Maquerreaux, a secret clan founded years ago in Paris, now infesting every city of any size in the United States and continental Europe.

Rescued from Resort. Rosie Stein, which is only a name she took to hide the good name which she bears—lived for eight days practically a prisoner of her own choosing, in a room at Mabel Moore's resort on Pearl street rather than become an inmate of the place. During that time she kept to her room, weeping bitter tears of shame and unable to communicate with any of her country people, until some young Hebrews of this city heard of her plight and rescued her with difficulty.

One night this week an emissary from the little band of young men went to the resort where the girl was kept and talked with her. She told him she wanted to go home, but that she was sent here from Omaha she had nothing in the shape of clothing save what scanty attire she wore.

Desiring to leave him, it was agreed that another member of the party should go up and invite the girl to accompany him to the family theater, under the guise that he desired her company for the evening.

There it was arranged Max Brodsky would meet the girl and her escort and talk with her. The girl speaks little if any English, and they conversed in the native tongue.

"Are you satisfied with your present life?" asked Mr. Brodsky. "No, I could not. I want to leave, and am willing to do any kind of hard work," the girl replied with sob.

"Then let us talk about your future," he said. "I am ready to go," she replied. "Then go with me now. I have a good place among your own people, where you will have a chance to lead a respectable life," Mr. Brodsky replied.

Police Called. The weeping girl said she desired to go back and get what few clothes she had, and asked that two of the young men accompany her. When they approached the keeper of the place, they state, that they were refused permission to take the girl with them. After midnight, unable to rescue the girl, they appealed to Captain Bridwell, who sent Officer James to the resort and the woman released the girl, and she has since been in the home of a respectable family on the West Side.

"Take her with you, she's no good here, anyway," the keeper of the resort is said to have replied, as he reluctantly relinquished the girl and her little satchel of clothing, in the presence of the police officer and the two young men who accompanied her. At 1:30 that morning the door bell at a little West Side cottage rang and the party was admitted.

Rosie Stein, for the first time in months, was assured that she was among friends, who meant to uplift her life, but she was still doubtful, because she had been tricked so much, and was unwilling to believe those who had rescued her. Today she knows that she is among friends and that everything possible will be done to avenge her trader and to help her lead a life of respectability.

Rosie Stein came to this country with three brothers and two sisters and settled in Canada not long ago. Subsequently her cousin in Chicago sent her a ticket to visit him. At her cousin's home Max Solar met her and pretended to love her. He induced her to come to Omaha, where he told her they would be married.

For a time there they lived together. He was employed there, but the Sioux City, who interested themselves in her case, once she came here found that Solar's cousin keeps a resort in that city.

FAMOUS CASE IS DECIDED. Temple Amendment Held to Be Constitutional.

Des Moines, July 17.—The famous Temple amendment protecting railroad employes in their claims for personal injuries was decided to be constitutional by the state supreme court Saturday. This decision affects every railroad company and their thousands of employes in Iowa. In brief, it declares unlawful any contract between the railroad company and its employes, by which the employe is made to sign away in advance any possible injury his right to damages.

It has been the custom of Iowa railroads, particularly the Burlington, which was the defendant in the present case, to maintain "relief departments," and all employes participating in the benefits of this department were required to sign a waiver of their rights to bring suit for damages in event of injury. The decision just handed down administers a severe blow to such "relief departments," as the employe is not stopped from bringing any suit for damages.

BELMONT LAWN FETE. Improvements Made and Planned Will Give Fine Park Theme.

Special to Times-Republican. Belmont, July 17.—The Ladies park association held a very successful lawn fete in the park Saturday evening. The band entertained the crowd with music and the people of the town turned out in large numbers. The association has done fine work and the improvements made and contemplated will give us a fine park. A fountain costing $300 has been bought, and a bandstand and cement walks are among the plans for the near future.

Coins of the Orient. China, of all countries, ancient and modern, exhibits the greatest variety in the matter of coins. The earliest money on record, about 2,600 B. C., consisted of shells and cowrie shells. The cowrie was used for small change, while tortoise shell and purple cypraea shells, the latter ranging in size from a few inches to a foot and a half in length, represented money for a higher value.

A decrease in the supply of shells and increasing prosperity called for a more handy medium of exchange, and cash, the coin coin with a square hole in the center, came into existence and remains in use to this day.

Among the earlier Chinese coins was one of porcelain about three-quarters of an inch thick, bearing the legend, "Eternal Prosperity." A few curious knife money was at one time used in the state of Tsi. It was of copper shaped like a bill hook, about seven inches long and fitted at the end with a ring. During periods of metal scarcity in China iron, lead, tin, baked earth, grain, silk, and shells have been used as a circulating medium.

In Japan an iron coinage, began about 1636, has existed up to the present day. A curious coin, made of a mixture of silver and copper was long in use in Japan. It varied in size from a small pea to a large bean. Lead coins were also used there for five centuries. Glass was employed as a substance for coin for many centuries in Egypt, while wooden money is mentioned in many of the Buddhist writings.

Three young boys were drowned in the Mooningahela river by the capsizing of their skiff from the swells of a towboat.

Webster City. Dr. O. C. Buxton has sold his fine residence property at 710 Boone street to Mr. E. Root, of Highmore, S. D., the consideration being $4,000 cash. Dr. Buxton's reason for selling is that he intends buying a suburban home, and will continue to reside in Webster City, where he has a large practice.

Mr. Root is a wealthy ranchman, having recently sold his 20-year-old son of Manager D. E. Livens, of the Green Bay Lumber Company, was badly injured by falling from a scaffold, a distance of twenty-two feet. The accident occurred at Howard, S. D. Livens was working on a big barn when the scaffolding gave way, precipitating him to the ground. He struck on his back and shoulders and at the time he wrote was unable to turn himself in bed.

Lundaster. Sunday evening after services at the M. E. church there was quite an excitement caused by one of the steeplechamps falling to the floor. The lamp was full of oil, which was scattered over the boards, setting them on fire. One man grabbed the lamp, throwing it out at the door. The porch also caught fire. It looked, for a while, like the building would go up in smoke, but the fire was soon extinguished with no serious damage.
