George D. Brooke, superintendent of machinery and motive power on the Panama railroad, Isthmus of Panama, is expected to arrive in the city about the middle of August for a short stay with former friends. Mr. Brooke, prior to about three years ago, was master mechanic of the Iowa Central, and was later superintendent of machinery and motive power, of both the Iowa Central and Minneapolis & St. Louis, with headquarters at Minneapolis. He is coming to this country to spend several weeks with his family, which is now living in Minneapolis.

The Northwestern began Monday the work of tearing up the old wooden platform in front of the union station, and between the rails of its main line tracks, and between the tracks and the Iowa Central platform. The planking will be taken up, and in its place three crossings, two sixteen feet wide and one thirty-two feet wide, will be put down over its right of way, to afford a means of getting across the tracks to the Central platform. The reason for tearing up the wooden platform is said to be to prevent the liability of accident, because with the platform up passengers and people about the union station will be less inclined to stand upon the tracks, where they often have narrow escapes from being run over by incoming trains.

One of the possessions of which "Mose" Arquette, the veteran engineer of the Iowa Central is especially proud, is a watch given to him by the Iowa Central, and after he had been in Iowa making a trip over the line. The line was pulled by Engineer Arquette and between him and Mr. Sage a friendship grew up, which resulted in the gift of the watch. Robert McMains, is another of the Iowa Central engineers, who also knew Mr. Sage. He also pulled the special trains which carried Mr. Sage over the line on his trips of inspection. Mr. Sage, however, has never visited the line since, about twenty years ago.

of 1880. Those who bit received a reply notifying them to forward 10 cents for further instructions. Then they were told to forward a remittance for membership in a "pretended association" and for certain manuals of the prices of old coins. Then came the answer to the puzzle in the form of a notice that the specialty company would pay them $20 for 1880 pennies of the 1880 date.

A few days ago a fraud order stopped a game, worked successfully by a woman inmate of a Nebraska asylum. Reports to the postmaster-general show that she has victimized a number of men thru a matrimonial bureau by offering to marry them, and obtained upon the strength of such promises money, engagement rings, dress patterns and other articles.

It was reported to the department that under the laws of Nebraska the asylum authorities had no power to intercept letters addressed to the woman and that they were, therefore, unable to prevent the practice of a fraud. Accordingly, the postmaster-general was asked to issue an order prohibiting the woman from using the mails. All letters addressed to her in the future relating to matrimony will be marked with the words "fraudulent" and returned to the senders.

Leader of German Radicals. The death of Eugen Richter, in Berlin last week, removes, says the New York Tribune, one of the foremost historical figures and one of the last remaining of the Bismarckian age. Mr. Richter, who had become so well known as a politician and publicist, was born in Dusseldorf in 1838. In 1871 he became a member of the Reichstag, in which he remained the rest of his life. He was the first leader of the radicals and an old opponent of Bismarck's. The Tribune says of him: "He was one of the two men whom the great Chancellor considered worthy opponents in the Reichstag, and, indeed, was perhaps more widely and constantly known as Bismarck's political foe than Windthorst. He was far and away the ablest of all the radical leaders in the empire, and by his ability and character commanded the unflinching respect of even those who most strongly resented his democratic teachings."

The leader of opposition to the government for a whole generation, he practiced higher arts than mere railing and obstruction, and by his intelligent and suggestive criticism often contributed much to constructive legislation. It would not be easy to estimate his actual influence upon the progress of affairs in Germany. That it was very great in the development of radical and republican principles and in the spread of the free trade propaganda is scarcely to be questioned. He never succeeded in defeating Bismarck, nor in breaking down the protective policy, however, nor was his opposition to socialism effective in checking the growth of that "heresy," as he called it. But he was a great force in German politics and in the public press, and the fine scholarship of his speeches and writings—he was educated at Bonn, Heidelberg, and Berlin—gives them a permanent value in the literature of German politics and political economy.

In the Wrong Church. (Chicago Inter-Ocean) An absent-minded woman one Sunday morning walked into church, took a front seat and joined in the service vigorously. Then the collection basket was passed to her, and putting a coin into it, she looked about. She cast glances in every direction, her mind cleared, and an expression of amazement spread her face. She hurried down the aisle. She overlooked the man with the collection basket. "In the wrong church," she whispered, and taking out the coin she had put in she hurried forth.
