CHAPTER XVII.
At the Farm House Again.
McKnight is always a sympathizer with the early worm. It was late when he appeared. Perhaps, like myself, he had not slept well. But he was apparently cheerful enough, and McKnight with curiosity, I with a sickening sense of horror. Back in the fields was the little farm house where Alison West and I had intended getting coffee, and winding away from the track, maple trees shading it on each side, was the lane where we had stopped to rest, and where I had—It seemed presumption beyond belief now—where I had tried to comfort her by patting her hand.

We got out at M—, a small place with two or three houses and a general store. The station was a one-roomed affair, with a railed-off place at the end, where a scale, a telegraph instrument and a chair constituted the entire furnishings.
The station agent was a young man with a shrewd face. He stopped hammering a piece of wood over a hole in the floor to ask where we wanted to go.

"We're not going," said McKnight, "we're coming. Have a cigar?"
The agent took it with an inquiring glance, first at it and then at us. "We want to ask you a few questions," began McKnight, perching himself on the railing and kicking the chair forward for me. "Or, rather, this gentleman does."

"Wait a minute," said the agent, glancing through the window. "There is a hen in that crate choking herself to death."

He was back in a minute, and took up his position near a sawdust-filled box that did duty as a cuspidor. "Now fire away," he said.
In the first place," I began, "do you remember the day the Washington Flier was wrecked below here?"
"Do!" he said. "Did Jonah remember the whale?"
"Where you on the platform here when the first section passed?"
"I was."

"Do you recall seeing a man hanging to the platform of the last car?"
he made a better breakfast than I did, it was one o'clock before we got to Baltimore. After a half hour's wait we took a local for M—, the station near which the cinematograph picture had been taken.

Mr. Hotchkiss was without a sense of humor. He regarded McKnight gravely and went on:
"I've been up in the room where the man lay while he was unable to get away, and there is nothing there. But I found what may be a possible clue in the dust heap."

"Mrs. Carter tells me that in unpacking his grip the other day she shook out of the coat of the pajamas some pieces of a telegram. As I figure it, the pajamas were his own. He probably had them on when he effected the exchange."

I nodded assent. All I had retained of my own clothing was the suit of pajamas I was wearing and my bath robe.
"Therefore the telegram was his, not yours. I have pieces here, but some are missing. I am not discouraged, however."

He spread out some bits of yellow paper, and we bent over them curiously. It was something like this:
Man with p— Get—
Br—
We spelled it out slowly.

"Now," Hotchkiss announced, "I make it something like this: The 'p' is one of two things, pistol—you remember the little pearl-handled affair belonging to the murdered man—or it is pocketbook. I am inclined to the latter view, as the pocketbook had been disturbed and the pistol had not."

I took the piece of paper from the table and scrawled four words on it. "Now," I said, rearranging them, "it happens, Mr. Hotchkiss, that I found one of these pieces of the telegram on the train. I thought it had been dropped by some one else, you see, but that's immaterial. Arranged this way it almost makes sense. Fill out that 'p' with the rest of the word, as I imagine it, and it makes 'papers,' and add this scrap and you have:

"Man with papers (in) lower ten, car seven. Get (them)."

McKnight slapped Hotchkiss on the back. "You're a trump," he said. "Br— is Bronson, of course. It's almost too easy. You see, Mr. Blakeley here engaged lower ten, but found it occupied by the man who was later murdered there. The man who did the thing was a friend of Bronson's, evidently, and in trying to get the papers we have the motive for the crime."

"There are still some things to be explained." Mr. Hotchkiss wiped his glasses and put them on. "For one thing, Mr. Blakeley, I am puzzled by that bit of chain."

I did not glance at McKnight. I felt that the hands with which I was gathering up the bits of torn paper were shaking. It seemed to me that this astute little man was going to drag in the girl in spite of me.

ICE DAMAGING PAVING.
Brick Streets at Mason City Heaved by Moisture.
Mason City, Feb. 24.—What effect the ice and accumulation of snow will have upon the brick pavement is a matter that is just now giving the city officers and some others a good deal of annoyance from the worry microbe.

New Trial in Moore Case.
Mason City, Feb. 24.—The motion of the defendants for a new trial in the case of Cleo Moore against the Mason City & Clear Lake Railway Company, was granted by Judge J. J. Clark. The new trial was asked on the grounds of new evidence and several other minor errors in the previous trial of the case which in themselves did not constitute grounds for another trial, but the court held that taken with the last motion were sufficient.

It will be remembered that Cleo Moore was awarded $7,500 damages at the first trial last fall for injuries received.

TO STOP A COUGH IN A HURRY.

With this recipe you can make a pint of cough remedy at home in five minutes. A few doses usually conquer the most obstinate cough. Simple as it is, no better remedy can be had at any price.

Put 3/4 oz. of Pinex (50 cents worth) in a clean pint bottle, and fill up with Granulated Sugar Syrup, made as follows: Take a pint of Granulated Sugar, add 1/2 pint of warm water and stir for 2 minutes. Take a teaspoonful every one two or three hours. The taste is very pleasant—children take it willingly. Splendid, too, for colds, chest pains, whooping cough, bronchitis, etc.

Granulated Sugar makes the best syrup. Pinex, as you probably know, is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway White Pine Extract. None of the weaker pine preparations will take its place. If your druggist hasn't the real Pinex, he can easily get it for you.

Strained honey can be used instead of the syrup, and makes a very fine honey and pine tar cough syrup.

word gets to Mrs. Klopton that Mr. Blakeley was wrecked, or whatever it was, with a button missing and a hole in one sock, she'll retire to the Old Ladies' home. I've heard her threaten it."

"I think the identity of the man is established," he said. "What number of hat do you wear, Mr. Blakeley?"
"Seven and a quarter," I replied.

"Well, it's only piling up evidence," he said cheerfully. "On the night of the murder you wore gray silk underclothing, with the second button of the shirt missing. Your hat had 'L. B.' in gilt letters inside, and there was a very minute hole in the toe of one black sock."

"Hush," McKnight protested. "I word gets to Mrs. Klopton that Mr. Blakeley was wrecked, or whatever it was, with a button missing and a hole in one sock, she'll retire to the Old Ladies' home. I've heard her threaten it."

"That's what I mean," I said; "split to kindling wood because Rafferty, on the second section, didn't want to be late."

"He put his hand out in front of him, and the match fell with a bang."

"My God!" he said, and dropped right on the track in a heap.

"I got him into the station and he came around, but he kept on growning something awful. He'd sprained his ankle, and when he got a little better I drove him over to Carter's milk wagon to the Carter place, and I reckon he stayed there a spell."

"That's all, is it?" I asked.

"That's all—or, no, there's something else. About noon that day one of the Carter twins came down with a note from him asking me to send a long-distance message to some one in Washington."

"To whom?" I asked eagerly.

"I reckon I've got the name, but the message was that this fellow—Sullivan was his name—was at M—, and if the man had escaped from the
