NUMBER 112

INSURGENCY'S CAUSE NEEDS NO APOLOGY

SENATORS DOLLIVER AND CUMMINS ADDRESS 10,000 IOWA REPUBLICANS.

TARIFF BILL AND ALDRICHISM REVEALED IN TRUE LIGHT

Senior Senator Devotes Address to Showing Weaknesses of Revenue Law—Cummings Pleads for Progressive Support and Election of Garst, Byers and Others.

Special to Times-Republican.

Des Moines, May 11.—It was a glorious day yesterday for the republicans of Iowa, who stand by the party platform and believe in the fulfillment of all party pledges. They flocked to town in great numbers. They all wore big smiles. They told, not of fears and disappointments, but of news of success and assurances of better things.

"I don't know when I can get back again," said Senator Cummings, "but it will be just as soon as possible. However, it looks to me like there is not much need of my taking part in the campaign. You people are fully alive to the situation. You are doing business. I don't see that I can add anything to the campaign."

Senator Cummings was told that the work he has been doing in congress in recent weeks has been making more speeches he might make in Iowa.

Governor Larrabee sent him a word of cheer. "I hope our people," he wrote, "will turn out and show their appreciation of the work done by our Abraham Lincoln republicans in congress to restore our government to the control of the people."

And they did turn out. They came from all over Iowa. One could not mingle with them without discovering that they are unusually confident; in fact, that their confidence is well grounded and sincere and not in the least assumed. Everyone had a story to tell of how the progressive movement is gaining, of men who formerly held back who are now on the firing line, of voters who confess they had all along misunderstood the situation, of farmers and business men and young men who are now for the first time fully committed to the movement which in Iowa made Cummins an idol and which in the nation has given Roosevelt his strength.

The meeting last night was a grand success. The feeling among the progressive leaders is that it will practically make it unanimous, and that while it was already certain that the senators would be endorsed by the vote of the republicans it is now equally certain that the vote will be emphatic and positive.

A Magnificent Audience.

Before an audience which filled every seat in the mammoth coliseum, Senators Dolliver and Cummings addressed the cause of insurgency, made no apologies for their actions in the senate, and urged the necessity of making the entire Iowa delegation to congress progressive, as well as the state administration.

Senator Dolliver spoke first. He was introduced by Harvey Ingham, who had been presented by Robert J. Fleming, chairman of the Dolliver-Cummings-Garst progressive republican committee.

Senator Dolliver dwelt at length on the Iowa situation. He took up the charges against the Iowa Taft club, asserting that the club is laboring behind a mask. He invited open battle, but defied the effort of this organization to labor to condemn him under false pretenses.

He came out vigorously in support of the progressive candidates for congress and for Governor Garst. To be consistent the people of Iowa should send a solid progressive delegation to the national assembly, he said, as well as place a supporter of progressive principles in the gubernatorial chair.

He, too, spoke of his actions in the senate in opposition to administration bills and asserted that he had no apology to make. The measures contained such vicious provisions, he asserted, that it was impossible to lend support to them as they stood, so he asserted.

The enthusiasm of the meeting was intense. The senators were greeted with a great ovation when they stepped upon the platform and again when each speaker was introduced. Their talks were punctuated by the applause of the vast assemblage.

Aldrich Hit Hard.

Senator Dolliver drew a line connecting Senator Aldrich with the Guggenheim and Thomas P. Ryan in the organization of the International Rubber Company. He told in detail the story of the organization of the rubber monopoly and read from its charter, issued under the New Jersey laws, which gives it the right to mine coal among other functions and which, the senator said, recalled the recent Guggenheim Alaska scandal. Senator Penrose, second on the senate's finance committee, was said by Senator Dolliver to be one of the moving spirits in the copper trust.

Such men, he said, should not be permitted to have lead, zinc and household necessities, to exercise the power to regulate the interests of the public and to assume leadership in the republican party.

As the two Iowa senators gave their reasons for the action they have taken in Washington the cheering interrupted them from time to time, and when Senator Cummings, the last speaker, concluded his address, such a throng pressed around the national law makers that it was with difficulty that they made their way outside the building to a waiting automobile in time to be whirled away to the train which carried them on their way to Washington to continue their fight against the Aldrich machine in the senate.

Enthusiasm unmeasured greeted the Iowa senators on their appearance in Des Moines last night. From the moment when Robert J. Fleming arose to call the meeting to order until the last word of Senator Cummings' speech had fallen from his lips the great audience—larger than any that ever before assembled in Iowa to hear a political speech—sought opportunities to show their appreciation and voice their indorsement of the speakers' sentiments.

Want Iowa Support.

It was not alone to explain their course in the senate, however, but to urge upon the people of Iowa the desirability of electing progressives to the offices that are within the gift of the voters who have given the senators their hurried trip from Washington to Des Moines and back again. Warren Garst for governor and such men as S. F. Prouty, H. W. Byers, John Darrah and S. W. Brookhart for congress received the fullest indorsement of the senators, and time and again their names were repeated, each time bringing forth rounds of enthusiastic applause.

The crowd that attended last night's meeting was the largest audience that has gathered inside Des Moines' new Coliseum since its completion, or at any indoor political meeting in Iowa. Before the doors were thrown open at 6:30 o'clock the people had begun to congregate on the street. Police and ushers kept the lines moving into the big auditorium from 6:30 until long after the speaking began an hour later. It was estimated that fully 10,000 people heard the addresses. Progressive leaders were present from every section of the state, and the people of Des Moines and of Polk county were out en masse.

The meeting set a record in the political annals of Iowa, not only in point of attendance but, progressively believed, in the wide significance of the event and its influence upon politics in Iowa. The two men who represent Iowa in the nation's highest law-making body dropped their work at Washington for five days in order to make a flying trip to their home state and appear before their constituents to give an account of their work in the senate. Further, they came to ask that, if the state appreciates the work an indorsement be accorded the senators by the nomination of progressives for offices and the selection of delegates who will, in the coming convention, express the state's desire to see the policies of the progressives prevail in congress.

First Time at Same Meeting.

Both of the senators commented upon the fact that this is the first time they have been together upon the same platform espousing the progressive cause. Mr. Dolliver first called attention to this fact, and the reference brought forth a storm of enthusiastic applause.

"It is a pleasure for me to appear at this same meeting and on the same platform with my colleague in the United States senate," said the senior senator. "I am especially glad to be with him on the same platform because it has never happened before. It has, in the past, been my duty to fight for persons, but this time I am fighting for the cause of the people and for the principles which lie at the basis of the republican party. And I am not embarrassed, as one once covered Iowa editor has said I would be, to find myself on the platform together with my colleague."

Applause interrupted Mr. Dolliver here and when it had ceased he continued: "I said I was not fighting for persons, but this is a matter concerning, also, the people who have come forward to bear the standards of the progressive cause in Iowa. I fight for them, because they stand for the principles which I espouse."

Cheers For Garst.

"I don't tell you why I support Warren Garst for governor of the commonwealth of Iowa," the mention of the progressive candidate's name brought the people to their feet and they cheered long and loudly for the gubernatorial candidate.

"I have been drawn to Garst's support," Mr. Dolliver declared, "because from the beginning I have had his help, his sympathy, his indorsement and his co-operation in the fight I have been trying to make for good government of these United States."

SENATOR DOLLIVER'S SPEECH.

Touches Upon Tariff Question and Shows Up Aldrich.

Senator Dolliver said in part: "It is a great pleasure to me to have the opportunity of participating with you in this extraordinary Iowa mass meeting. I don't mind confessing to you that I have made some sacrifices to get to this Iowa tonight. I not only had to break from the sergeant-at-arms but I also had to become a fugitive from the doctor who has had my case in hand. And after a long time I persuaded him to let me come, on the grounds that the Iowa air and the new Iowa politics would do for me what he has been so far unable to do."

"I have been confused a little in reading the Iowa newspapers as to the real character of this meeting. I understood from the careful perusal which I gave to the columns of the papers that there were some who thought this was to be a god roads convention, and I do not intend to altogether ignore the fact that there is a sense in which it is a good roads convention, and I do not me tonight, else the broad road to destruction."

"I find especial pleasure in speaking in the home city and from the same platform with my colleague in the senate of the United States. With him I share the responsibility of representing

BIG BALLOON VIKING COLLAPSES IN AIR

AERONAUT FORGES AND SCIENTIST YATES FOUND UNCONSCIOUS IN WRECKAGE.

YATES FATALLY HURT, FORBES' CONDITION SERIOUS

Men Conscious Only at Intervals and Unable to Explain Cause of Accident—Were Trying for Distance Record—Ballon Wrecked Beyond Repair—Forbes Holder of Lahm Cup.

Glasgow, Ky., May 11.—Bearing numerous cuts and bruises and possibly internal injuries, and with only occasional periods of any approach to consciousness, A. Holland Forbes, of New York, holder of the Lahm trophy, and J. C. Yates, a New York astronomer who accompanied him in the flight against the balloon distance record, are near death in a farm house six miles north of Center, which is about twenty miles from this city. The balloon Viking is a mangled tangled silk and cords, torn beyond repair.

The men ascended Monday night at Quincy, Ill. During intervals when the aeronauts were partially conscious neither of them could explain the accident yesterday, but it is believed that gas escaping from the big bag caused them to lose control of the Viking and that the gap enlarged until the drop followed.

Balloon Seen to Collapse.

The balloon was first sighted south of Center about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Those who saw it could discern no passengers and suspected that something was wrong. It was going at the rate of five miles per hour. As it moved over Center and to the north it appeared to be settling toward the ground, when suddenly the bag collapsed and the dash to earth followed. Shortly after 6 o'clock farmers reached the spot where the balloon had fallen in a field. They freed the two apparently dead bodies and carried them to the nearest farm house, where restoratives were administered. It was not until several hours later that Forbes showed signs of returning consciousness and he rallied only for a few minutes at a time. He seemed to have no knowledge of what happened. Yates was aroused only for a few moments, but like Forbes was unable to give any details.

Forbes Will Recover.

This morning physicians in attendance upon Forbes and Yates returned from the call to Center and report that Forbes' injuries are not serious, and that while they are uncertain about Yates' injuries, they believe there is a chance for him to recover. Both men are still conscious only at intervals. Forbes during his conscious moments made disconnected statements, declaring the balloon had passed over portions of Illinois, Missouri, Tennessee and Kentucky. He said they were over Illinois yesterday morning. He failed to say what happened to the balloon, but an incoherent statement about the leakage of gas caused some of the country people who heard about them to declare that aeronauts had been overcome by escaping gas from the balloon, but the supposition was hardly borne out by anything Forbes said.

Fell With Great Force.

What appears certain was that control of the balloon was lost in some manner and that it drifted until its buoyancy was so far spent that a gust of wind or sudden loss of gas sent it downward with great force.

Balloon Ripped Open.

Forbes said he lost control of the balloon yesterday afternoon, and attempting to land, pulled the rip cord. The entire side of the balloon was ripped open, causing the bag to descend with great rapidity. Yates' condition is still serious.

Extra medical assistance for Forbes and Yates, the injured aeronauts, was hastily summoned this afternoon. Both are said to be so badly injured they could not sit up in bed or talk, except briefly.

Remote From Railroad.

Center, Ky., May 11.—The aeronauts are at Bruce's Hill, remote from either wire or rail communication, and messengers have been sent from here to ascertain particulars of the accident and to learn what aid the injured men need. No estimation of the cause of the catastrophe has yet been received.

Yates Fatally Hurt.

Louisville, May 11.—A telephone message from Glasgow at ten o'clock this morning was to the effect that Yates is injured internally and it is feared fatally.

Hartford, Conn., May 11.—John W. Foster, former secretary of state, delivered an address here today before the New England arbitration and peace congress on the subject that war is not inevitable. Illustrating from the history of the United States, Foster raised the question whether it was reasonable to expect peace among the nations of the earth and stated that the prevailing answer to the question would be in the negative. He combated at length this negative position as to arbitration, and reviewed the relations of the United
