Francis Starr in "The Easiest Way."
 David Belasco will present Frances Starr in the remarkably successful play by Eugene Walter "The Easiest Way," at the New Odeon Saturday evening. Miss Starr will have for her support a company of rare merit, and the scenery and equipment will be identical with that provided by David Belasco for the run of the play at the Belasco theater in New York. The central figure of the play is a pleasure loving woman who is finally faced with an opportunity to begin a new and better life. The arrest of part of the play deals with her efforts to break off the old ties and associations and take up with the new. Unusual as the play is from many points of view it is particularly notable for the manner in which it is interpreted. Frances Starr has achieved a brilliant success as Laura Murdoch. The scenes of the four acts are laid upon the rolling foothills of the eastern slope of the Rockies; in a typical west side theatrical boarding house; in a fashionable apartment house in the metropolis. Prices $2, $1.50, $1, 75 and 50 cents.

AMUSEMENTS.
 "Seven Days," an Uproarious Farce, Pleasue Odeon Audience.
 "Seven Days," a farce comedy by Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood, presented by a Washington cast, was presented for the first time at the Odeon Thursday night to rather a small audience. The production generally pleased and its ludicrous situations caused uproarious laughter. In many respects it is one of the best farce comedies ever staged at the Odeon in many months.
 The play is bright and clean, the situations are clever even the some of them are impossible, and the dialog is keen with humor. The company that presented it was thoroughly good.
 The action of the play takes place in the New York house of James Wilson, who is giving a little dinner late at night. Before it begins a burglar enters the house and when the guests arrive he is unable to get out. Wilson has been divorced for a year, and during the little social affair he receives a telegram announcing the coming of his Aunt Selina, his financial mainstay, who is puritanical in her hatred for divorce. The aunt is not aware of her nephew being divorced and to keep this unpleasant news from her, Wilson induces one of his guests, Miss Kit McNair, to take the role of his wife during the aunt's visit.
 During the aunt's stay the divorced wife, who is evidently drawn to the house by the desire to see her ex-husband, drops in. Then the guests learn that a Jap servant has been taken away sick with the smallpox, and the occupants, including the burglar, are quarantined. A policeman, who was visiting the cook, who however, made her escape, is quarantined with the rest. The burglar is hard put to escape detection and in his efforts to do so he becomes the "control" of Mrs. Anna Brown, one of the guests, who has spiritualistic tendencies.
 The period of quarantine is seven days, and naturally the unnatural conditions existing in the household with the divorced wife, her ex-husband and his alleged wife, and the latter's former lover, call for some complications which are plentifully supplied.
 There is no star part in the cast, but all of the principals were capable and supplied an abundance of comedy, however nonsensical some of it may have been.
 Mr. Clifford Hipple was the divorced husband, James Wilson, and his divorced wife, Mrs. Bella Knowles, was taken by Mary and the fine Anna Little made an excellent Aunt Selina. William O'Day was cast as Officer Fannagan and Miss Emily Callaway, as Kit McNair, posed as Wilson's wife. Miss Jean Patriquin was Mrs. Anna Brown, she of the "control" and the wife of Dallas Brown, who was impersonated by Scottie Monroe. Charles Martin, in the part of Tom Harrison was the disappointed lover of the imprudent Mrs. Wilson.
 To the Voters of Marshall County.
 Your support at the coming election will be greatly appreciated.
 I favor greater consideration of the people's interest in public affairs which should be conducted in the same manner as any good business man would conduct his own private business.
 Reverence for the law and the enforcement of the same is essential to our well-being. Candidate for county recorder, William Clemens.
