

A Word from Mr. Rogers on Free Watch Insurance

He Explains How He Insures His Customers Against Any Cost for Watch Repairs for One Year's Time.

Some time ago I was showing one of my friends through our Watch Repair Department.

I showed him the high class of work we did and showed him how we burnished the watch cases and how we damaskeened and refinished the movements.

I showed him how, after a watch left the hands of our experts, it was practically new.

The visitor seemed to be much impressed and he made the remark that a watch, after it passed the hands of our watch experts, was practically new.

He suggested that we insure the watch against any disability for one year's time.

He told me that it was absolutely safe; that work such as we turned out would stand up perfectly a year and a whole lot longer.

After thinking the matter over carefully, I concluded that I would go him one better.

I resolved to insure the watches sent us for repairs not only against any disability but also against accident of any kind.

In other words, we do for your watch just exactly what the fire insurance company is doing for your house, and this we do absolutely free of charge.

Now, just a word as to the men who compose our Watch Repair Department.

Our Chief watch expert is a man who was formerly connected with Tiffany & Co. of New York City.

Under him we have gathered together the greatest aggregation of watch repair experts in the country.

Each is a specialist trained and skilled in some one step in the art of watch repairing. That is why we turn out work that is second to none in the country.

They often ask me whether any delay is caused by sending the watch into the central department for repairs.

I can answer this question easily. No, absolutely no.

None of our stores are more than a night's ride out of Chicago. It takes less than twelve hours to get the watch from the store into our central department.

When your watch reaches us it is instantly delivered to the Chief, who looks over the watch, finds out what the nature of the trouble may be and the repairs needed.

The watch is then handed over to that man who is skilled in this particular kind of work.

Every job is done within twenty-four hours after it reaches this department.

Our experts here are in a position to regulate a watch to keep perfect time in twelve hours.

Twelve hours more are required to send the watch back to the store, thus giving our customers a service that requires about Three Days.

Another question that I am often asked is whether this expert service is very expensive.

Let me say right here that this expert service costs you no more. We charge nothing for our insuring your watch nor do we charge anything for polishing the case or damaskeening and refishing the movement.

All this is yours at the price commonly charged for ordinary workmanship.

This is our method of advertising.

After you have tried many watchmakers and they have failed, just bring your watch to us, and if we fail, you will receive the $1,000 we offer.

OMAHA LADS ARE "FOXY."

Give Assumed Names to Police Who Are Holding Them.

The trio of little Omaha boys, ranging in ages from 5 to 10 years, who were taken from the "head end" of a baggage car on the east-bound North-western train by officers Hunt and Thursday morning, although young, are wise to ways of the world. When asked for their names and street addresses by chief of Police W. E. Nicholson, they gave assumed names and addresses. These names and addresses were asked to learn if the boys had run away from home. A telegram received Friday in reply says that none of the boys live at the addresses given. Confronted with this information the boys this morning said that their correct names were Elmer Grove, 2415 South First street; Harry Bowman, 2428 South Eighteenth street; and Fred Compton, 2415 South Twenty-second street. A second telegram, containing these names, was sent to the Omaha police, and a reply was received to hold Bowman and let the others go.

WARMTH FIRST CONSIDERATION.

In Making Winter Garments We Do Not Sacrifice Warmth For Style.

The ideal winter overcoat combines style and warmth. Those who depend solely on style to make their heads all their efforts to that end and can naturally offer their work at low prices. As a result the wearer is pleased with his overcoat for a few days of fair weather. But when the winter blasts strike him he begins to wonder what is wrong. Then is the time that he desires comfort rather than style. Penelock has combined both warmth and style in shaping his overcoats. You get all that you could expect from the average tailor and much more, too. Every garment is made to keep you warm and at the same time is built according to the latest approved styles. See Penelock and you will get the kind of a coat you want.

AFTER LOWER RATES

Marshall Oil Company, of This City, to Appear Before Interstate Commerce Commission at Kansas Hearing in Effort to Secure Lower Rates.

At a hearing of the interstate commerce commission, which begins Monday at Chanute, Kan., and the outcome of which will be of great interest to Kansas shippers, and particularly the oil industry, the Marshall Oil Company will appear as one of the chief complainants. Frank E. Lockwood, traffic manager for the company, leaves for Chanute tonight, to appear before the commission in behalf of the local company.

The company is seeking especially to secure a reduction in rates from Kansas oil refining points to Nebraska territory, and especially to Lincoln, Neb. Much of the oil the company distributes from its Lincoln branch is purchased of Kansas refineries. The claim has been set up that the rates between the states are too high and are against the Kansas shippers.

Celebrated Star in Henri Bernstein's French Play

MARGARET ILLINGTON. Celebrated Star Who is to Appear for the First Time in This City Monday Night in "The Whirlwind."

Margaret Illington, the celebrated actress who will make her first appearance in Marshalltown to the Odeon Monday night in Henri Bernstein's "The Whirlwind," is one of the best known of the younger women before the American theater-going public. Her re-entrance into her profession, after an absence of two years, caused some comment from the fact that, when she secured a divorce from Daniel Frohman, the prominent New York producing manager, it was announced that she had retired from the stage for all time.

Miss Illington is 29 years old, and a native of Bloomington, Ill. Her maiden name was Maude Light. She studied dramatic art in Chicago as a girl, and her professional debut was made in a small part in "The Prides of Jenico," with James K. Hackett in Daniel Frohman's company. Subsequently she played the leading role in that romantic drama. After playing leading roles for a few years, including an engagement with E. H. Sothern, she created, in 1905, the leading role in "The Japanese Nightingale." She was also the creator of the part of Mrs. Leffingwell in Augustus Thomas' comedy, "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots." She played the character of Shirley Rosemore in "The Lion and the Mouse," and went with an especially selected company to appear in that play in London. In 1907 she appeared as joint star with Kyrie Bellew in Henri Bernstein's "The Thief," that being her last engagement before retiring temporarily from the stage.

Miss Illington has a gorgeous production, and one set of her scenery is said to be the most elaborate and expensive ever carried by a road company.
