NEW TRAFFIC MANAGER OF CENTRAL AND M. & ST. L. MOVES FROM CHICAGO.

ALL WILL BE BACK TO OLD HAUNTS BY DEC. 10

New Offices of Department Will Be in Metropolitan Life Building—Some of the Employees Will Be Stationed at Cedar Lake, Rather Than at General Offices.

S. G. Lutz, the newly appointed traffic manager of the Iowa Central and Minneapolis & St. Louis railroads, together with a large number of his office force, reached Minneapolis from Chicago Monday, according to advices received by the Times-Republican today.

Mr. Lutz's department will be housed on the eleventh floor of the Metropolitan Life building.

Mr. Lutz was recently appointed traffic manager of the two Hawley lines, the change from general freight agent of the two roads named above and the Clover Leaf and Alton, having been made Nov. 1. Mr. Lutz has been in Chicago for little over a year, or since the consolidation of the Hawley western lines was put into effect.

All of the working force of the traffic department will be moved back to Minneapolis, and the employees will all be back in their old haunts again by Dec. 10. Some of the employees will be stationed at the Cedar Lake offices, instead of at the general offices of the companies.

AMUSEMENTS.

Margaret Illington Appears in Bernstein's "The Whirlwind."

Margaret Illington, one of the foremost ranking stars among the younger American women on the stage, made her first appearance in Marshalltown at the Odson Monday night before a good sized audience in Henri Bernstein's "The Whirlwind," an Americanized dramatization of "Baccarat."

Much was expected of Miss Illington and her company, and there was no disappointment in the production, considered from any viewpoint. The average theatergoer would not select from choice a play like "The Whirlwind," yet one can not help admiring the artistic in dramatic art, despite the fact that the subject matter is devoid of business.

Helene Brechebel, a man disaffected to her and much her senior, to gratify the whims of her father, who longs for social position and to move among the aristocracy. Helene, clandestinely loves Robert de Clavignon, a wild cat and sporting man whose penchant for gambling has lost him 500,000 francs in a single night. To make matters worse de Clavignon's loss was not his own money, but that of business associates. De Clavignon must make the loss good or submit to arrest. Helene, in the face of the debt, and sets out to raise the money. She tries her father, but the process is too slow. She appeals to her father, who divulges the real purpose, and openly accuses his daughter of wanting it for her lover. In desperation Helene turns to her cousin, Andre LeBourc, who had sought Helene's hand years before. LeBourc finally consents to negotiate the loan, providing his price is forthcoming, and Helene compromises herself to gain her end and Helene, not waiting Robert to know where the money comes from, arranges with her lover to deliver the amount. De Clavignon, never once thinking that he would raise the large amount, plans his death by suicide. He makes his final arrangements, and steps from his parlor to his bedroom. Helene and the jeweler arrive with the money. Helene so happy and bearing roses with which to decorate her lover's room. She thinks de Clavignon, dressing for a dinner engagement with her, when a revolver shot from the bedroom rings out the end of Robert de Clavignon. The curtain descends on Helene, hysterically sobbing at the locked door of her lover's bedroom.

In "The Whirlwind" Bernstein has built two strong and stirring climaxes, directly opposite in character. One ends the second act in the stormy scene between Helene and her father; the other is all quietude, closing the last act.

Miss Illington's presentation of Helene was in every way finished. She rose to her emotional scenes most artistically, and especially strong was the scene with her father, during her plea for the money to save her lover. Walter Edwards, as de Clavignon, also gave a very finished characterization. Charles Stockard was most satisfactory as Baron LeBourc, and the cast was well balanced throughout.

Miss Illington's production is elaborate and complete. The set for the first and second act is unusually rich.

Rev. Mr. Stauffacher's opening sermon was on "Qualifications For the Work," and proved an earnest appeal for consecration to the work of the meetings, which are expected to continue for two or three weeks. The young pastor made a strong impression upon his audience.

Before taking up his work at Zearing Mr. Stauffacher was pastor at Waterloo. He is president of the young people's organization of the conference, and has had years of experience in christian work.

In anticipation of the revival meetings Rev. J. E. Stauffacher and his people have been holding cottage prayer meetings during the past two weeks. The meetings at the church will be held nightly beginning at 7:30.

The judicial committee to have it investigated. Other councilmen said the bill had been up before, and that until the city paid the county would not come across with its $4,000 for the city dam. This phase of the case undoubtedly influenced the vote and the bills were allowed. Herman and Hill voting against them.

Do not fail to hear the world's greatest violinist.

OLE THEOBALDI, the wizard of the violin, will appear at Marshalltown on his last tour in America, TUESDAY, DEC. 6, at the CENTRAL CHURCH OF CHRIST. Mr. Theobaldi has played for the people of MARSHALLTOWN twice before. The first time at the Congregational church, the second time, April 6, last spring, at the Methodist church under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. He drew a larger audience than any number on the lecture course last year, and all who heard him were more than pleased with his artistic way of handling the violin. But there are a vast number of people in our city who have not heard him. Now is your opportunity. Do not let this unusual treat go by.

Theobaldi is able to imitate the sounds of a great number of animals, such as birds, sheep, horses, the weeping at the death bed of Aase, different musical instruments and even a whole brass band. Come and hear him and be convinced. He uses the Ole Bull method and has one of his violins, made in the year 1592.
