ESCAPES; ENTERS HOME.

Ed Peterson Gets Away From Stone Pile and Creates Excitement.

Escaping from the stone pile guard, Victor Liebig, Friday, Ed Peterson, a thirty day jail prisoner, left the city and went to the R. L. Crabtree home, four miles southwest of the city, where he broke in, ransacked the house, and confronted the family with a knife and revolver when they returned home.

Peterson offered to do no violence, and when commanded by Mr. Crabtree to drop the weapons, did so. Deputy Sheriff C. C. Bratt and Officer Charles Breckel went to the Crabtree home about 8 o'clock at night, arrested Peterson, and returned him to the city jail. The officers say Peterson is laboring under some mental delusion and is not normal mentally. They regard him as harmless, but the episode nevertheless created some excitement in the Crabtree neighborhood.

The Crabtree family met Peterson while coming to town in the afternoon. When they went to enter the house Peterson stood apparently guarding the entrance with a knife in one hand and a revolver in the other. When he disarmed himself the family entered and summoned the officers. They found that he had gone thru the house, pulled out drawers and ransacked their contents and created disorder generally throughout the house. Nothing was found to be missing. It had not been determined whether an additional charge would be filed against Peterson or not. He had served a few days of a thirty-day sentence for vagrancy.
