LOADED DECREES SET FOR HEARING

APPEAL TAKEN UNDER SALOON INJUNCTIONS TO COME UP SOON IN SUPREME COURT.

PROPERTY OWNERS AND SALOONISTS SEEK ESCAPE

Want to Get Out From Under Effect of Decrees Issued By Judge J. M. Parker Against the Gifford and Other Saloons, After Attorneys Had Agreed to Them.

The decrees and injunctions issued by Judge J. M. Parker and by the consent of the attorneys representing the Gifford and other saloons, which it later developed contained a "gold brick" are to come up for hearing before the state supreme court during the session which begins April 4. Briefs and arguments have been filed and service was secured on the local attorneys interested today.

The special object in the appeal, which was taken by the attorneys representing the property owners as well as the saloonists, is to have the real estate involved released from the decrees, the judgment under which was made a special lien upon them for the costs and the attorney fees. These cases were involved with others in the unsuccessful attempt that was made by Ben Salinger, of Carroll, to secure a stay order from the United States supreme court pending an appeal.

Errors Complain of. Charles M. Forney is the property owner involved in the up-town Gifford saloon. The principal error complained of in the appeal from the lower court's decree is that judgment was rendered against Forney without his having been in court, and that judgment was rendered against his property for costs and for closing the premises by abatement without his having had an opportunity to defend his property and without proof sufficient to sustain such a judgment. The estate is to be represented at the hearing before the supreme court by Mr. C. A. Robbins, special counsel of the attorney general's office.

CASE WILL BE DROPPED.

Costs Are Paid and Lilly Will Not Prosecute Suit Further. The case begun in Justice Millard's court against W. H. Samuels, C. E. Blentlinger, and H. L. Dobson by P. L. Lilly, and in which evidence was taken, will not be prosecuted further by Mr. Lilly, according to the latter's attorney. The costs that have been incurred in the case thus far were paid by Mr. Lilly, following the settlement reached by the return of property and money involved in the transaction on which the case was brought. It was said this morning that when the case was called next Monday, the date fixed in the continuance, that Mr. Lilly would not appear to prosecute.

Dobson in No Way to Blame Says P. L. Lilly: "It was simply a mistake in the action that I brought to recover my deed and money. It was told me it would be necessary to make Mr. Dobson one of the defendants and I want to state frankly that I am sure it was only a mistake in the location in the property. I know Mr. Dobson to be a gentleman of the highest type and would not knowingly do a wrong act. I also believe Mr. Blentlinger and Samuels, although strangers to me, were sincere in the matter when they gave me the wrong deed, thinking that they gave me deed to the property that I looked at." P. L. Lilly.

"The Third Degree." "The Third Degree," Charles Klein's latest play on a topic of the moment, will be seen here at the New Odeon Saturday, matinee and night. Much favorable comment has fallen to this play during the past year, and it is not straining a point to assume that public attention has been unusually attracted to Mr. Klein's clever work, by reason of the publicity gained thru the use of "the third degree" by the New York police, where the play ran for seven months and during which period Commissioner Bingham, head of the police department, owing to the proven brutality which he used toward subjects, was forced to resign, and to which the New York papers attributed the Klein play as having caused the uprising that ended in his being impeached.

The story of "The Third Degree" reveals a deep study in psychology. Howard Jeffries Jr. has been severed from his aristocratic family because of his marriage to a shop girl of noble intention. On the night of Howard's visit to a college chum and debtor, in quest of a loan, the friend kills himself while the benedict sleeps in an adjoining room. The police arrive before Howard hears the cause of the visit and he is put thru a severe third degree inquiry by a dogging police official, until he confesses his guilt. The fight of Howard's wife, Annie, for her husband's life, proves that her real womanly nature has escaped the shortsight of her narrow-minded father-in-law. Her path is strewn with thorns until she outwits her opposing factors.

"The Third Degree" is an intensely human play, filled with true-to-life characters, supplied with bright lines and snappy situations by the author. As Annie Jeffries, Sarah Padden has the best role of her career. She is ably supported by Ralph Ramsey, H. H. Forsman, Raymond Wells, Arda La Croix, Harry Farnham, Grace Lord, Joseph Garry, Florence Pendleton and others.

"BIG WEDNESDAY" DISTINCT SUCCESS

MERCHANTS GREATLY PLEASED OVER FIRST TRIAL AT TRADE EXTENSION PLAN.

SIMILAR BARGAIN DAY TO BE PROMOTED SOON

Many People Here From Out of Town to Trade, and Attraction Was Real Bargains Put on By Merchants—Stores Thronged With People, and Great Majority Were Buyers.

The first trial of the "Big Wednesday" plan of extending retail trade, as adopted by the retail trade committee of the Marshalltown Club, proved a distinct success yesterday, and as a result of the general feeling that exists among the merchants plans will be made at once for the promotion of a similar day of bargains for next month.

A great many out-of-town people were in the city Wednesday to trade, attracted solely by the bargains offered. Bargains arranged by merchants to attract buyers proved to be genuine bargains—something in which people were given more than their money's worth as an inducement to buy. A feature of the bargain day was that the majority of people who thronged the stores were actual buyers, and not attracted as sightseers.

Trade Begins Early. The different retail stores in all lines were crowded all day Wednesday, the buying beginning early, and lasting all day. Many of the dealers report the best single day's business since the holidays, and to some of the newer firms of the city, it was the best day they have experienced since opening.

While the merchants offered bargains that would in themselves attract buyers, arrangements were made with the managements of the different moving picture theaters of the city by which all persons presenting tickets given by the merchants would be admitted to the theaters. This resulted in the picture shows being crowded throughout the day.
