The Chef's Favorite
By Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, Editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine

3 C Chicken Pot Pie. Baked Dumplings
One level cup in joints; 4 cup flour; 1/2 teaspoonful salt; black pepper; 2 cups flour; 3 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder; 1/2 teaspoonful salt; 1/2 cup shortening; milk or cream.

Cover the fowl with boiling water and let simmer until tender, then remove to a baking dish. Mix the 1/2 cup flour, salt and black pepper with cold water to a smooth paste and use to thicken the broth. Remove the fat from the top of the broth if necessary before adding the thickening. Pour this gravy over the fowl, until it is nearly covered, and reserve the rest to serve apart. Sift together the flour, baking powder and salt, three times; into this work the shortening and use cream or milk to make a dough, less stiff than for biscuits. Put this by spoonfuls over the fowl in the dish, which it should rest upon and completely cover. Let bake about 35 minutes.

When young, tender chickens are served, this presents a most satisfactory way of securing old fowl. Veal or lamb prepared in this manner is more appetizing than when served as a stew. Try this and the 89 other delicious recipes in the K C Cook's Book, a copy which may be secured free by sending the colored certificate packed in the 25-cent can of K C Baking Powder to the Jacobs Mfg. Yours truly, H. I. HOOPER.

New Virginia, Va., Oct. 11, 1910. Dear Doctor: I had suffered with bleeding and protruding piles for years before consulting you, which I did at the advice of Mr. Hill, whom you had cured. When I first went to you, I suffered greatly. I am very glad to case any inquiries relative to my case. Yours truly, J. A. BATES.

DIVER FATALLY HURT

Young Man Miscalculates and Plunges Into Shallow Water. Special to Times-Republican.

Iowa City, July 13.—His fifth cervical vertebra fractured, and the spinal cord torn, Claude Harrington, a young mechanic of Oxford, aged 26, will probably die. He lives more than a few days, he will remain a paralytic. He was injured when he dived into a shallow portion of the Iowa river, near his native village. He leaped from the Hanging Rock bridge, north of Oxford, and descended about twenty feet. It was his intention to plunge into the depths of the Iowa, but miscalculated and thus came in violent contact, head first, with the bottom of the stream.

He was rendered unconscious, and was nearly drowned, as his companions did not know that he was hurt, until his prolonged submersion alarmed them. Investigation showed that he was near death and he was speedily rescued from the imperiling stream. Harrington was brought to the University hospital, and experts gave him skilled surgical treatment, but in vain. He was taken back to Oxford, and at this writing, is in a critical condition at the home of his mother, Mrs. S. S. Harrington, a widow of that village.

Surgeons fear that he will die within a few days. He is paralyzed below the shoulders, but is conscious.

He was injured by falling from the step of an East Sixth and Ninth street car near East Fourth and Locust streets. His head struck the pavement and he did not regain consciousness.

His suit case was opened at the police station and was found to contain a few private papers and letters bearing the name of Peter Christianson, Hampton, Iowa. Among the other papers was found his will and that of his wife. They were dated in July, 1909. The wife had left all her property, both personal and real, to her husband. Iowa Showing Interest in Raising of Prolific Hay Crop.

Des Moines, July 13.—Agitation in favor of growing alfalfa in Iowa had the effect of almost doubling the acreage planted in this crop in 1913 compared with 1912, according to reports which are being prepared by the Iowa department of agriculture to be published in the agricultural year book.

The acreage in alfalfa last year was 79,920 and the yield was 188,913 tons. The acreage in 1912 was 46,664 and the yield was 103,785 tons. The average per acre was 2.2 tons.

There are ten other counties which are large growers of alfalfa. The acreage in these counties shows a big increase in 1913 compared with 1912.

The report for 1913 shows the alfalfa acreage and yield in Blackhawk county was sixty-two acres and 116 tons. In 1912 the acreage in this crop in the ten counties having the highest acreage was as follows: Fremont, 3,888; Harrison, 5,959; Mills, 4,155; Monona, 9,223; Montgomery, 754; Page, 319; Plymouth, 2,221; Pottawattomie, 531; Shelby, 540; Sioux, 630; Woodbury, 4,991.

Epidemic There as Price of Husbands Goes Up.

The Statesman of this city prints the following paragraph: It appears that quite a new spirit has arisen among the girlhood of the Bengal race. Bengal has of late witnessed with astonishment akin to a feeling of reverence and admiration a number of cases of self-immolation of tender Bengal girls.

What this Hindu writer thus complacently describes is in reality a curious epidemic of suicide. It began some weeks ago with the self-destruction of a girl named Snehalata, whose father was about to mortgage his property in order to pay the purchase price of a husband for her.

The sum now demanded by the fathers of eligible boys in Bengal is ruinously high. The price of a Kayasth who has graduated may go up to 10,000 rupees ($3,300); 3,000-rupees is a quite usual demand, and even a matriculate can command 500 rupees. The enforcement of rate is due to the law of supply and demand. Girls must ordinarily be married before puberty, while the increasing requirement of education have led to the postponement of the boys. There is thus a diminishing supply is unobtainable.

The suicide of Snehalata, who poured kerosene oil over her clothing and set herself on fire, provoked an outburst of admiration among the marriage reformers and the fathers of marriageable girls. The natural result is that other young girls have followed the example of Snehalata, while it is common talk among school girls that when the time comes for their marriage they will sacrifice themselves in the same way.—Calcutta Cablegram.

COOK'S SLOPS ROUT NAVY.

Garbage Can Contents Let Fly Over Dominican Uniforms. None the worse for his experience, the Clyde liner Algonquin arrived the other morning from South American ports—from Puerto Plata, Santo Domingo, in particular. The Algonquin changed to ram its bow into the hottest part of the Santo Domingo revolution, and its officers had trouble keeping it from being riddled by the native "navy."

At Puerto Plata the entire besieging navy came puffing out and hid the Algonquin begone. It was a very formal visit, and as the little yachts scudded up alongside the big American vessel all the officers and crew, in all their Santo Domingo glory, were on deck stiffly saluting.

But the Clyde liner's cook did not know. His kitchen porthole opened over the rows of brilliant uniforms. With every-day precision the cook lifted his garbage can and let fly its contents over the representatives of official Santo Domingo. The deluge of slops could not be dodged—and it sent General Bordas' navy home in a huff.—New York Herald.

Japan Leads in Divorce.

There are, in proportion to the inhabitants, more divorces in the little island of Japan than in almost all the rest of the world put together. And Uncle Sam comes second.

There are, proportionately, more divorces in the United States than in Austria, Great Britain, France, Italy, Sweden, Norway, Belgium and Hungary combined. It is not a savory record, but it is a true one.

For every 100,000 inhabitants of Japan, 215 are divorced. For every 100,000 inhabitants of the United States seventy-three are divorced. Here are the figures for some other countries: Austria, one in 100,000; Great Britain, six of whom the Irish supply an annual average of less than one to the 100,000; France, twenty-three; Italy, three; Sweden, eight; Norway, six.

OUR LOTTERIES.

The first of the United States to suppress the lottery business was Massachusetts, under a law passed eighty-five years ago. Sporadic attempts to abolish this insidious form of gambling had previously been made by other American states and colonies, but they were not very successful owing to the popularity of the lotteries. The example of Massachusetts was speedily followed in other states, but it was not until twenty years ago that the last lottery in the United States was suppressed. The Louisiana state lottery was the last important institution of this kind to cater to the gambling instinct of Americans. Its charter expired in 1894, and a bitter fight was waged against its renewal. The lottery company offered the state $1,000,000 a year (double its former offer) for the privilege of continuing in business, but public sentiment was too strong, and the proposed constitutional amendment to continue the lottery was rejected by the voters at a state election.

James Mendenhall, the original owner of the north east quarter of the north east quarter of said section containing 47.70 acres in conveying the north east quarter thereof to Cyrus B. M., under which plaintiff acquired title; and that James Mendenhall, George A. Whitaker, John Shroyck, John A. Beel, Margaret Beel, B. N. Berry, Delos Arnold, Jane A. Barnes, Claude Barnes, Amelia Barnes, Mary Jane Farris, unknown heirs of all the above named defendants and all unknown claimants to said land and some part thereof, by some right adverse to the estate of the plaintiff therein, the names and residences of said persons being unknown to plaintiff and he has sought diligently to learn the same and demanding that plaintiff's title be established and quieted in him and that each and all of the defendants and all other persons known and unknown and for such other relief as may be deemed just and equitable. For further particulars you are referred to the petition on file.

Now unless you appear thereto and defend on or before noon of the second day of the regular September 1914 term of said court to be held at the court house in Marshalltown, Iowa, beginning on the 7th day of September, A. D. 1914, your default will be entered and a decree rendered as prayed for.
