claiming, "This is a case for first aid!" while Mrs. Galland, taking the steps as fast as she could, brought up the rear. Through the gateway in the garden wall could be seen the shoulders of a young officer, a streak of red coursing down his cheek, rising from the wreck.

"I saw! I saw clear over the range, at any rate!" he said. "And I'm alive. I managed to hold her so she missed the wall and made an easy bump."

"But your hand—oh, your hand!" His left hand hung limp from the wrist, cut, mashed and bleeding. His nerves numbed, he had not as yet felt any pain from the injury. Now he regarded it in a kind of awestruck stare of realization of a deformity to come.

"Wool-gathering again!" he muttered to himself crossly. Then, seeing that she had turned white, he thrust the disgusting thing behind his back and twinged with the movement. The pain was arriving.

"It must be bandaged! I have a handkerchief!" she begged. "I'm not going to faint or anything like that!" "Only bruised—and it's the left. I am glad it was not the right," he replied. Westering arrived and joined Marta in offers of assistance just as they heard the prolonged honk of an automobile demanding the right of way at top speed in the direction of the pass.

"Thank you, but they're coming for me," said Lanstron to Westering as he glanced up the road. Westering was looking at the wreck. Lanstron, who recognized him as an officer, though in multi, kicked a bit of the torn cloth over some apparatus to hide it. At this Westering smiled faintly. Then Lanstron saluted as officer to officer might salute across the white posts, giving his name and receiving in return Westering's.

They made a contrast, these two men, the colonel of the Grays, smart and sturdy, his physical vitality so evident, and the captain of the Browns, some seven or eight years the junior, bareheaded, in disheveled fatigue uniform, his lips twitching, his slender body quivering with the pain that he could not control, while his rather bold forehead and delicate, sensitive features suggested a man of nerve and nerves who might have left experiments in a laboratory for an adventure in the air. There was a kind of challenge in their glances; the challenge of an ancient feud of their peoples; of the professional rivalry of polite duellists. Lanstron's slight frown seemed to express the weaker number of the three million soldiers of the Browns. Westering's bulkier one, the four million five hundred thousand of the Grays.

"You had a narrow squeak and you made a very snappy recovery at the last moment," said Westering, passing a compliment across the white posts. "That's in the line of duty for you and no, isn't it?" Lanstron replied, his voice thick with pain as he forced a smile.

"Wasn't it thrilling and—and terrible!" Marta exclaimed. "Yes, like war at our own door again," replied Mrs. Galland, who knew war. She had seen war raging on the pass road. "Lanstron, the young man said his name was," she resumed after a pause. "No doubt the Lanstrons of Thorbourg. An old family and many of them in the army."

"The way he refused to give in—that was fine!" said Marta. Westering, who had been engrossed in his own thoughts, looked up. "Courage is the cheapest thing an army has! You can get hundreds of young officers who are glad to take a risk of that kind. The thing is," and his fingers pressed in on the palm of his hand in a pounding gesture of the forearm, "to direct and command—head work—organization!"

"If war should come again—" Marta began. Mrs. Galland judged her. A Brown never mentioned war to an officer of the Grays; it was not at all in the accepted proprieties. But Marta rushed on: "So many would be engaged that it would be more horrible than ever."

"You cannot make omelets without breaking eggs," Westering answered with suave finality. "The aeroplane will take its place as an auxiliary," he went on, his mind still running on the theme of her prophecy, which the meeting with Lanstron had quickened. "But war will, as ever, be won by the bayonet that takes and holds a position. We shall have no miracle victories, no—"

There he broke off. He did not accompany Mrs. Galland and Marta back to the house, but made his adieu at the garden-gate. "I'm sure that I shall never marry a soldier!" Marta burst out as she and her mother were ascending the steps.

Cassie Mullineaux Richards, violin teacher, 210 Masonic Temple, Wednesdays and Saturdays.—Advertisement.

William Neldick, of Trayer, returned home Friday night after a visit of several days at the G. W. Boussom home. Roseline Pennsylvania kerosene is ideal for your oil heater. No smoke; no smell. Your grocer has it.—Advertisement.

My dental office is now located over the Iowa Savings Bank, and equipped with modern appliances. Phone 712. Dr. Frazey. For voice culture see H. E. Giger, Monday and Thursdays at the Richards' violin studio, Masonic temple.—Advertisement.

Miss Madia Weitzel, of Waterloo, who has been spending a few days in the city with friends, returned to her home Friday evening. Mrs. Ross E. Greer, of Wagner, S. D., who has been visiting Miss Grace Nell, for three weeks, left this morning for her home.

Mrs. A. T. Price, of Lethbridge, Alta., who has been visiting relatives and friends in the city for three weeks, left Friday for her home. Lost or stolen—Some unpaid notes, payable to M. L. Neiman. Finder return to M. L. Neiman and receive reward.—Advertisement.

Rev. O. Ingvaldstad, pastor of the Norwegian Lutheran church, has returned from Kanawha, where he has been in attendance this week at the Lutheran pastoral conference of the

Des Moines and Eagle Grove districts. Before the conference Mr. Ingvaldstad read a thesis on "The History of the Nicene Creed."

I have returned from my vacation and will be found in my office over the Fidelity Bank from 9 to 12 and 1 to 4. Dr. Cora Williams Choate. Robert Smyth, of Mount Vernon, arrived in the city Friday evening for an over Sunday visit at the home of his brother-in-law, H. L. Eick.

Miss Nellie Coulton, of Omaha, is in the city for a few days' visit at the home of her sister, Mrs. T. F. McCurtain, 310 West Nevada street. School days are days when boys and girls require plenty to eat besides meat. You will then enjoy Strub Buttermilk bread better than anything else at the table. At the grocers, Strub's Bakery.

The season is about at hand when you will be making kum, wine, syrup and killing your winter pork. We are in a position to furnish you with new cooperage for the above in any size package. Marshall Oil Company. Joseph Kelly, of Denver, arrived in the city Friday evening from the east, and will remain over Sunday with his cousin, Mrs. Agnes McManus. Mr. Kelly is on his way home from an extensive trip thru the east and Canada.

The Fidelity Savings Bank, established in 1912, with twenty years' experience in handling savings accounts, offers unusual advantages to depositors. This bank has paid a 4 per cent interest on deposits since it was organized. One dollar starts an account.—Advertisement.

Mrs. Aymer Reynolds, formerly of Marshalltown but now of Denver, arrived in the city Friday, summoned by the illness of her father, Morris P. Boyle, of Toledo, who died at the soldiers' home Friday afternoon. Mrs. Reynolds this afternoon accompanied the body to Toledo for burial.

The popular Fane-Garrett Stock Company will be the attraction at the Odeon Theater all next week. Opening play Monday night a four act comedy drama, "The Country Boy," first time at these prices, 10 and 20 cents. Change of plays and specialties each evening. Seats are now selling; phone 1008.—Odeon.

Complimentary to Mr. and Mrs. Claude Leaf, who were married Aug. 24 at Manly, friends in the neighborhood joined in a surprise party shower at the home of Mr. Leaf's mother, Mrs. J. E. Lauber, 312 Anson street, Friday evening. The evening was enjoyed socially, with music and games. The guests presented Mr. and Mrs. Leaf with several useful gifts.

The First Presbyterian church opened up the fall work with two splendid services last Sabbath. The church is located opposite the post office. The pastor, James P. Linn, will speak in the morning on "The Wind was Contrary," and in the evening on "Coaling Stations in Life." You will enjoy the service. The song service will be led by a chorus choir. Committee.

The Soldiers' home observance of the commemoration of the writing of "The Star Spangled Banner," is to be observed at the home grounds at sunset this evening. The item referring to the salute to the flag as it appeared in the T-R Friday evening, was misleading in that in one place the observance was scheduled for Saturday evening, and in another for Monday evening.

The Congregational church, Main and Fourth streets, furnishes a very attractive and helpful place of worship. Tomorrow morning at eleven the theme will be "Religion and Philanthropy" and in the evening on "What Folks Think of Us" or "The Eyes of the World" as partial illustration. Good congregational singing and special music. The public is cordially invited.—Brotherhood.

C. S. Primrose's production of Robert Edson's "Where The Trail Divides" comes to the Odeon Sunday evening. The play is a story of the Western plains, its scenes being laid in South Dakota and its characters being the big-hearted, whole-souled children of the country West of the big river. The ending of the play is said to be one of the greatest innovations ever introduced on the American stage. Special prices, 15-25-35 and 50 cents.—Odeon.

Workmen began this morning to remodel the dwelling at 692 West Main street, which was formerly the old Trautmann home, but is now owned by Dr. H. A. Kinnan. The rear part of the dwelling is being torn away and a sleeping porch and other improvements are to be built at a cost of $1,200 to $1,500. The house is being prepared for Dr. and Mrs. R. F. French to occupy. Dr. H. C. Mueller and family are moving out of the house into the garage at their new home 1008 West Main street, which they will occupy until their dwelling can be occupied. Charles Neville Buck's mountain life novel "The Call of the Cumberland" has been dramatized by Hugo B. Koch and will be seen at the Odeon tonight with a superb scenic equipment and a company headed by Mr. Hugo Koch himself and starred with a care and eye for detail seldom equalled. The novel is one of the most interesting that has been written for a number of years and has met with popular approval everywhere, and it is safe to say that in dramatic form, it will be welcomed by the theatergoers of this city.—Odeon.

MeBroom Taken to Atlantic. Ralph McBroom, who was arrested here Friday for wife desertion, left for Atlantic early this morning in charge of the sheriff of Cass county, who came for him. Invited to National Meeting. Officers of the Marshalltown Baseball Association are in receipt of invitations to the National Baseball Association meeting, which will be held at Omaha Nov. 11, 12 and 13.
