AMUSEMENTS

At the Strand.
"Thoroughly delightful" may be fittingly applied to "Molly Make-Believe," drawn from the book of that name by the Famous Players Company, with Marguerite Clark in the name part, and shown at the Strand Sunday night to large audiences. Miss Clark was never more winsome or pretty than she is in this charming adaptation of the amusing and interesting story which has been cleverly made by the camera men.

Altho the book itself is not followed closely, there is worked out a very human and pretty story of the little girl who provided real letters from imagined persons, thus covering in a few letter company, "making believe" all the time, and thus making every one happy. The romance in the story is made to develop nicely, and works out to an extremely happy conclusion.

It is Miss Clark who commands the stage, and her good-natured, bubbly and moments when she is about as pretty and delightful as she has ever been on the screen. A wise director has emphasized the humorous and picturesque touches in the production, which include a very small boy and the best of most good-natured bull terrier that one could imagine. Altogether it is a happy film, which ought to please every one.

At the Lyric.
Two large audiences witnessed the production of "Adventures of a Madcap," with Jackie Saunders in the leading role, shown at the Lyric Sunday night. A pretty story is worked out of the little girl Jean, who is a child of nature, and is taken to the city by her foster parents, after she has first lived with an old gardener, who dies later, Jean stands the test of the city life, and after astonishing the members of the household by several pranks, she runs away and joins a band of gypsies. Here she leads the life of the gypsies until her whereabouts are discovered and she is rescued by her foster parents. The picture is well produced, and Miss Saunders takes the part of the harum scarum girl of the wood with a vivacity and enthusiasm that make it successful. A good "Mutt and Jeff" comedy is also introduced.

An act of vaudeville, which consisted of a novelty musical, singing and banjo act presented by Cleveland and Downy, was a feature of the Sunday night bill.

At the Colonial.
Showing in a clever and interesting way "The Woman in Politics" may upset gratify the women who attend the collected the film under the name "The Woman in Politics" was shown to fair-sized audiences at the Colonial Sunday night.

Mignon Anderson, popular screen star, takes the part of Dr. Barlow, a young woman who has been appointed to the health commission of her city. She at once sets out to stir up things, and succeeds in getting the mayor "in bad" in several places.
There is a thrilling tenement fire scene in which the girl is abducted by the mayor's accomplices, but is freed by a lucky stroke of fate. The picture is her part all along, and who turns out to be the governor's private secretary.
The mayor gets his deserts, and Dr.
Barlow's mission is accomplished.
Miss Anderson does some very good acting as the young doctor, and the tenement fire scene is especially well presented.

At the Odeon.
Patrons of the Odeon who attended the musical tabloid there Sunday night witnessed a clean and catchy entertainment entitled "Around the Town," which has been playing on the vaudeville circuits all winter, and which dropped in here because of a mix-up in bookings. The show opened a three days' engagement Sunday evening to a fair-sized audience.

Not only are the costumes handsome and well arranged, but the singing of the chorus is good and the principal comedians do well. The plot deals lightly with a doctor running a sanatorium for those afflicted with a dread disease known as "tangoitis." Many catchy songs are introduced, as well as a pleasing musical, especially on banjos by the Church sisters, Earle S. Dewey and Mabel Rogers are the chief fun makers, while the others contribute to the many amusing situations.

At the Casino.
Bessie Barriscale, a favorite motion picture actress, has a strong part in "Honors Altar" presented at the Casino Sunday night to good-sized audiences. Miss Barriscale takes the part of Winnie Mallory, wife of Frederick Mallery, a wealthy capitalist, who tires of his better half when he becomes immensely wealthy. He offers Warren Woods, supposedly without a sense of honor, $50,000 if he will win Mrs. Mal-lery's affections, and thus relieve Mallery of his irksome wife.

Woods sets about his task, and Mrs.
Mallery unsuspectingly accepts him as a friend of her husband. Woods, however discovers that he has a sense of honor after all, and refuses to carry out the contract, and a reconciliation is effected. Miss Barriscale's acting is worth while all the way thru, and the settings of the production are lavish.

At the Hospital.
Glen Titus, 1001 West State street, was operated on for acute ruptured appendicitis at St. Thomas hospital Sunday night under difficulties. Just as the patient was about to be taken to the operating room, the lights went out, due to one of the main feed wires coming in contact with a tree on South Third avenue, as a result of the storm.
Late, just as the patient was going under the anesthetic, the lights failed again, but only for a short time. The operation was a serious one, but the
