

LINN GIVES FAREWELL ADDRESS TO STUDENTS

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH PASTOR DELIVERS BACCALAUREATE SERMON SUNDAY.

CHOSES "THE BUILDERS" AS SUBJECT OF SERMON

"Have Your Vision and Build it into Actual Working Life" Burden of Pastor's Message to Young People—Teachers, School Board Members, and Juniors at Service.

"Have your vision—and build it into your actual working life."

These are the words and that was the burden of a message given by the preacher to members of the M. H. S. '16, in the Methodist church Sunday morning.

Commencement week was begun with what was a service of reverent worship, notable in praise, prayer and spoken word. The church building was filled in every pew, on floor, in galleries. Flowers and palms banked the pulpit platform. A wavy line of the colors of the graduating class was festooned from the balconies.

Before the hour of the service every seat was occupied, save the pews of the two central sections reserved for the senior and junior classes of the high school. Their teachers, and teachers of the grade schools, Superintendent Palmer and members of the board of education were in the congregation. As the court house clock struck the opening notes of the processional—"Holy, Holy, Holy," Bishop Heber's immortal hymn of the Trinity, as set to melody by Dykes, were heard. The combined choristers of Methodist and Presbyterian churches led the large graduating class into church with solemn stateliness, voices and organ in happy harmony. It was a real processional, traversing the whole church from south end to north end. Several regular members of the choir sat with their classes in the pews.

Members of the class of '16 wore collegiate gowns and truncheons and they were seated alternate girl and boy in the pews. The processional hymn was sung twice over ere all were in place. The adjoining section to the west was filled by students of the junior year, about to become seniors.

At the close of the service the congregation remained seated while choir and graduating class marched out to the stirring strains and words of Barling-Gould's "Onward, Christian Soldiers," the recessional, but if they listened, they were still within hearing of the preacher as he pronounced the benediction.

Linn on "The Builders."
The preacher was the Rev. James P. Linn, pastor of the Presbyterian church. "The Builders" was his theme. As the scripture lesson he had read the thirteenth chapter of the first letter of St. Paul to the Corinthian christians. Casting about, he said, for a subject or text for the service, he had selected this chapter because it proclaimed the truth that all men and women are builders together with God, "and we are the builders of today." These are some of the thoughts he expressed:

"We often hear of the failures of men and women to do the thing they set out to do. I like better to survey the successes of men. From study of them you can get some inspiration for your own task. It is possible today to do what successful men in all ages have done.

"Men have advanced stage by stage and have builded many things that count. They have risen step by step, from tent to cabin, to palace. They have come from mud roads to great railroads in the evolution of transportation.

Soon to Pass From Mud Road.
"We in Iowa will soon pass from the mud road. But we hope that whichever of the men we choose for governor will work to produce something of the needed thing we have heard so much about during the past six months.

"Men have developed great material things in life, but the human mind has also been developed and in art, music and literature we trace the onward march of men and the inner impelling forces that have wrought for the achievement. Back of all theologies, back of all intellectual attainings, are things that make them worth while, things that in themselves stand out as the impelling forces. This power of the life of the man displayed equips other men in mind and heart. The life beautiful is the life inside.

"Your ruling passion today should be to make all your life, inner and outer, strong and beautiful and an influence for good to those about you. Let that be your vision—not one of dollars and cents or of some high place you should occupy in the world.

"The men who fail have never caught the real vision of what life is and should be. So they haven't any idea of where they are going.

"And some have caught a vision, are very proud of it—but fail to build it into their lives, and so fall short of attaining its realization.

"I venture to say your teachers more than once during the past four years have brought to your mind and heart some vision of what your life can be made. Build it into your thoughts and deeds. Make it and yourself a power among men.

Fidelity, Sympathy, Patience.
"You go out and scan and consider what has counted in the lives of the successful men and women. You'll find three things. They are fidelity, sympathy, patience.

"Be faithful to your task wherever set. You may think you'll leave a pull. There isn't such a thing. You can be recommended for a place or a duty, but if you haven't got the pull within yourself to do the work you can't hold it.

"Cultivate the grace of sympathy. We are too much confined to the home and the home circle. Sympathy goes out to all men. More has been and will be accomplished by sympathy than by anything else, I think.

"Have patience. We want to go out and conquer the world tomorrow. The great reforms of the world have not been accomplished in a day. The great men we know who have won have labored long and patiently.

"We think we have cut out the saloon in Iowa, that the fight has been fought and won and finished. But we'd better be careful about that.
"Build your vision of the good into your life with faithfulness, sympathy and patience, and you will have builded something no one can ever overturn. Make your life strong and true and noble, whether you are merely demonstrating domestic science for two, practicing a profession, or building an honorable place for yourself in business."
Prominent in the praise service were the choir's singing of the anthem, conducted by Miss Wellemeyer, and the offertory solo, "The Ninety and Nine," admirably delivered by Mrs. F. Mayer.

GIRL IS BEST SPELLER

Lillie Sharp, Pupil of Liberty Consolidated School, Wins County Match—Harriet Feinberg, City, Second.

Lillie Sharp, an eighth grade pupil of the Liberty consolidated school, won the county spelling match Saturday for the honor of representing the county at the state match to be held in Des Moines state fair week. Harriet Feinberg, 1102 West Main street, a pupil of the seventh grade Franklin school, was second, and will alternate from the county at the state match.

Two hundred or more spectators looked on while the seventeen boys and girls from schools all over the county spelled down. All the townships were represented except LeGrand and Eden. All but five of the contestants were girls, and all of them came with the honor of having won the right to be there by winning in their home townships.

W. H. Gilbert, of this city, pronounced the words, and was judge. It required more than an hour to spell down all except the winner. Harriet Feinberg stumbled on the word "attendant" by spelling it "attendent."
The winner is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Sharp. Harriet Feinberg is the daughter of S. R. Feinberg. Ten dollars to pay the expense of the contestant at the state match will be furnished to the winner or the alternate, whoever goes to Des Moines. The list of words to be used at the state match will be furnished the county's representative and the alternate by County Superintendent of Schools C. E. Shutt probably in a few days.

VOTE HEAVIER THAN 1914

Indications Are That Primary Election Vote Will Greatly Exceed That of Last Election—Total of 892 Ballots Cast Up to 1:30.

From all indications up to 1:30 the vote in the state primary election is going to be much heavier than in 1914, when only 555 votes were cast up to practically the same hour. The conditions then, however, were such that but little interest was taken in the election.

However, the vote in the present election does not promise to be as large as that of either 1912 or 1910, when, at the same hour, totals of 1,058 and 931 were registered.

The vote up to 1:30 in the city compared to two years ago, was as follows:

1914	1916
First ward	175
Second ward	363
Third ward	200
Fourth ward	116
Fifth ward	38
Totals	892

HAPPENINGS OF INTEREST TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO IN MARSHALLTOWN

Thursday, June 4, 1891.

The C. & N. W. are doing away with oil lamps in their coaches and equipping them with gas as fast as can be done conveniently. Three large tanks are placed beneath each coach and filled with gas before leaving Chicago of a sufficient amount to burn forty-eight hours.

The school board held a meeting last evening and elected the following teachers to fill vacancies: Miss Ceila French, room 11, high school; Miss Denton, drawing; Miss Payne, of Michigan, room 12, high school; Miss Jessie Ulrich, music; Miss Margaret Graham, third grade; Miss Hubbell, of New York, assistant in kindergarten work, and Miss Emma Curtis for advanced primary work.

At Guild hall members of the Marshalltown high school alumni enjoyed their annual banquet and reception. Miss Belle Mitchem opened the program with a piano solo, and Eugene Binford gave the address of welcome, to which Miss Myrtle Halbert responded.

The piano solo by Miss Van Dever was very classical in style, and showed fine execution. Miss Lucia Raines gave a reading, Professor Toenniges a cornet solo, and the mandolin club played. "James Allison added new laurels to his reputation for his excellent singing, which has been listened to heretofore by a Marshalltown audience, his selection being 'My Lady's Bow' and 'Don't Cry.'"

J. L. Carney acted as toastmaster. The responses were by W. W. Miller on "The Refugee's Home"; Rev. E. W. Bowers on "My Los School House Experience"; Miss French on "The Teacher's Reward"; and Miss Edna Weber on "The Country School Ma'am."

Earl, the 20-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Grove Dann, of Green Mountain, died of measles and whooping cough.

Friday, June 5, 1891.
Members of the senior class of the Marshalltown high school gave a banquet at the Windsor to the members of the junior class. There were about 100 who sat down to dinner. Eugene Binford, president of the senior class, acted as toastmaster, and responses were made by Principal Taylor, Carl Kelsey, Joe Oppice, Alfred Young, and Superintendent Rogers.

Saturday, June 6, 1891.
The republican primary election resulted in the nomination of George A. Turner for senator over W. D. Mills; S. A. Emery for treasurer over S. B. McLeran; J. B. Rolston for supervisor over W. B. Williams, and Henry Stone for representative. J. B. Pence for sheriff, E. P. Fogg for county superintendent, Dr. Will Campbell, coroner, and William Bremner, surveyor, all without opposition.

At the Calvary Baptist church in Davenport, was celebrated the marriage of Miss Rosie E. Lamb to Rev. S. A. Perrine, pastor of the Baptist church of this city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. M. T. Lamb, the bride's father.

Wednesday, June 10, 1891.
At the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Reynolds, 108 West Grant street, Miss Jessie A. Reynolds was given in marriage to David Lennox, Rev. J. H. Henderson officiating. "The bride looked lovely in a cinnamon brown henrietta dress, trimmed with cream silk lace, the groom wearing the conventional black suit. The bride is well known here and has won many friends during her residence here, having been a valued member of the 'Y' and one of the active workers in the Master's vineyard. The groom is a member of the Lennox Machine Company, of this city, an industrious and successful machinist, and will make a model husband. About 9 o'clock the newly wedded pair and their friends were driven to the groom's home, 307 East State street, which had already been prepared to receive the bride. A large number of friends and neighbors were present to congratulate the new household, and wish them Godspeed, refreshments being served during the evening."

Miss Lou Vogel left Saturday evening for Kansas City, where she will make a short visit and then go on to Oklahoma City, Okla., to visit with friends.
