

1917?

I suppose they'd shoot him, so I wouldn't let him follow. North of the ruins of New York the regent's army appeared merely to be maintaining the positions it had taken during the siege. Their immediate objectives were in other quarters. Jim learned from refugees that an army was moving against New England. During the siege of Manhattan a column had taken Bridgeport and captured the cartridge works and manufacturing of rapid fire guns and the rifle and cartridge factories of New Haven. Another column, moving into New Jersey, had taken the powder works and arsenals about Dover. The regent's armies were marching farther now in both directions. One was advancing upon Hartford and Springfield. The other, cutting across New Jersey and capturing the powder plants at Patin and Pompton lakes, was moving toward the great gun works at Bethlehem. The third army, landed upon the Delaware coast from transports, was co-operating with this column. It had taken the munition plants at Carney's Point and was moving upon Washington.

RUFUS GAYNOR GOES TO DRIVE MILITARY AMBULANCE IN FRANCE

RUFUS GAYNOR

Flour already was gone; milk was gone, the cattle all killed. Already the old men and women and children were beginning to die by the dozens of want and exposure, and the winter was only on the way. Jim could take no food from these people. Beatrice would take none. Jim kept her close to him as he worked his way north. Though the countryside continued to be a great miserable camp of refugees, there were fewer and fewer of the enemy's soldiers. Now there were only outposts and patrols of the invaders. But during the third day of hiding Beatrice disappeared. Jim had left her hiding in an old, abandoned boat shed by the river while he went to find wood. When he returned she was gone.

There were no marks to show whether any one had come and taken her. There was nothing. She had just disappeared. He searched frantically, recklessly for her all the rest of the day, but found no trace of the girl and encountered nothing different from the common woe of the homeless, hopeless people. The sight of them, the sound of their voices, the odors of their wretchedness, drove him on more resolutely to the army. The American army! Every one spoke of it now. He was wearing it. The army for which New York and the rest of the seacoast had been sacrificed, for which the men who had fought and died in Manhattan had given themselves with the city. The army. He—Jim Asby, with the others—had won for it two months to train and drill and make itself ready; the army of the American millions. It must soon be ready to redeem what had been lost. "Who goes there?" "Advance, friend, and give the counter-signal." "I don't know it; but I'm an American soldier. I was with the Twentieth Illinois Infantry in the fighting at New York."

Rufus Gaynor, 29 years old, son of the late Mayor William J. Gaynor, of New York City, sailed on the liner La Touraine for ambulance duty on the French front. "It is not for the excitement," he said at the family's St. James (New York) estate. "I am interested in the work and want to help out." Mr. Gaynor was a reporter some years ago. He inherited $100,000 from his father.

The Law. The lesson of humility is hard to learn. The lesson of human brotherhood is still harder to learn. But if we can pluck any truth out of the awful agony of the war it is this—that no sort or kind of injustice or cruelty or oppression or repression is in the end profitable or even safe. That is the law.—James Douglas.

No More Backache For Her.

Mrs. J. M. Gaskill, Etina Green, Ind., writes: "I suffered from severe backache, and sharp pains shooting through my back until I could not stoop over and get up without aid. Urinary trouble seemed to be the cause of it all. A single box of Foley Kidney Pills gave me such relief that I cannot praise them too highly." This standard remedy for kidney and bladder ailments can be taken with safety for backache, swollen ankles, and rheumatic pains. Sold everywhere.—Advertisement.

Meteorites.

Among the collection shown in the new building of the National museum at Washington is a remarkably fine exhibit of meteorites. It includes complete meteorites ranging in size from the merest pebbles to great boulderlike masses, and casts reproducing giant forms like that of Bacubirito, which has been estimated to weigh 23 tons and still rests where it fell in Mexico.

Motorist's Temptation.

After a man has learned to run a motor car, he is tempted to put in the rest of his life studying the traffic regulations all over the country. By-Product Made of Value. Water and fireproof barrels will be made in Hawaii from bagasse, a sugar mill by-product, for exporting sugar and importing potash.

Luck Was With Him.

A young man who had received the privilege of shooting over the land of a farmer got rather close once or twice to the home grounds. Later in the day he met the farmer. "You've had pretty good luck," said the farmer. "Well, no," said the young man, hesitatingly. "I haven't had any luck at all." "Yes, you have," repeated the farmer. "This morning you just missed my best Shorthorn."

Chance for an Invention.

There are dolls which say "Mamma" and "Papa." Why doesn't someone invent a golf ball that will say "Here I am!"—Indianapolis Star. Curse of Knowledge. "Ereache," wrote Harry in his physiology examination, "comes from bits of information getting inside the ear tubes."

Advertisement for Frank Gorner, Jr., featuring a portrait and text about his heroic actions in 1917. "LAD SAVED FOUR LIVES, CARNEGIE FUND ASKED TO RECOGNIZE HIS HEROISM". "Frank Gorner, Jr. of Marietta, Pa., while swimming in the Susquehanna river the other day, heard cries for help. In an old rowboat he pulled into the swift current of the river and rescued four persons who had been spilled into the water by the upsetting of their canoe. The persons rescued
