

According to Boston advices there is lacking for the first time since operations were inaugurated a month ago any report of the copper production to the credit of the Inspiration Consolidated Copper Company for the year ending July 1. The property was closed down by strike July 2. The preceding day being Sunday, the current month will have gone by without any operative income. The management has paid off its employees and closed down the plant.

Eastern opinion is there has been no relief from the congestion at the steel mill. During the last week some slight improvement has been noted in the railroad situation. This is true with regard to coke. On the other hand the carriers are not now moving sufficient coal to keep the steel plants of the company running at anything like capacity.

Paint and Cosmetics are Tabooed by Girls of Barnum & Bailey Circus

Men and women who watch the Barnum & Bailey circus parade when the sun creates a natural light around the faces of the girls who ride on spangled horses, often are heard to remark the freshness of the riders and the evident lack of cosmetics.

They are not mistaken, the girls use neither paint nor powder at any time. Such subtleties for the glow of health are taboo in the mind of the dressing tent. Cosmetics are left to the clowns.

The modern circus girl is interesting because for many years girls who "traveled with a show" were considered to be hardened creatures of uncertain morals. That was the nomadic day of the tented entertainment. When the Barnum & Bailey circus comes to town on Tuesday, Aug. 7, there will be several hundred girls with the show, and if one of them had conducted herself in anything but a ladylike manner at any time since her engagement, she never would have reached this point in the itinerary of the big show.

As a matter of fact the majority of circus girls are the most refreshing, the healthiest and cleanest minded young women ever assembled together.

Many of the so-called "girls" are married women with young daughters and sons, who are also with the circus. There is little difference between the
