Store Your Heat For Winter Now

Putting off for a month or two buying your winter coal is taking a long chance on not being able to get enough coal to keep your home comfortable this winter.

Normal requirements for the year are increased by millions of tons on account of the government's war activities, and these needs will have first consideration in the winter, when coal is needed by everyone, as well as now, when the need is negligible, and the supply does not equal the demand.

SECURE DATA FOR BOND SALE

SUB-COMMITTEES OF WAR SERVICE LEAGUE GATHER INFORMATION ON HOLDINGS.

HOLDINGS TO BE TAKEN INTO CONSIDERATION

Council of Defense Will Rate Purchasers on Their Ability to Buy, Based on Property Owned, Together With What They Now Actually Own in Both Bonds and Stamps.

Members of sub-committees of the war service league started out this morning to secure for the council of defense data from which to make the allotments to purchasers of the fourth liberty bond issue on Sept. 27, the day chosen for the campaign in this county.

The committees are reporting on cards showing the names of persons who are expected to buy, and the amount of bonds and war savings stamps actually owned by them and members of their families on Sept. 15.

Purchases to Receive Consideration. While the council of defense first will take into consideration a man's ability to buy bonds, based on the assessed valuation of the property he owns, the purchases of bonds and war savings stamps that have been made will have a hearing on the allotment for the fourth issue. A man may be able to buy, and has bought heavily of the preceding issues. His purchases already made then will enter into determining his fair share of the new issue.

On the other hand a man may be able to buy, and may not have bought in the preceding campaigns an amount sufficient in proportion to his wealth or income. In these cases the buyers will be asked to invest proportionately in the new issue.

If Bonds Sold, Do Not Count. If a person has bought liberty bonds of the preceding issues and sold or traded them or if he has redeemed war savings stamps that have been bought, such purchases do not count in the making up of the present allotment. If bonds have been sold the new owners are under the obligation of carrying them, and the new owner, if he still holds them, may list them as among his purchases. The bonds and stamps must be actually owned on Sept. 15 in order to get any consideration by the defense council.

The committees expect to get the data gathered within the next two days and into the hands of their district chairmen by Wednesday morning.

Mr. Wood met his death when a boy in the neighborhood, who thought he was able to drive it, took charge of a new car Mr. Wood had bought. MORE TIME NEEDED.

Patrons Asked to Order Groceries as Early as Possible.

We wish to call the attention of our customers to the fact that all the grocery stores, are very short of help and customers should get their orders in the evening before the day of delivery whenever possible. When this is impossible let us have at least twenty minutes before the hour for the U. D. to leave the store.

In one day our orders run over four hundred dollars, and it takes some time to put up even one hundred dollars worth of mixed goods. The hours of leaving this week will be 8 and 10 a. m., and one delivery in the afternoon at 3 o'clock. Only one order to a house from a grocery store, each day. Hard luck we know, but these are war times and we know we can count on your help. Reynolds & Sheldon.

Rhodes Entertains Soldiers.

Twenty-six soldiers from Camp Dodge, members of the Second Infantry, who have just returned from a year spent in the trenches, were entertained by the people of Rhodes over Sunday. Six automobiles brought the men to Rhodes Saturday afternoon, and at 6 o'clock a community supper was held in their honor. In the evening the regiment gave drills and boxing exhibitions, and then went to the opera house, where a musical program was given that had been arranged by the townspeople. A public dance followed.

For the night, and for Sunday's entertainment, the families of the community took the boys, each family caring for two. Sunday morning the men attended the Methodist Protestant church in a body. In the evening they were taken back to camp in automobiles. Six boys from Rhodes are members of the regiment.

Albert Blinn was chairman of the committee in charge of the affair, and Misses Gladys Hildreth and Amelia Bentley were in charge of the hostesses.

Night School.

Volunteers Respond.

The call for help from volunteers who were willing to give the local exemption board their services to do the large amount of detail and clerical work required by the registration last week and the coming drafts, was printed in the T.-R. Saturday night, brought results. By midforenoon today five young women and one young man had offered their services and had been put to work.

Photographed Hun Kaiser and Two of His Sons

"Lil" Kerslake, animal trainer extraordinary, who appeared at the county fair this week with his educated pigs, is a devotee of amateur photography, and during the course of his years of travel as a showman has enjoyed opportunities to snap scenes such as few "kodaks" rarely experience.

During his tours in Europe and Latin American countries he obtained many interesting and valuable pictures, but of all the most interesting today, perhaps, are those taken in Germany long before the war.

Included in his collection are snapshots of the German emperor and two of his six sons. Kerslake admits there was a time when he regarded the pictures quite highly. "But, now," said the old showman, "it's different. There's another picture which would mean more, much more, to us. We want you to snap me and me right here in front of our tent. We want to send it our son, who is with the American expeditionary forces in France. We just want to send him a picture of ourselves in our work clothes."

Kerslake recalled witnessing a review of 133,000 German troops, of a trip to a naval base where he saw the maneuvers of a submarine fleet, and numerous other journeys to army exhibitions and military shows. Then the evolutions of the mighty German army appeared to him as a heroic military spectacle. Today Kerslake realizes the significance of these great dress rehearsals for the future parade of death thru Belgium and France.

Kerslake is acknowledged to have the greatest dumb animal act of its kind in the show business. He has been in the business for years and has made his greatest success as a trainer of pigs. The training of pigs, Kerslake declares, is not as difficult a task as many of his proteges have no confidence in me and I have no confidence in them. We get thru the act all right, but I never know what will happen. Before the winter season opens I shall send for the three old hogs and work them with the two crows."

Kerslake has just discovered after ten months that the uglier the hog the greater hit it makes as an actor.

"I have discovered why your act is a success," said a farmer to Kerslake one day during the fair. "I know hogs myself. It's not the hogs that make the act, at all; it's Kerslake."

And therein lies the success of Kerslake as an animal trainer. Kerslake holds the center of the stage throughout the act. He is constantly in motion, and his flourishes with whip and cow-hide clad feet cover up possible deficiencies due to failure of the pigs to carry thru their part of the entertainment.

Altho working hard to please the public, and constantly endeavoring to add a helping hand to other performers, Kerslake and his kindly wife no longer have the deep interest of other years in the show business. Their constant thought is of a khaki-clad youth across the seas battling the Hun kaiser and his son, who Kerslake senior once thought it an honor to photograph.
