About the Ostrich.

There is some prospect of ostrich farming developing into quite an industry in the south-west, and it will some time be a cold day when the simple-minded rustic of that region will not have ostrich on toast if he wants it. Ostrich farming, however, will have its drawbacks. The hen ostrich is not a good layer, as a rule, only laying two eggs per annum, which, being about the size of a porcelain wash-bowl, makes her so proud that she takes the balance of the year for convalescing. The ostrich is chiefly valuable for the plumage which he wears and which, when introduced into the world of commerce, makes the husband almost wish that he were dead. Probably the ostrich will not come into general use as an article of food, few people caring for it, as the meat is coarse and the gizzard full of old hardware and relics of wrecked trains and old irons left where there has been a fire. Carving the ostrich is not so difficult as carving the quail, because the joints are larger and one can follow them with less trouble. Still, the bird takes up a great deal of room at the table and the best circles are not using them. The ostrich does not set, she doesn't have time. She does not squat down over something and hatch it out, it takes all summer, but she just lays a couple of porcelain cuspidors in the hot sand when she feels like it, and then goes away to the seaside to quiet her shattered nerves.—[Bill Nye.]

MEN IN CORSETS.—The male outline is gradually losing its rigidity. The present idea of beauty in male attire is to have the coat fit very close at the waist, and it is actually alleged that men are cultivating the remarkable trimness of waist considered desirable by the use of corsets, and that wherever the line of the waist is distinctly marked, there is a suppression of stiffness, and not infrequently a faint creaking sound, hitherto peculiar to the female outfit. It is interesting to guess what the doctors will find for a subject when all the men have got into corsets and the doctors themselves have followed suit, as they will do rather than be out of fashion. Then will be presented the spectacle of Ekeculapius in a "spoon bust" and "tooth pick" shoes delivering a lecture upon fashionable follies and the disadvantage of French heels.

Sometimes what appears to be a very wicked wish may turn out to be very proper and kind. Of a certain man who had just died, a sweet tempered Christian neighbor said solemnly: "John Stark is dead, and I do hope with all my heart that he has gone to—well, one of Mr. Vanderbilt's dashes will express the locality. The minister was shocked. "And what could he have done to you?" he asked, "that you indulge in a hope of that kind?" "Oh," was the reply, "my hope was based on my love for my fellow men, John was a queer body. He never belonged to an organization of any kind but he managed to smash the whole thing in a little while, and I thought that perhaps if he has gone to the place above mentioned there wouldn't be much of it left by the time you and I get—beg pardon, parson!"

THE "BLOODY SHIRT" BURIED.—The late election, among other things it has done, has forever stilled the bloody shirt cry. Nothing can avail that "issue" now. It is as dead as the men who persisted in using it long after it had ceased to interest the country. This placing of power in the hands of the democratic party is good and sufficient evidence that the people know which is the safer party to trust. The shallow heads who for twenty years have been keeping up the cry of the democratic party being the party of secession have received a blow in the face with open hand. The people become tired of inconsistency as they do of dishonesty.—[Cincinnati Enquirer.]

Copal varnish applied to the soles of shoes and repeated as it dries until the pores are filled and the surface shines like polished mahogany, will make the soles waterproof, and last as long as the uppers.

A Fatal Kiss.

A party of young fellows of Wil-Hampburg, Pa., presumably friends, were standing on a corner when a young lass came tripping by and saluted the boys with whom she was acquainted. Her trim figure, her pretty feet, her sparkling eyes, and more than all, her cherry lips, created a perfectly natural and entirely uncontrollable desire on the part of one of the young men to snatch a kiss. He had no maid and no milky desire, like Romeo, to be a glove on her hand, that he might touch her cheek, although this was peachy and blooming enough to make this a valuable privilege, but he wanted a good long draught of the delicious nectar, the store of which seemed to be so lavish. He left his companions, made a dash for the maiden and made straight for her ruby lips. It is not probable that she had any serious objections to osculation in general or even in particular, but she uttered a becoming scream—as what young girl wouldn't indulge in a little scream under such circumstances—which called another of the young men to the struggling twain. It is possible that her exclamation was one of mock protest, but before it had time to die away into a murmur of acquiescence her would-be-kissender, whose real motive it would be safe to say was envy of the imminent success of his bold companion, interposed, and the two coming to blows, the kiss seizer was knocked down and received injuries from which he died. This was surely a case where tragedy followed fast on the heels of comedy.

THE DYING HANDICAP.—There is a quiet laugh at the expense of big doctors in Indianapolis. Ex-Senator Handricks was recently reported critically ill of erysipelas, with gangrenous symptoms, certain, the great doctors of Indianapolis and Louisville said, to carry him to a speedy death. The Senator prepared for his fate calmly, and resignedly waited for the grim messenger. But he did not proceed to die. The day to which the scientific doctors limited his life, a blunt old democratic friend, who was a country practitioner, came to pay his distinguished friend a farewell visit. He looked at the erysipelas of the dying Statesman, and suddenly said, with an expressive grunt, "Nothing but a bile, by G—d!" The next day the Statesman was at the polls voting the democratic ticket. The distinguished scientific physicians are very quiet on the subject. We have the documents for this story.—[Dayton Journal.]

REV. W. E. KELLER.—At the meeting of "Morgan's Command," at Lexington, there was a great difficulty in finding "Bill" Keller, the former bugler of the 2d Ky. He was finally found and put up to give the famous call "to mount," upon which a great many amusing remarks were made. "You can't cut her, Bill," said one. "Why, d—me, if that isn't Bill, the old bugler; I must hug him," said another. Rev. J. R. Deering, another preacher who graduated from that historic and gallant body, said, "I did not think Keller ever took a horn." These remarks and many others seemed especially amusing, addressed to one of the most distinguished Presbyterian ministers in Eastern Kentucky.—[Mt. Sterling Democrat.]

According to the Jacksonville (Fla.) Times, a gentleman of that city has a peculiar brand of cigars, known as the "cabbageros," which he uses for electioneering purposes. When he meets a man, a day or two before the election, and asks him for his vote, and sees in the man's eye that he can not be depended upon, the candidate proffers him one of these cigars and did not discover until she had thrown it over the back of a pew in church that she had brought, by mistake, a pair of her husband's trousers.

Over 1,000 sugar houses through 27 parishes in Louisiana are now in operation. The welfare of at least 150,000 laborers depends upon the result of the present work, and $40,000,000 of capital are awaiting the returns on the investment.

The New York Tribune calls the democratic party "a public nuisance." It does seem to be rather a nuisance to those republican bosses who want to run the country.

FRUITS AND FLOWERS.

BY JOHN G. WHITTEK.
Oh, Painter of the fruits and flowers,
We own Thy wise design,
Whence these bright hands of ours
May share the work of Thine!
Apost from These, we plant in vath
The roots and new the world,
Thy early and Thy late seed,
Thy sun and Thy wind;
Our toil is eved with thankfulness,
Our blessing is our loat;
The curse of earth's gray morning
The blessing of its noon.
Why search the wide world every where
For Eden's unknown ground?
That garden of the primal pair
May never again be found.
But, look by These, our patient toil
May right the special wrong,
And give to every clime and soil
The beauty that we long.
Our husbanded flowers and fruited trees
May Eden's orchard share;
We taste the rippling sweet of these
Like Eve, without her blame.
And, north and south and east and west,
The pride of every zone,
The fairest, sweet and the best
May all be made one own.
Heavenly shines the young world eugh
In hill and valley and in lowland,
The flock offerings of Thine brought
From Thy oak forests and flowers.
And still with reverent hands we will
Thy gifts each year renew,
The good is always beautiful—
The beautiful is good.

The Transit of Venus.
This event, which is to take place in December, is attracting unusual attention to our neighboring planet, which is now so conspicuous an object in the evening sky. Venus is nearly as large as the earth, and like our planet travels around the sun continually, but makes its annual revolution in seven and a half of our months. Each of its four seasons, therefore, lasts eight weeks. Venus is so near the sun that if it inhabited it must be by beings that can stand a continuous heat double that of this earth. Venus is surrounded by an atmosphere filled with moisture, and must be much more cloudy than is the sky of this earth. It undoubtedly has continents, islands, oceans and rivers. It must have some forms of life, for where there is heat and moisture there must be vegetable growth, and, in all probability, some of the lower forms of insect life. The coming transit is an interesting event, and astronomers everywhere are getting ready to witness it from every point of view possible on this earth.—[Demorest's Monthly.]

The long pelisse is the success of the season as a wrap for young ladies, and also for those who are older who do not require very warmly lined cloaks. Cloth is the fashionable fabric for the pelisse, with Astrakhan or Persian lamb's skin for the trimming; green is the favorite color for the cloth, and brown is also much used, but is more effective when trimmed with natural beaver fur of light brown shades than with the black curled furs.

At a hotel in Oswego a couple from the country, of Milesian extraction, took seats at the dinner table. Directly after a young couple seated themselves opposite, and the young man took a stalk of celery from the dish and commenced eating it. The old opposite looked at him a moment with an air of disgust, and then nodding her husband, said in a stage whisper: "D'y'e mound the blackguard ating the bokay?"

The question of religiously anointing the sick, as indicated in the epistle of St. James, was referred to in a Presbyterian Church at San Rafael, Cal., by a member who believed in it. The elders called upon the Presbytery for a decision, and the Presbytery have called upon the Synod, which will probably ask the General Assembly to pronounce upon the subject.

A Toronto lady, in a hurry to go to church, took from her dark closet what she thought to be her dolman. She hung the garment over her arm, and did not discover until she had thrown it over the back of a pew in church that she had brought, by mistake, a pair of her husband's trousers.

"Charles, dear," she murmured, as she strolled along the other evening, and gazed up at the bejeweled firmament, "which is Venus and which is Adonis?"

Rising as a Cure for Freckles.

One fine evening recently Mr. B., a government employe in the town of Bruun, was taking a walk in the castle grounds when, on reaching a less frequented portion of the park, he saw a young lady coming in the opposite direction. As they were about to pass each other, the lady suddenly turned towards Mr. B., threw her arms around his neck and kissed him; then, as if ashamed of what she had done, she covered her face with her hands and ran off as fast as she could. The gentleman, unable to account for this agreeable surprise, followed the young lady, and taking her by the arm, asked for an explanation of the strange procedure. "I beg a thousand pardons," was the reply of the blushing damsel, "you must be greatly shocked at my behavior. I had been to consult a 'wise woman' as to the best means of charming away the freckles on my face, and she advised me to kiss the first gentleman I met, when they would be sure to disappear." The couple continued their walk together, and though we are not told whether the singular remedy proved efficacious or not, it may interest the reader to learn that not many days afterward the two were joined together for better or for worse.

A republican paper of Kentucky calls Billy Bradley "the Demosthenes of Kentucky."
"Which is Dan?" said a looker-on at a painting representing Daniel in the lion's den. "The gentleman with the blue cotton umbrella under his arm," said the picture owner. "What in the devil was I thinking about?" said the looker-on; "if I'd thought a minute I mout a knowed the lions by the wool on their necks."—[Glasgow Times.]

The proposition to abolish the internal revenue system, backed by the ultra-protectionists, is likely to be formidable. Kelley, the crank, is hard at it. There is not an enlightened nation in the world except our own, that does not derive its revenue chiefly from liquor and tobacco; and our protective system is the most oppressive and corrupt on the face of the earth.—[Cincinnati Commercial.]

A gentleman in India, pulling on his boots, felt a horrid prickly object like a centipede, in one of them. With great persistence of mind, instead of withdrawing his foot, he forced it violently down and stamped furiously, though enduring exquisite agony in the process. But it was not a centipede; only a small blacking brush left there by a careless servant.

TESTIMONIALS OF LINCOLN CO. FARMERS!

THE ALBION HARROW, CULTIVATOR & SEEDER.
Three First-Class Implements Combined in One.

STANFORD, KY., Oct. 31, 1882.
GEO. D. WEAREN—Dear Sir:—The Albion Spring Tooth Harrow, Cultivator and Broadcast Seeder purchased of you is all you claim for it. I am well pleased with my purchase. As a Harrow and pulverizer it is the best I have ever seen; as a Seeder, I would not exchange for any other, and I am also confident that it will prove valuable as a Cultivator. CRAIG LYNN.

MR. GEO. D. WEAREN—Dear Sir:—I have one of the Albion Spring Tooth Sulkey Harrows, Cultivators and Broadcast Seeders. I am well pleased with it and would not exchange it for any similar tool. WM. GOOCH.

GEO. D. WEAREN, ESQ.—Dear Sir:—I used one of the Albion Combined Spring Tooth Harrows and Broadcast Seeders in putting in my wheat this Fall, and do not hesitate to say that it did the work perfectly. C. T. SANDIDGE.

GEO. D. WEAREN—Dear Sir:—We bought of you a Spring Tooth Sulkey Harrow and Broadcast Seeder, and after having used it in seeding wheat in foul stalk land, we are free to say that the implement is a good one and gives satisfaction. We regard it superior to any Drill and a perfect success as a Harrow and pulverizer. R. W. GIVERS & SON.

MR. GEO. D. WEAREN—Dear Sir:—I am pleased with my Albion Spring Tooth Harrow and Broadcast Seeder; think it is much better and answers many more purposes than a Drill. JOHN BUCHANAN.

GEO. D. WEAREN—Dear Sir:—Have tested your Albion Seeder on clean, plowed land and on the foulest stalk land. It gives better satisfaction than any implement ever used in foul land. A. K. DENNY.

GEO. D. WEAREN—Dear Sir:—I have used one of the above mentioned Seeders, and heartily endorse the statement of Mr. Denny. J. A. DEPAUW.

GEO. D. WEAREN—Dear Sir:—The Albion Combined Spring Tooth Harrow, Cultivator and Broadcast Seeder is all and even more than you claim for it. I have sown 50 acres of wheat this season in fifty corn land, and it does its work well where no other machine would work at all. My son Jimmie, who is 12 years old, ran the machine all the time, using a team of comparatively small horses, and found no difficulty. I cheerfully recommend it to my farmer friends, for I know a fair trial will convince them of its usefulness eight months in the year. JOHN F. BAILEY.

GEO. D. WEAREN—Dear Sir:—Each one of us having purchased of you one of your Albion Spring Tooth Sulkey Harrows and Broadcast Seeders, we take pleasure in saying that they have given us entire satisfaction and done all that you claimed for them. Prefer them to any wheat Drill we have seen. Sows the wheat evenly and leaves none exposed on the surface; also regard the tool superior to any other as a pulverizer and believe they will prove valuable as Cultivators. C. VASOY, SHANKS SPOONAMORE.
