

W. P. WALTON.

The Court of Appeals has reversed the judgment of the Scott Circuit Court, which sentenced James Creighton to the penitentiary for 21 years for killing Ambrose Wilson at Sadieville.

The republicans of Ohio nominated Judge Forsaker for Governor on the first ballot. He is a pretty decent sort of a man, but the fact that Hoody beat him for the same position two years ago shows that he is not a very popular one.

THE Breckinridge News has got Col. Sneers down to a fine point and has almost concluded to favor boycotting his paper which it declares is so "utterly devoid of a decent spirit of fairness that it is with difficulty that we hold ourselves down long enough to read it."

WHILE the lamp holds out to burn the vilest sinner may return, consequently we may not be surprised to see that boss of infidels, Col. Bob Ingeroll, yet devoting his splendid talents to building up the cause of religion, which he finds remunerative now to effect to despise.

THAT wonder in journalism, the Evening Post of Cincinnati, has given evidence of its prosperity by buying a $14,000 Scott press and increasing its size a column to the page.

THE Frankfort Capital says, "The lawmaker of next winter's General Assembly of Kentucky, who shall formulate a bill that will eliminate the objectionable features in jury selections, will win a name that will stand high in the roll of honor."

PLEAS EVERHART was given seven years at Bowling Green for an indecent assault on a young bride and two years for perjury. As he is the son of a rich man and his mother is a sister of Chief Justice Hines, we have money to bet that he does not serve out either sentence, although a more notoriously bad character does not live in his portion of the State.

FOUR Kentucky editors have secured good positions under the democratic administration, which is more consideration than is generally shown these hard workers for the public good and party advancement.

SENATOR LOGAN expressed himself as much impressed with President Cleveland after his recent call. The President is reticent, however, as to the impression the old spitter made on him.

The difference between an imitation and a genuine amethyst can be easily distinguished. Just put them on your tongue alternately and you will find that the spurious feels warm and the genuine icy to the touch. The stone which has had the greatest run of late is the tiger eye, which has a peculiar, dull fire. It is only a piece of petrified wood, turned smooth and polished.

GEO. O. BARNES

Gives Further Glimpses into Home Life in India.

ALWAYS PRAISING THE LORD.

"PROSPECT POINT," LANDOUR, N. INDIA, May 5th, 1885.

DEAR INTERIOR.—We have just heard from our long missing baggage and hope to get it in a day or two. It is over six weeks now since we last sighted it in Bombay. But I must say this for the Indian railways that such delay is very exceptional: Nothing but anticipated war could have thus delayed our "goods and chattels," and knowing the reason we have not been worried in the least. And really we have not missed our trunks much, and have proved again that half our supposed needs are imaginary. As my dear old friend, Sam. Brown, Esq., of Newport, used to say, "Come and visit me Rev. and see how few the real wants of life are." One discovers this when trunks are lost. But I am glad all the same that they have turned up.

I had the pleasure of hearing another grand sermon from our dear Brother Osborne day before yesterday, and the additional joy of witnessing the baptism of six Hindoos, the fruits of his ministry among the natives. It was a very impressive occurrence.

We are getting along admirably in our studies. The young ones are beginning to apprehend the structure of the language and will soon be talking intelligibly. Will so persistently practices what little he knows, regardless of laughable blunders, that he will lead them all in speaking Hindustani.

We killed a large scorpion in the girl's bath-room yesterday. George, who has been on the sharp look out for the much talked of reptiles of India, discovered the "venomous beast" and gave the alarm. There was as much excitement in despatching it as if it had been a rattle snake or a Cobra. It was the black scorpion of the mountains, very like a small crawfish, only the tail, instead of being flat, is a jointed, tubular affair, ending in the curved sting and carried curled over its back, ready for instant use. But the claws are just like those of the crawfish. We shall have plenty of them when the rainy season drives them into the houses.

Another little "family affair": A day or two ago a cunning, audacious crow attempted to carry off a half-grown duck, one of a gang of ten that we bought soon after arrival, and finding it was too heavy to fly with called in the aid of a rascally companion, and when discovered by the servants the two were marching the poor, helpless thing off down the glen, one on either side, each holding on to a wing like a couple of policemen walking a prisoner off to jail, and occasionally halting to peck the callow creature on the head to stop its noise, I suppose, for it was quacking vociferously by way of protest at these violent proceedings. Happily the servants reached the scene of operation in time to save our poor "ducky," and rescued it in a very drabbed and forlorn condition. We are quite beset with saucy crows, and another equally important sort of feathered fowl called "minars." These come perching about intent on "petit larceny" and snatch everything they can lay their beak upon.

Our little canary, "Jack King," is a treasure and well repays in grateful strains of choicest melody all the trouble he has cost in bringing him up. Have I mentioned him before? I forget. Well, our good friend, Jack King, is chief steward and scotch of the good steamer Venetia. When we came away he gave Marie his favorite canary with his best wishes to us all. I can not tell you how kind he was to us during the voyage, paying us unremitting attention, and doing everything he could to make us comfortable and happy. We give his pretty bird, his name in full, and I think he knows it already and begins to answer to it. Ever in Jesus,

GEO. O. BARNES.

The devil arose from his little bed and washed his face and combed his head. The devil to breakfast gaily went, and gorged himself to his heart's content. The devil with many a merry jest gave to the meal an added zest. The devil's mother poured the tea and smiled at her son's impulsive glee. The devil finished his early meal, and started away on nimble heels. "For you know," he said, "I make it by six, or the foreman will treat me to sundry kicks." "God bless you too," said the devil's ma. "As the devil caught on a passing car. "God bless the devil!" 'Tis strange, yet true, of a printer's devil I'm talking to you.—[Chicago Sun.

A young farmer of Westford, Osego county, N. Y., was struck recently in the face by the tail of a cow which he was milking, and became so enraged thereby that he procured an ax and chopped off the tail above the switch of every cow in the stable—six in number. The proceeding finally came to the ears of outsiders and the tiller of the soil was fined $10.
