

The editor of the Voice, the leading prohibition paper in the United States, having secured ex-Senator Ingalls for certain alleged discrepancies between the statements in his speech at Prohibition Park, Aug. 1, and his article in the Forum three years ago, he publishes a reply. In the speech he showed what an utter failure prohibition had proven in Kansas, while in the Forum he had pronounced the law and its workings a complete success. The senator says that the article was based on information furnished by reliable persons at the time, but that since an extraordinary change had occurred. There is no town of importance in Kansas now, he asserts, where whisky and beer are not sold as a beverage, that in the principal cities the dram shop traffic is practically licensed by the monthly imposition of fines and that the brewery, which in a test case the supreme court of the United States held the State had power to suppress and destroy, has been and is now in constant, uninterrupted, and profitable operation. These observations, continues the senator, are not prompted by hostility to prohibition nor by preference for any other plan of suppressing the enormous evils inflicted upon society by the abuse of intoxicating drinks. Prohibition may be the best method of dealing with the appalling problem, but the friends of temperance have nothing to gain by intolerance, hypocrisy, and misrepresentation, and nothing to lose by fearless, candid, and truthful discussion.

Last month the whole region round about Hanover, N. H., was shocked by the murder of a beautiful young girl, whose person showed that she had also been the victim of her murderer's selfish lust. Frank Almy, the hired man of Christine Warden's father, who was a farmer, was suspected and his disappearance strengthened the belief that he was the perpetrator of the horrible crimes. The whole country joined in the search, but it was not until Thursday last that he was found. He had barricaded himself in one of Mr. Warden's out-houses and when a posse attempted to storm it he fired upon the men, wounding seriously one or more. He continued to fire until his ammunition was exhausted, and then refused to surrender till he had been shot three times. It was all the officers could do to prevent the outraged populace from dealing summary justice to the fiend. He is now in jail and will no doubt be made to atone as much as his worthless life can for his heinous crimes, which cry aloud for the tortures inflicted by the Spanish Inquisition.

In an interview published in the Bowling Green Times, Dr. John D. Woods, one of nature's highest noblemen, admits that he feels flattered at the many kind references to him for speaker of the House and that he would esteem it an honor worthy of the highest ambition to attain the position, if it involved no suspicion of bargain or promise; otherwise he would not have it. Thoroughly honest and scrupulously impartial, well versed in parliamentary law and gifted with a full store of common sense, which a fine education and extensive reading has broadened and brightened, Dr. Woods would make a model presiding officer for our law-makers and reflect credit alike on them and himself. The INTERIOR JOURNAL, which loves and honors him, hopes to be able before many months to address its friend and brother as Speaker Woods, of the lower House of Representatives.

SENATOR CARLISLE, in an interview, says it would be suicidal for the democracy to advance the question of free coinage of silver to an equal importance with the tariff issue. The party is not united on the former while on tariff reform it is practically a unit and can make a confident and aggressive fight. Even with free coinage the people will not be benefited if the drain produced by high prices is continued because their money will be wrung from them through custom-house exactions. The senator was not prepared to say that Cleveland would be re-nominated, but he is sure no other man has the hold on the people that he has. The views of Senator Carlisle are always regarded with high consideration. He is a statesman and a patriot, above attempting to carry a point simply to gratify a petty spite and magnify his own importance.

BROWN HULSEY abused himself at Crofton by striking matches on a pistol cartridge. The cartridge stood it as long as possible, then got mad and exploded, killing Hulsey instantly. All the fools are not dead, but if they keep on in this way their numbers will be materially reduced.

JERRY SIMPSON, the sockless Kansas statesman, can't see why Jay Gould should charge him $16 to haul him from Chicago to New York and only demand $3 for a hog. We can't see either, except that the Kansas hog persists in riding in the cars with people.

The Kentucky Post ought to kill its artist or give him a better axe.

Those tender-hearted idiots, called sentimentalists through courtesy, are holding up their hands in holy horror again and decrying against capital punishment, because the head of murderer Conway was jerked off at Liverpool and blood spurted right and left. What difference does it make if it did? If the feelings of the man is worth considering it was a much less painful death than by the slower one of strangulation, though the murderer richly deserved the more torturous death. He had cut a boy's throat simply to gratify a desire to see how he would die. No sentiment or other foolishness should be wasted on him. Everybody should rejoice that such a monster was killed no matter if his head was jerked off to do it.

The Covington Commonwealth man, having exhausted without avail every argument he could think of against the new constitution, has given up the fruitless task of trying to turn the tide of public sentiment, and now fills his editorial page with learned disquisitions on base-ball and similar abstruse questions. Age can not wither nor custom stale the infinite variety of our Bro. Blakely.

JAMES FUSON was given 15 years at Pineville for rape. He had previously served 10 years for the same offense in Tennessee. His is certainly a case which properly belongs to the jurisdiction of Judge Lynch.

HON. GREEN R. KELLER, of the Carlisle Mercury, who was clerk of the last House, is a candidate for re-election with a good chance of being chosen. He is a good man and a good clerk and we hope to see him honored.

-In common with many others we regret to hear that Rev. T. J. Godbey will likely not be returned to the church here by the approaching conference. He is an excellent man, a fine pastor and has done a good work here.

-Rev. R. A. Haden, who will sail for China, Sep. 26, as a missionary from the Stanford and Danville Presbyterian churches, preached a good sermon here Sunday morning. On our first page will be found an article from Rev. Ben Helm giving the proposed plan for his support.

"We thank God," said Rev. John Bell Gibson, in pronouncing the benediction after a sermon from a brother of another church who had spoken of the conflicting translations, "We thank God that Thou has made the Scriptures so plain that a way faring man though a 'simpleton' may not err therein," and the other preacher is at a loss to know if he meant him.

-A large crowd heard Rev. Ben Helm discourse for 1 1/2 hours on "Scriptural Baptism from a Bible Standpoint," at his church Sunday night, and all admitted whether they agreed with him or not that he advanced some absolutely indisputable arguments that the Pedo-Baptists are right in their mode of baptism. The mode, however, is not so important as that the heart of the receiver is right. The speaker said that in a ministry of 23 years this was the first sermon he had devoted exclusively to the subject and it may be as many more years before he does so again. His commission is to preach Christ and to make Christians, not Presbyterians or other Pedo-Baptists.

The programme consisted of music, songs, recitations, dialogues and tableaux, in all of which the participants acquitted themselves splendidly. Among those who took part in the entertainment were Misses Maggie Bunn, Sallie Boon, Katie Napier, Mary Martin, Marcie Boon, Cora Baugh, Sophie Douglas, Lizzie Kirkpatrick, Maud Douglas, Stella Stephenson, Alice Sowder and Sabra Hays, Messrs. Fred Mahaffey and W. G. Napier. "The Price of a Drink," by Miss Marcie Boon, "Roses on the Soldier," by Miss Mary Martin, and "Carlew Must Not Ring To-night," by Miss Stella Stephenson and Mr. W. G. Napier, were exquisite and deserve especial mention. The music for the occasion was furnished by the Maywood orchestra, headed by that skillful musician, Mr. William Ennis, and was no small feature of the programme. The affair netted about $10, which will go toward buying literature for the Sunday School.

-Our Crab Orchard correspondent fails to note the death of Mrs. Will Severance, which occurred last Wednesday, after a protracted illness with a compli-

-Wallon Craft is down with typhoid fever, but the attack seems to be very light. His grandmother, Mrs. Lizzie Pearl, is also confined to her bed with something similar, but if it is the same disease the case has not fully developed yet.

-If the many people who will attend the fair want to see a sight, they should go around by our common school house and look at the out house provided for the 200 children (male and female) who will attend the school. There is not a town outside of London on a railroad but what does better.

-Next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday (if it don't rain too bad) there will be more people here than come for any other attraction, not excepting even a circus. The Laurel County Fair always brings them in carriages, spring wagons, road wagons, horse-back and on foot and this will not be an exception. The premiums on everything have been increased, the new race track is a daisy and the accommodations for the sight-seers ample for the thousands who will attend, and they will surely be here. Ed had better come up.
