IN THE VIRGINIA MOUNTAINS.

COLD SULPHUR SPRINGS, VA., Aug. 19.—It is very tiresome for a man of my disposition and manner of life to sit idly around a watering place, especially when I know I ought to be at home at work, but the rest of the family enjoy the change and the delights of mountain air and romantic surroundings and I endure it for their sake. The place has been greatly improved in recent years and under the management of Mr. J. S. Craig and his excellent wife is really a model family resort. Not a great deal of attention is paid to conventionalities here and very little display of dress. People come here to rest and recuperate and enjoy themselves in the various ways provided for them, and every one sees how much he can add to the pleasure of others. It is just such a place as a man, who can content himself to do, to while away a hot summer, but I am not built that way and I begin to long for a return to the old haunts and the treadmill duties and to relieve to some extent the one who has so faithfully and so satisfactorily done my work.

The most beautiful women in the world are not congregated here, though there are several exceedingly fair to look upon. One especially is as pretty as a dream, as airy as a fairy and as charming as ever wore dimity, whatever of woman's apparel that may be. The girls here are modest and exceedingly decorous, but at the "White," just up the road, there are very much given to wearing dresses unusually low in the neck, in some cases so very low that it makes a modest man like myself blush. What a tyrant fashion is! It will make some women do most anything, and between the ball room and the beach, cause them to display more of their charms than we staid and sleepy Stanford people ever dreamed of decent women displaying. Fashion's decrees make it all right, however, but the average man in choosing a wife is much more apt to select one who leaves such things to the imagination, instead of making ocular demonstration of them. Like at all the resorts the lack of single men is sadly felt here. Two or three callow youths make up the crowd and they are really to be envied, the sweetness that is wasted on them. A good looking fellow like Harve Helm or George Farris would be worth big money to the management as a drawing card and make the longing damsels as happy as big sunflowers.

The democrats of Virginia are counting on 60,000 majority for Bryan and a solid democratic delegation to Congress and there seems good reason for the hope that is in them. There are no factions here and the party seems to be thoroughly united, most of the gold democrats have fallen into line and there was never a better show for success. A meeting of the State committees was held at Richmond yesterday, when very flattering reports were brought up from all parts of the State. The fact that the republicans will make an effort in but three of the Congressional districts show that they too have about given up the fight.

The first rain of consequence since the 4th of July, and it is not very consequential, fell in the early morning hours Saturday and it has made the air as cool and as bracing as middle October. It is too late to help the crops much, but it is a God-send to suffering humanity, that has groaned and travailed under the intense heat of several weeks. The oldest inhabitant here says he never saw a hotter spell of such long duration, while everybody else pronounces it unprecedented. At an altitude of 1,800 feet above the sea one would hardly believe it, but it gets as hot here as almost anywhere in the middle of the day. The nights though are delightful and last night blankets and comforts were in demand.

The inimitable Polk Miller entertained in the ball room of the Allegheny Hotel last night and gave the guests the richest treat they have enjoyed for years. He was in fine spirits and told about the "Negro be to de war" with more than his usual flow of anecdote and humor. Today he is the lion of the hour and everybody talked to him and claimed to have him at one place or another while he "tended like" he knew each so naturally that the best of them was fooled. He is en route to Kansas City for a lecture tour and may visit Stanford again before the season is over.

Lexington, with its famous Washington & Lee University and the Virginia Military Institute, is not far from here, nor is the world renowned Natural Bridge. In the quaint little city, lie the remains of the Confederacy's two most noted generals, the immortal Lee and that wonderful military genius, Stonewall Jackson. The former's are in a sarcophagus in the Grace Memorial Church attached to the University, the latter's in the village burying ground. Until recently when a handsome monument was erected in his honor by the women of the South, who are as faithful and true in peace as they were noble and sacrificing in war, a plain marble slab simply told the name and age of the most remarkable man that the civil war developed, and who was finally killed by his own men, when he ventured on grounds forbidden by his own orders, which he either forgot or overlooked. It is a privilege to stand by the dust of such illustrious men, who gave up peace, honor and distinction to battle for the cause they believed to be just, but which was destined to be lost. Speaking of Lee reminds me that Roosevelt has just paid the highest eulogium, which shows that he has lucid intervals in his mad desire for office and honors. He says he was by far the greatest general on either side of the war and a man in every way above reproach.

The Virginians may honor the memory of President John Tyler in these parts, but they nor the country at large, have done much for him in the way of marking the spot where he lies in Hollywood, Richmond's beautiful city of the dead. A slab not exceeding four feet high and three inches thick, giving his name, dates of birth and death, is all that marks the grave of the president who served all but one month of the term to which William Henry Harrison was elected. In this cemetery also sleeps the remains of two other presidents, Jas. Monroe and Jefferson Davis. The grave of the former is very modestly marked but a large statue of the 5th president of the United States, who served two terms, appears in a park named in honor of him, in the western part of the city of Richmond. A bronze figure of the beloved president of the Confederate States has been erected over the spot where his remains repose, and on the pedestal upon which it stands, these words: "Jefferson Davis. At Rest. An American soldier, a defender of the constitution. Born in Christian county, Ky., Jan. 3, 1808, died in New Orleans, Dec. 6, 1889. West Point class of 1828, member of Congress from Mississippi 1845-6, colonel Fourth Mississippi Rifles, Mexican war, 1846-7, Brigadier General U. S. Army May 1847, U. S. Senator 1857-51, Secretary of War 1853-7, U. S. Senator 1857-61. President Confederate States of America. Faithful to all trusts, a martyr to principle, he died the most maligned of all American soldiers and statesmen. Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake for theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven. Erected by his wife, Varina Howell Davis, and daughter, Margaret Howell Davis Hayes, Nov. 9, 1899." Nearby an angel in marble, bending in suppliant attitude, tells where the ashes of Varina Annie Davis, who was born in the Confederate White House, lie, the beautiful monument having been erected by the United Daughters of the Confederacy to the lovely woman, who was known as the "Daughter of the Confederacy." The lot is on the extreme west of the cemetery on a bluff overlooking the falls of James River and it is as beautiful a spot as nature could make. W. P. W.

It is telegraphed from Boston that Beans will be the republican catchword and vote-catcher in the ensuing campaign. It will work well at that place and seem like old times in this part of Kentucky. It will be remembered by old citizens that the late Milton J. Durham, politically speaking, won several races for Congress by the judicious distribution of beans. THIS is not the first race that Mr. Yerkes has made with the hope of being elected by the disgruntled of the opposition. He also ran against the late Joseph Barbour for the judgeship of the superior court to afford the disgruntled an opportunity to rebuke the actions of the famous Lenoan convention, and he only lacked about 20,000 votes of being elected. As a phrase-monger, Ex-Senator J. J. Ingalls, who has just died, had few equals. His productions, whether of tongue or pen, were collections of beautiful flowers interspersed with sharp-tongued thorns. His castigation of Grover Cleveland on the floor of the Senate and his report of the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight were his greatest bids for fame. MCKENZIE MOSS, a Brown democrat, is the nominee of his brethren and the republicans for Congress against Hon. John S. Rhea, in the Third district. When the Little Giant of Logan gets through with Mr. Moss he will think a rolling stone has run over him and gathered him in besides. Mr. B. A. ENLOE, who founded the Louisville Dispatch, is trying to go to Congress from the 8th Tennessee district. We had lost sight of Brer Enloe, and supposed that he was so mortified over the course of his founding, that he had gone into a hole and pulled it in after him. TEDDY ROOSEVELT is to speak in Louisville October 11, at Ashland the next day and probably at other places in the State. On account of his recent outrageous stump performances, Teddy will hereafter be known as the "Rough Speaker."

THE secret service department has information that an anarchist has left Naples for this country to murder the president. Having seen Naples, this villian is ready to die.

THE TRIAL AT GEORGETOWN.

The end of the long-drawn out trial at Georgetown is a relief to the people. The result of it, which consigns Caleb Powers to the penitentiary for life, is no less welcome to all who stand for law and for the punishment of crime. Not that we are disposed to rejoice over the calamities of any fellow-creature; we are even moved to genuine pity for a life, not wholly unpromising at the outset, which has ended so suddenly in inexplicable infamy. But justice and the general good needed and demanded this verdict. A contrary one, or even a mistrial, would have been a public disaster. The proof, even the imperfect report of it in the press, left no doubt whatever of the prisoner's guilt. No one, not a moral as well as intellectual idiot, could hear or read this proof without saying, as Porter the republican juror promptly said, "the man is guilty." Even his own testimony, taken with the admitted facts, showed that the prisoner was one of the chief movers, and even proud of it, in the most causeless, cruel and cowardly crime of the State's history.

There is a further subject of gratulation among good citizens. The trial was conspicuously fair and impartial. He was tried in a community justly celebrated for its chivalrous sense of fair play. The municipal and college authorities of that pleasant little city seem to have sided over, in sympathy for the prisoner. The ever-ready pity of the women for the man in jail was with him. He had a jury of kindly farmers, four of whom shared his political prejudices. He was defended by attorneys of abounding zeal and more or less ability. He was tried before a judge who showed such absolute fairness, frequently under circumstances to exasperate a saint, and administered such even-handed justice always inclining to the side of mercy, as more than justified the predictions of his friends and compels the applause of the country. If such a jury under such conditions rendered such a verdict, unannounced and without hesitation, comment would be superfluous.

But the yearners for "civil liberty" and apologists for murder are difficult to satisfy. Some of them are beginning to mutter that the trial judge acted without precedent and to the prejudice of the defendant in amending one of his instructions to the jury at a certain stage of the proceedings. This may, perhaps, justify a passing notice. After four speeches had been made on each side, and before the concluding arguments for the defense and prosecution, the judge corrected an oversight in one of the instructions previously given by explaining to the jury what was meant, as applicable to the proof in the case, of the words "unlawful act," theretofore used. He told them that in the case on trial these words meant, and were limited to that meaning, a banding together to alarm or intimidate or do bodily harm to any person or persons in the city of Frankfort. It was not a change of the law as given, but a proper explanation and limitation of it. It was exactly the same principle of law, put in a concrete instead of the abstract form, the latter having often been disapproved by the courts of last resort. It was as much to the advantage of the accused as of the Commonwealth. It could not, if given in the outset, have altered the speeches of counsel by a word or syllable. It was open to a four hours comment afterward from Gov. Brown, the prisoner's chief counsel. And finally, it was far from being without precedent, as these critical gentlemen may learn by inquiry of any young man who may be reading law in their respective villages. In fine, as the good Bishop Butler hath it, No rogue e'er felt the halter draw With good opinion of the law.

C. P. HUNTINGTON once owned a newspaper and lost $56,000 in its operation, and then went to railroad and died a multi-millionaire. Avoid journalism, young man, but go to railroad-log, learn of its ways, and be rich.

JOHN YERKES, the race horse, was beaten at Saratoga. After the Kentucky Derby in November, no race horse will ever again be hoodooed with that name.

POLITICAL.

Ex-Congressman Towne will be set on the trail by the democratic committee to answer Teddy Roosevelt as he campaigns out West.

Attorney General R. J. Breckinridge spoke to a large crowd at the Harvest Home Fair near Burlington, Saturday afternoon and as usual, made a good speech.

The democratic executive committee of the 3rd district has called a convention to meet at Bowling Green Monday, Aug. 27, to nominate a candidate for Congress. County conventions will be held on Saturday, Aug. 25.

Inspector Hines has found a shortage of over $1,500 in the accounts of Frank A. Pastour, county clerk of Caldwell county. The inspector will also report that Pastour's office has been conducted with unbusinesslike methods and in disregard of the law.

Croker has won his fight against Bird S. Coler, controller of New York City, and an up-State man will get the democratic nomination for governor of New York. It is said the honor will go to either D. Cady Herrick, John B. Stanchfield or Smith M. Weed.

The democratic State campaign committee has declined the proposal of the republican campaign committee for joint debates between Gov. Beckham and Mr. Yerkes. Gov. Beckham placed himself at the disposal of the committee, but it thought that his duties as governor, especially during the extra session of the Legislature, would prevent a general stamping tour and that such a debate would not be "consistent with the dignity of the office, nor with his duty to the people of the Commonwealth."
