Looking as trim and neat as an eighteenth century boat could be expected to look, the frigate Constellation is lying at the cob dock in the New York Navy Yard, where she has been sent for repairs. She makes a strange contrast to the monster battleship now under construction in the yard, but she has a warm place in the hearts of the officers, many of whom have served on her in the past.

The Constellation is the oldest ship in the United States Navy. She was launched in 1797, and some officers believe that was before Nelson's flagship, the Victory, was launched.

The old Constellation was started before the Constellation, but there was some delay in launching her, and the Constellation was the first in the water.

It is doubtful if there is even a splinter of wood in the old frigate that was in her the day she was launched. She has been completely overhauled more times than the oldest naval officer can remember. All that was left of the original ship in 1883 was a part of the keel and a few ribs, and the navy officers believe these have been taken out.

The uniform success of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in the relief and cure of bowel complaints both in children and adults has brought it into almost universal use, so that it is practically without a rival, and as every one who has used it knows, is without an equal.
