State to Help Farmers.

By the co-operation of the United States Government and the State of Kentucky through the College of Agriculture of the State University, plans have been perfected by which a system of instruction in agriculture can be established in each county and the farmers be taught modern methods without leaving their own homes. Indeed the experiments and demonstrations will be made on the farms themselves and the farmers can thus have the problems of advantage and interest to him worked out upon his own place, and to the improvement of his own property. It is thought that by far the most effective methods of improving agricultural conditions in Kentucky will be by thus bringing the instruction to the farmer's own door, instead of by means of lectures at special points and through communications by mail, which have been the only method heretofore employed.

It is sought to put the system of agricultural instruction practically on the basis of the present public school system, and each county can have an agricultural instructor who will devote his attention exclusively to that county, and each group of twelve counties will have a supervisor to whom the instructors report and the supervisors will in turn report through one of the three main divisions into which the work has been divided to the director of agricultural extension at the College of Agriculture at the State University.

Prof. Fred Matchler, of Bowling Green, will have charge of one of the three divisions, and other experts will be chosen soon to direct the work of the other two divisions. By the plan which has been perfected any county which will raise a comparatively small share of the expense will be furnished with an instructor and have all other advantages of the system, the agricultural extension division applying the bulk of the cost from the large fund provided by the State and national Governments. The amount required from the counties is so small that it believed that all of them will take advantage of the system as soon as the opportunity becomes known, and already Madison and Henderson counties have been placed upon the roll. Frank Montgomery, an agricultural expert, has taken charge of the work in Madison county, and arrangements have been completed for an instructor to be sent to Henderson county.

Too late! Too late!

If I had only saved my money

I could have accepted this offer and spent my remaining days in comfort. But Now, it is too late! too late!!

This man did not save his money, thinking a chance to use it would never come. When a splendid opportunity came he had no money and doomed himself to live in poverty for the rest of his life—blaming himself every remaining moment for his folly and drawn out misery.

You will one day have such an opportunity. Take heed. Start saving NOW. Come in and talk it over—Today.
