TOWN ORDINANCE.

New Street to be Named after Father Fee

Be it ordained by the Board of Trustees of the Town of Berea, Ky., that there be a new street, to be called Fee street, established in said town, extending from Adams street, otherwise called Depot street, southerly to Chestnut street, conforming to the following description: The said street is to extend from Adams street (otherwise called Depot street) in a southerly direction to Chestnut street, as follows:

The west side is to begin at the north east corner of the town lot held by Samuel Lucas on Adams street and follow the east line of said lot and of the lots owned by W. T. Mahaffey and the heirs of Miss Mollie Early, S. 2 1/2 degrees, W. 455 feet; thence S. 1 1/2 degrees W. through land belonging to Colored School District No. 1, and across the lane in front of same, 276 feet, to the north east corner of a lot of land now occupied by Robt. H. Chrisman; thence S. 12 degrees E. 155 1/2 feet to the S. E. corner of Bicknell & Early's store, on the north line of Chestnut street.

The east side of said proposed street begins 34 feet easterly from the point first named on the south line of Adams street, and extends in a straight line along the west boundary of lands owned by Robert Engle and the heirs of John G. Fee, S. 2 1/2 degrees W. 455 feet, maintaining the width 34 feet; thence along the west line of the Fee heirs' land, the lot of Mrs. Isaacs, and that of Mrs. Sallie Baker, about S. 1 1/2 degrees W. 276 feet, making the street at this point 28 feet in width; thence with Mrs. Sallie Baker's line about S. 12 degrees E. 155 feet to the north line of Chestnut street, making the street at this extremity 26 feet in width.

SUBSCRIPTION SCHOOL FOR COLORED CHILDREN.

There are more than a hundred young colored children in Berea who are deprived of the opportunity to attend College this year, and are thus left to spend the winter in idleness and without improvement.

The Institution is helping its former colored students to attend school elsewhere, but does not venture to extend aid to any colored person who is seeking improvement at any place within twenty-five miles of Berea.

Under these circumstances it seems a plain, neighborly and Christian duty to do something for the colored young people of Berea, and Mrs. Frost has taken the responsibility of engaging teachers and opening a Subscription School for colored persons.

The school will begin at 8.35 on Monday, Jan. 16, in the Colored School House, and continue 12 weeks. The teachers are Henry A. Laine and Pattie Turner. All pupils must enter within two weeks of the term, pay one dollar in advance (no part of which will be returned if they leave before the end of the term), and do two hours work a week, or 24 hours during the term, as directed by the teachers; and no pupils will be admitted who are not provided with the regular books required by the State.

The first thing is to rally the colored people to this opportunity. Prof. Mason has kindly volunteered to give a lecture each week on Gardening, and Mrs. Hill will give instruction each week in Home Science. Every effort will be made to give opportunities something like those of the Model Schools in Berea College. Now, will the colored people respond? We cannot afford to have two teachers unless there are a large number of pupils.

And the next thing is to secure the money to carry on this select school. The dollar which the pupil pays will not cover one third the expense necessary. Mrs. Frost becomes responsible to the teachers for their pay, and relies upon friends to contribute the balance. It is the duty of every citizen and every Christian to prevent the growth of ignorance and idleness among us, and in particular those who think that they have gained something by having these children deprived of the opportunity to attend the Institution should be forward to assist them in getting schooling elsewhere.

Contributions will be gratefully received by the Post Master at Berea, or by Mrs. W. G. Frost. Every gift will be personally acknowledged.

A LETTER FROM CALEB POWERS.

The citizens and students of Berea contributed fifty dollars to Caleb Powers for the purpose of helping pay the expenses of his fourth trial; and said sum together with the names of those who contributed, were sent to Mr. Powers. Following is a letter from him on receipt of the money:

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 9, 1905.
R. B. Roberts,
Berea, Ky.

My dear Sir:—I am just in receipt of your favor of recent date, containing $50.25 for my benefit together with the names of the contributors and amounts donated by each. Please do me the further favor to express to each donor my warmest and kindest gratitude for his or her interest, sympathy and financial aid. To the students—some of whom are doubtless laboring under financial difficulties themselves, and who are striving to make out of themselves, with needed funds, the best men and women they are capable of becoming—I feel profoundly grateful. For many years I have felt a keen interest in Berea, its college, and the success of its students.

It is hardly necessary for me here to reassert my entire innocence; but it may be interesting to my friends to know that I propose to fight my case until my hair is gray with years, or win it. Thanking yourself and other contributors again and again, I am, gratefully,

CALEB POWERS.

A Popular Fallacy.

Are women credulous? Ask the beauty doctor, ask the vendor of quack medicines, ask the fortune-teller, ask the bargain salesman. The answer in all cases must be "Yes, a certain class of women are credulous, pitifully so." But this class is far from being representative of the whole sex, and to judge women by this class alone would be equivalent to judging the other sex by the class whose greatest mental effort is to "trump up" a new fib each night to explain their absence until 11 p.m. from the bosom of their families.

Granted that a woman does reach her conclusions more speedily than a man does, is she, therefore, to be ticketed as wanting in judgment? It is admitted that her conclusion is correct quite as often as the more lengthily reasoned-out one of a man, but because it is more hastily arrived at, a woman is said to be guided not by reason, but by instinct.

Instinct in this case, however, is only another name for the power of quick reasoning. In the early stages of the world's history woman had a hard struggle for existence, and the preservation of herself and her offspring more or less depended on the speed with which she was able to "think out" a difficult position and act. Those who were able to reason quickly survived. This gift of quick reasoning has been transmitted through all the ages. Hence the fallacy that "women jump to conclusions."—Scottish American.

FREDERICK STATUE

Attempt to Destroy or Deface the Emperor's Gift to the American People.

A BOMB WAS EXPLODED NEAR IT.

An Examination of the Missile Shows the Substance Used Was Not of Sufficient Strength.

It is Estimated From One To Five Pounds of Explosive Were in the Case, Which Was Blown To Atoms.

Washington, Jan. 11.—Somewhat of a sensation was caused in this city by the discovery of what appeared to be a definite and serious attempt to blow up or deface the statue of Frederick the Great, given to the United States by Emperor William of Germany and erected in the arsenal grounds near the army war college on the Potomac river water front. It was believed at first that a crank had made a real effort at destruction of the statue, but after a careful investigation the police officials say the material used was incapable of producing damaging results. A hole in the soft mud about six inches deep by six inches wide and 12 inches long, 13 shattered window panes in nearby buildings and five or six splashes of yellow clay on as many granite steps summed up the damage done by the bomb which had been placed on a high picket fence surrounding the statue. An analysis and examination of the bomb shows the substance used had not sufficient strength to wreck the fence.

A Slight Clue.

The facts developed by Detectives Muller and Cornwall, who were assigned to the case, show that a Negro hackman named Arthur Cartwright took the man thought to have perpetrated the affair from the Pennsylvania railroad to the statue. Apparently he had just arrived in this city. His baggage consisted of a small and worn dress suit case. The man told the hackman to drive slowly to the barracks ground. On learning the exact location of the statue he ordered the driver to walk his horse and it was soon after noon when the statue was reached. The stranger alighted quickly as soon as the horse stopped, ran up the short flight of granite steps leading to the westerly terrace of the war college esplanade, and disappeared behind the pedestal of the statue. A minute later he ran back to the cab and the hackman noticed that the stranger's grip which he carried was missing. The stranger jumped into the cab and ordered the hackman to drive out of the grounds as quickly as possible. Soon after getting out of the grounds the stranger jumped out, paid the hackman and disappeared toward the river front.

A Loud Report.

A Negro named Ellis saw the satchel or suit case and hooking a section of scantling through the handle raised the suit case off the wire hook which held it to the fence and with a swing landed the bomb on the ground at the foot of the steps. An instant later it exploded. Soldiers and civilians all through the reservation heard the report. Nearly all force was taken from the explosion because the substance was confined by nothing heavier than the imitation leather sides of the small suit case. It was variously estimated that from one to five pounds of the substance were in the suit case which was blown to atoms.

Three pieces of it were picked up afterward, as were the pieces of wire which held the "bomb" to the wooden fence, and a twisted piece of metal which is believed to have been part of the frame of the suit case.

A tiny section of cigar box with an equally tiny piece of burnt candle fastened in the bottom also was found.
