

New Year's Ghost Party

HERE is a pleasant old superstition that jolity in a house during the first week of the New Year brings pleasure and happiness to that household during the entire year. There are many interesting ways of entertaining a New Year's party, but the favorite of all is the masked dance or party, and the most interesting way of having this sort of entertainment is to give a ghost party. The invitations read in this manner:

Our good old Father Time Has promised to convene The shades of many notables To meet you New Year's morn. We'll look for you, you know, To help to make things go, And incidentally to meet Some ghosts you're sure to know.

There should be 20 or more guests, and after the invitations have gone out, the hostess has a little private chat with her guests over the telephone. She requests them to come dressed to represent some famous person now dead, pantomime, words, gestures and costume being used to carry out the impersonation.

Dressed in a misty black robe covered with stars cut from gold paper, the hostess will receive her guests in a room draped all in white. Sheets or cheesecloth can be used for this. No word is spoken until a little red lamp distributes cards and pencils to the assembled guests. Then each in turn speaks some word or does some stunt to suit his or her character. The person guessing the greatest number correctly receives a pretty copy of the book, "Ghosts I Have Met."

Games, contests and dancing will follow, and the supper or refreshment table will be filled with things tempting enough to attract even the most ghostly appetite. The table decorations should correspond with the festivities of the season. A New Year's pie made of crepe paper over a deep pan is filled with dainty little favors for the guests or cards upon which some funny rhyme is written for each individual guest. Part of the entertainment for the evening may be the telling of fortunes, informing each guest of their fate for the coming year.

Whatever you do, don't let anyone shatter your faith in New Year's resolutions. They are the best things ever if you know how to handle them, and the most discouraging things if you don't.

Right on the Job.

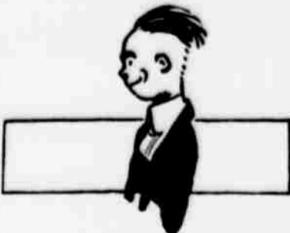

"Just because she was married, a woman the other day undertook to lecture me on the way I ought to behave."
"Why didn't you tell her to mind her own business?"
"She'll say that was what she was doing—you see, she was my wife."

Governor Says Strike Riots Are Threatened in Kentucky Town—Situation Serious.

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 26.—Four companies of Kentucky National Guard men were ordered to Newport, Ky., by Governor Morrow. They were sent as a result of his orders growing out of a strike at the Newport rolling mills and without a request from local peace officers. Reports from private investigators, the governor said, indicated that conditions were such that the peace officers could not handle the situation. "Serious danger exists," the governor said, "that at any moment an outbreak may occur, causing the loss of dozens of lives and the disgrace of the state."

Two colored gentlemen were engaged in conversation when one of them became very much annoyed by the persistent attention of a large fly.
"Sam, what kin' a fly am dis?"
"Dat am a hoss fly."
"A hoss fly am a fly what buzzes 'roun cows, 'n' hosses 'n' jackasses—' 'You ain't makin' out for to call me no jackass?"
"No, I ain't makin' out for to call you no jackass, but you can't fool dem hoss flies."—Forbes Magazine.

Lawyers Subject to Indictment for Negligent Management of Offices

By ROGER SHERMAN, Vice-Pres't Ill. State Bar Ass'n.

After making a most careful and painstaking study of the subject of business systems in law offices, the committee on office management of the Illinois State Bar association reports that in its opinion lawyers generally are subject to indictment for criminally negligent management of their offices. Such an indictment would charge them with failure to install modern methods, systems and appliances; failure to respond to the demand for practical lawyers and practical methods; failure to transact their clients' business along business lines and to dispatch it as a business proposition; and failure to appreciate that they have a business of their own, distinct from that of their clients.

Today, more than ever before, the public demands "service." It must have results, not delays, not excuses, not explanations, but results. The man who carries the message to Garcia gets his reward. The business man or lawyer who cannot "deliver the goods," will not succeed in the long run. Business systems and business devices in the law offices are merely a means to an end; they enable the lawyer to give the public what it wants—quick results. While "honesty is the best policy," system is a necessity to the progressive lawyer. If a lawyer has not developed a system that will enable him to give quick and satisfactory service, his clients will go to another lawyer who is better equipped.

It is a simple proposition and whether it is approached from the point of view of the lawyer or his client, the conclusion is the same—the lawyer's best interest. From the client's point of view it means quick and effective results and profit or at least a saving to him; hence satisfaction with the lawyer, willingness to pay a fair fee, to recommend the lawyer to others, and himself, to take future business to him. From the lawyer's point of view it means time saved, results accomplished, an intelligent charge to the client, saving of wear and tear on the lawyer and ability to do more business, to make more money and to get and keep more clients.

Today the lawyer who is experienced in business matters has the call. Every lawyer should have a business training in and out of college. He constantly advises on business policies and frequently becomes the executive head of great enterprises. It may seriously be argued that the lawyers would better serve the public and themselves if they would abolish the old traditions of the profession and become business men with knowledge of the law.

BALED MUSIC

"THERE'S going to be a great concert at the opera house tonight," said the retired merchant, "and if you'll go along with me, I'll pay your way and buy you five cents' worth of peanuts. I'm sure nothing could be more liberal than that."

"You'll break yourself up in business if you go around wasting your substance in that fashion," replied the hotel keeper. "But you will have to hunt up another victim. Since I bought a phonograph and a bunch of records I have quit going to concerts. There's nothing but vanity and vexation of spirit about an entertainment of that kind. It's advertised to start at a certain hour, say eight o'clock, and you are credulous enough to think that the specifications will be lived up to. You break a hame strap to get there in time, and when you arrive, at ten minutes to eight, you find you're the first one there. You sit around, waiting for an hour or two, and people walk on your feet and sit down on your hat and make things unpleasant as possible.

"By the time the curtain goes up, you are wishing you had possessed sense enough to stay at home. But, being there, and having paid for the privilege, you determine to hold her nose again the bank, as it were.

"The entertainment usually is opened by a talksmith. The man who makes a few remarks always looms up at such entertainments, and should be taken to jail for obtaining money under false pretenses. When he has said all that he can think of, the artists begin to dish up the music. It may be elegant music—it usually is. But you can't enjoy it in comfort, for the gentleman with the large splay foot, in the seat directly behind you, persists in beating time with that organ until he drives you frantic. If you turn around and dot him in the eye, you will be ejected from the building.

"Then you will find that the woman with a shrill, carrying voice, who has heard better singers, sits right in front of you, and she keeps on talking in a maddening way. The last concert I attended had a fine contralto who sang some stem-winding songs of the kind we all like. But the woman with the shrill voice was right in front of me, and I could hear her saying: 'Really, you should hear Margaret Keyes or Christine Miller sing that selection; this woman is impossible as a vocalist.'

"Then a man with a hectic voice and a name that he imported without paying duty on it, stood up and whinnied like a doggone zebra, and we were expected to believe that he was singing a Neapolitan song. I never heard anything that filled my nerves the way that voice did. It recalled the halcyon days when my father used to sharpen a hick-crow with a rasp. Well, when he finished his first number, the applause was frantic, and he reared up and did it all over again. Then the applause was louder than ever, and he whinnied something else. They kept that blamed pirate there for half an hour, and I don't know when I suffered so much.

"The hall was overheated, and I was jammed in the middle of a row of seats so I couldn't get out without climbing over a number of ladies and gentlemen. We were kept there for three hours, and when I got out I swore by my Sunday hat I'd never go to another public concert.

"Next day I bought a phonograph and a lot of records of the kind I like, and now I enjoy my music. I start it when I get ready, and quit when I am tired. No punk singers are encored. the general economic situation and decide upon an agenda. It is said the council will be asked to invite the interested powers to name a commission which shall draw up a general plan for the rehabilitation of central Europe and Russia. The United States and Germany will be included in the representation, and possibly Russia also.

DAIL EIREANN had a fine time last week with the Irish treaty. Verbal shillies were used unsparingly by both sides, and outsiders grew rather weary of the debate. De Valera had a surprisingly large following in his opposition to the treaty and their utterances were so passionate that they had their effect on the emotional Irish. On Thursday Michael Collins moved that the Dail adjourn over the holidays, reassembling on January 3. The motion was carried, despite the opposition of De Valera, by a vote of 77 to 44. At this writing the correspondents in Dublin are predicting that the vote on ratification of the pact will be exceedingly close, and a tie vote is not improbable. De Valera signified his willingness to have the matter settled by a plebiscite, and that course may be adopted. Miss Mary MacSwiney and other determined foes of the treaty, asserted openly that whether it were ratified or not, the war in Ireland would continue, since the Irish republic is far from dead.

The Sinn Feiners last week resumed their violent operations in County Tyrone and County Londonderry. One of their bands kidnaped 15 men and the special constabulary tracked them to Sperrin valley, where a battle was fought in which six Sinn Feiners were killed and a score wounded.

WAR has broken out between the Far Eastern republic in Siberia and the faction led by Merkuloff in Vladivostok. The latter, it is alleged, has the support of the Japanese, and soviet Russia is sending troops and material to help the Chita government. The Siberian commander of Primor province has warned Japan to remove the White Guard and other armed units from the neutral zone before noon of January 7.

IN COMPLIANCE with the recommendation of President Harding, both the senate and the house have passed a bill authorizing the President to spend $20,000,000 in the purchase of corn, seed grain and preserved milk for the relief of the starving people of Russia and for spring planting in areas where the seed grains have been exhausted. In the debate Senator Borah made a fierce attack on the American government's Russian policy.

"The Russian revolution in many respects has been indefensible," said Mr. Borah, "but it has resembled practically all the other great revolutions in history. Our policy towards it has been indefensible, brutal, inhuman, cruel and intolerable. The United States should recognize the existing Russian government. Whatever we may think about its form, it is the government de facto and as such it should be recognized.

"The bill should be passed purely as a measure of charity. It won't help the farmers of this country. I don't believe we have a constitutional right to pass it. It sets a bad precedent, but I have not the heart to oppose it. I simply want to voice my protest against the policy of our government towards the Russian government."

ANOTHER "bloody revolution" occurred in Portugal some days ago, opening with heavy cannonading along the Tagus and fighting in which severe casualties on both sides were reported. Cunha Leal, who had just formed a temporary ministry, was driven into flight with his followers. And then apparently the Portuguese censors got busy, for up to date no further information about the revolt has come.

IN THE death of Col. Henry Watter-son, which occurred in Jacksonville, Fla., on Thursday, the United States lost the last surviving exponent of personal and individual journalism. For more than half a century his brilliant, powerful editorials in the Louisville Courier-Journal were read by his fellow citizens with delight, whether or not they agreed with his views. For a great many years he was an influential leader in the Democratic party and a prominent figure in its national conventions. "Marse Henry," as he was affectionately known, retired in the spring of 1919.

WITH the arrest in Warsaw of Wolfe Lindenfeld, the American authorities believe they have cleared up the mystery of the great explosion in Wall street last year. The man has made a long confession, giving the names of the plotters and participants and laying the outrage at the door of the Russian communists.

Expenses

Cheaper than Staying at Home

Berea's friends have made it possible to provide an education at a low cost. All students do some manual labor which is credited on their school bills, while many earn much of their way. These low expenses are not secured by unworthy deprivations, but students live comfortably at these rates. Half day school for those who bring least money. All applicants must make room reservations in advance by a deposit of four dollars.
