Constance had turned from the strenuous Oakley to the newcomer with a sense of unmistakable relief. Her mother, too, brightened visibly. She did not entirely approve of Ryder, but he was always entertaining in a lazy, indifferent fashion of his own.

"I see, Griffith," the doctor said, "that you are going to support Kenyon. I declare it shakes my confidence in you," and he drew forward his chair. Like most Americans, the physician was something of a politician, and, as is also true of most Americans not professionally concerned in the hunt for office, this interest fluctuated between the two extremes of party enthusiasm before and nonpartisan disgust after elections.

Ryder smiled faintly. "Yes, we know just how much of a rascal Kenyon is, and we know nothing at all about the other fellow except that he wants the nomination, which is a bad sign. Suppose he should turn out a greater scamp! Really it's too much of a risk," he drawled, with an affectation of contempt.

"Your politics always were a shock to your friends, but this serves to explain them," remarked the doctor, with latent combastiveness. But Ryder was not to be beguiled into argument. He turned again to Miss Emory.

"Your father is not a practical politician or he would realize that it is only common thrift to send Kenyon back, for I take it he has served his country not without profit to himself. Besides, he is clamorous and persistent, and there seems no other way to dispose of him. It's either that or the penitentiary."

Constance laughed softly. "And so you think he can afford to be honest now? What shocking ethics!"

"That is my theory. Anyhow I don't see why your father should wish me to forego the mild excitement of assisting to reject my more or less disreputable friend. Antioch has had very little to offer me until you came," he added, with gentle deference. Miss Emory accepted the compliment with the utmost composure. Once she had been rather flattered by his attentions, but four years make a great difference. Either he had lost in cleverness or she had gained in knowledge.

He was a very tried young man. At one time he had possessed some expectations and numerous pretensions. The expectation had faded out of his life, but the pretense remained in the absence of any vital achievement. He was college bred and had gone in for sustenance. As for music, he was familiar with the airs from the latest popular operas, but the masterpieces were utterly unknown, except such as had been brought to his notice by having sleeping cars named in their honor, a practice he considered very complimentary and possessing value as a strong commercial endorsement.

He felt more and more lonely and aloof as the evening wore on, and it was a relief when the doctor took him into the library to examine specimens of iron ore he had picked up west of Antioch, where there were undeveloped mineral lands for which he was trying to secure capital. This was a matter Oakley was interested in, since it might mean business for the road. He promptly forgot about Miss Emory and the objectionable Ryder and in ten minutes gave the doctor a better comprehension of the mode of procedure necessary to success than that gentleman had been able to learn in ten years of unfruitful attempting. He also supplied him with a few definite facts and figures in lieu of the multitude of glittering generalities on which he had been pinning his faith as a means of getting money into the scheme.

When at last they returned to the parlor they found another caller had arrived during their absence, a small, shabbily dressed man, with a high, bald head and weak, nearsighted eyes. It was Turner Joyce, Oakley knew him just as he was beginning to know every other man, woman and child in the town.

Joyce rose hastily, or, rather, stumbled to his feet as the doctor and Oakley entered the room.

"I told you I was coming up, doctor," he said apologetically. "Miss Constance has been very kind. She has been telling me of the galleries and studios. What a glorious experience!"

A cynical smile parted Ryder's thin lips.

"Mr. Joyce feels the isolation of his art here."

The little man blinked doubtfully at the speaker and then said, with a gentle, deprecatory gesture, "I don't call it art."

"You are far too modest. I have heard my foreman speak in the most complimentary terms of the portrait you did of his wife. He was especially pleased with the frame. You must know, Miss Constance, that Mr. Joyce usually furnishes the frames, and his pictures go home ready to the wire to hang on the wall."

Mr. Joyce continued to blink doubtfully at Ryder. He scarcely knew how to take the allusion to the frames. It was a sore point with him.

Constance turned with a displeased air from Ryder to the little artist. There was a faint, wistful smile on her lips. He was a rather pathetic figure to her, and she could not understand how Ryder dared or had the heart to make fun.

"I shall enjoy seeing all that you have done, Mr. Joyce, and of course I wish to see Ruth. Why didn't she come with you tonight?"

"Her cousin, Lou Bentick's wife, is dead, and she has been over at his house all day. She was quite worn out, and she sent you her love."

Ryder glanced again at Miss Emory and said, with hard cynicism: "The notice will appear in Saturday's Herald, with a tribute from her pastor. I never refuse his verse. It invariably contains some scathing comment on the uncertainty of the Baptist faith as a means of salvation."

But this was wasted on Joyce. Ryder rose, with a sigh.

"Well, we toilers must think of the morrow."

Oakley accepted this as a sign that it was time to go. Joyce, too, stumbled across the room to the door, and the three men took their leave together. As they stood on the steps the doctor said cordially, "I hope you will both come again soon, and you, too, Turner," he added kindly.

Ryder moved off quickly with Oakley. Joyce would have dropped behind, but the latter made room for him at his side. No one spoke until Ryder, halting on a street corner, said, "Sorry, but it's out of my way to go any farther unless you'll play a game of billiards with me at the hotel, Oakley."

"Thanks," curtly. "I don't play billiards."

"Not? Well, it is a waste of time, I suppose. Good night!" and he turned down the side street, whispering softly.

"A very extraordinary young man," murmured Joyce, rubbing the tip of his nose meditatively with a painty forefinger. "And with quite an extraordinary opinion of himself."

A sudden feeling of friendliness prompted Oakley to turn his hand through the little artist's arm. "How is Bentick bearing the loss of his wife?" he asked. "You said she was your cousin."

"No, not mine; my wife's. Poor fellow! He feels it keenly. They had not been married long, you know."

NINETEEN YEARS HAD PASSED AWAY

When Father and Children Were Reunited.

Story of Daniel Tyree, Who Left Marshall County Years Ago and Was Found.

IS VISITING IN THIS CITY.

Nineteen years ago Dan Tyree left Marshall county without telling anyone where he was going or how long he was going to stay. His wife was dead, but he left three small children aged 11, 9 and 7, the oldest being a boy, Neil who is now the popular carrier on Route No. 4, out of Benton. The girls are now grown to womanhood and married, one being in Paducah, the other in Farmington, Graves county.

About a week ago Neil Tyree heard that a man by the name of Tyree was in Evansville, Ind., who claimed to have lived in Marshall county, and thinking that it might be his long-absent father, he left last Saturday night for that place, and almost by accident found him Monday morning. Mr. Tyree did not recognize his son until he made himself known to him, and then the natural feelings of the father asserted themselves and a most affectionate greeting was given to the son. Neil stayed with his father in Evansville until the next day, and finally persuaded him to return with him to his old Kentucky home. He is now in Paducah visiting his daughter and brother Hiram Tyree, and will be in Benton Saturday.

Thus after an absence of nineteen years he returns to find the three small children grown to maturity, all married and have families of their own.

During his absence he has been wandering from place to place, having been in several states south and west, but finally has returned to his relatives who are rejoiced that the wanderer has returned.—Tribune Democrat.

Mr. Daniel Tyree and his brother, Hiram Tyree, of this city, are visiting Mr. Daniel Tyree's daughter, Mrs. M. Owen, at Tyler.

BETRAYED BY DOG

And Hansen Was Arrested on Murder Charge.

Hammond, Ind., Aug. 4.—Betrayed by his dog, Thomas Hansen, of Chicago, is in jail here, accused of the murder of Jack Lannen at Gary yesterday. The posses which had been scouring the country for the murderer returned to Tolleston, and were about to disperse, when it was suggested that the dog, known to have been with the man who killed Lannen, be made play the detective. The animal was taken to Gary, where it was supposed he would seek his master's tent. With a yelp of joy he went bounding out among the workmen's tents at Gary until he came to the tent occupied by Hansen.

GLASS SMASHED

When Hack Struck a Post and the Mourner's Throat Was Cut.

Baltimore, Aug. 4.—Walter K. McElroy, aged 54 years, was almost instantly killed yesterday while returning from the funeral of Israel Parry, of Bayonne, N. J., whose body had been brought here for burial. McElroy was alone in the back the horses of which became frightened and ran away. The vehicle was dashed violently against a post and demolished and McElroy's throat was cut almost from ear to ear by the broken glass of one of the windows. The driver was seriously injured.

The Rev. W. E. Cave will go to Michigan for a rest.

The Rev. E. H. Cunningham is assisting the Rev. J. R. Stewart, who is conducting a meeting in the county.

Services of interest will be conducted at the Cumberland Presbyterian church, corner Sixth street and Kentucky avenue, tomorrow, by the Rev. B. P. Fullerton, D. D. After having been pastor of the Cumberland Presbyterian church in St. Louis for fifteen years Dr. Fullerton resigned his pastorate to become secretary of the Home Missions in the reunited Presbyterian church. His work in this field has just begun and he is striving to acquaint himself with the local conditions. He is especially desirous of addressing all the Cumberland Presbyterians and Protestants of the city tomorrow, but he is an eloquent speaker and it will be a treat for all Christian people that hear him.

FELL FROM BUGGY

Under Horses Hoofs and Two Children Were Killed.

Lehigh, Iowa, Aug. 4.—In a runaway accident today two children of Alex Johnson were killed, and two more children and the mother badly injured. The accident happened on a hill, down which Mrs. Johnson and her children were driving. The dashboard gave way, throwing the mother and two children, who were killed, under the horses, where they were trampled to death.

Notice to Contractors.

Bids will be received at the office of the city engineer, in the city of Paducah, Kentucky, up to 2 o'clock, August 25, 1906, for the construction of about seven (7) miles of combined sanitary and storm water sewers, in the city of Paducah, Kentucky.

Plans and specifications will be on file in the engineer's office, in the city of Paducah, Kentucky, after August 15, 1906. A certified check of $1,000 must accompany each and every bid.

The city reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

D. A. YEISER, Mayor.

Paducah, Ky., August 4, 1906.

Paralysis and piety are not the same.

SEWER EXTENSION OF SEVEN MILES

Will be Made by City Before Winter Sets In.

Automobile Owners Must Secure Tags Monday or Face Judge Puryear Tuesday.

CARPENTERS THANK MAYOR.

Almost seven miles of sanitary and storm water sewers will be added to Paducah's system this fall, and it is expected at the city hall that the contract for the construction will be let by August 25. The aim of Mayor Yeiser and the sewer committee of the general council is to provide adequate service by the High school building this fall. The first section will be laid from Ninth street to Thirteenth street west, taking in the territory between Trimble and Tennessee streets.

Starting the work soon after August 25, two good months' work, at least, it is believed, can be put in, and as provisions will be made for rushing the construction, the city officials are looking forward to the completion of the system before cold weather puts a stop to outdoor operations.

After the Autoists.

Automobile owners will have to secure their tags by Monday night, or take chances on a stiff fine in addition to the cost of the tags. License Inspector Lehnhard said today that on Tuesday he will swear out warrants for the arrest of those who have not purchased tags for their machines.

Carpenters Are Pleased.

Mayor Yeiser is in receipt of a letter of thanks from the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners for the appointment of Alonzo Crandell to the board of councilmen from the Fourth ward. The new councilman is a member of the organization and a leader among union labor men in the city.

NEWS OF KENTUCKY

Association Reunion.

Guthrie Ky., Aug. 4.—The second anniversary of the organization of the Dark Tobacco Protective association, formed for the purpose of securing better prices for tobacco raised in the dark tobacco district of Kentucky and Tennessee, will be observed at this place on September 22 with a monster barbecue. Preparations are now being made by a committee to entertain 25,000 people, and it is expected that the gathering will be the largest meeting of farmers ever held in the south. The association was organized at the fair grounds in Guthrie in 1904, and in the two years of its existence has more than fulfilled the expectations of those who started the movement which resulted in its formation. Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, Mr. Henry Watterson, Congressman A. O. Stanley, Ollie James, of Kentucky, and John Wesley Gaines, of Tennessee; Senator-elect "Bob" Taylor, of Tennessee, and several other prominent men will be asked to attend the meeting and make speeches. The celebration held last year was attended by 18,000 farmers and their families.

The river fell 0.6 in the last 24 hours, the gauge showing a stage of 10 feet this morning. Weather clear and business at the wharf good for the season.

The Kentucky will leave this evening at 6 o'clock for the round trip to the Tennessee river. The rapidly falling river has left mud deposits on the banks which make it difficult to land freight.

The John S. Hopkins was the regular Evansville packet today. No Evansville packet Sunday.

The City of Saltillo is expected to arrive out of the Tennessee river tonight on the return trip to St. Louis. There are 100 passengers making the round trip on this boat.

The Dick Fowler went to Cairo this morning at 8 o'clock and should arrive here tonight at the same hour.

The Frisco railroad boat Condor started to Paducah yesterday after tea but an engine broke down compelling it to return to Jopka.

The Savannah left St. Louis last night and probably will arrive here Sunday morning early.

The smallest stern-wheel boat ever seen here is at the south end of the wharf-boat. It is the Cora B. Gasoline is the power.

The Butteroff will arrive from Nashville Sunday night late and leave Monday noon for Clarksville.

The Peters Lee is at Mound City on the ways receiving repairs. The Georgia Lee is running in the Memphis and Cairo trade. These boats will not resume the Memphis-Cincinnati trade until winter or late in the fall.

The Dunbar will be placed on the dry docks Monday. The Bob Dudley probably will take the place of the Royal running between here and Golconda, while that boat is being repaired.
