Small Crowd Hears Hays.

Eddyville, August 31.—Attorney General N. B. Hays, candidate for governor, spoke here yesterday afternoon to a crowd of 84 people, many of whom were ladies. He made his usual speech and in addition took up the management of the prison here, charging extravagance in its administration, and that more officials than necessary were employed. He spoke at Lamasco 12 miles in the country, last night.

BIG CROWD HEARS BRYAN'S SPEECH

taken to enforce the anti-trust law and my gratification is not lessened by the fact that he has followed the Democratic rather than the Republican platform in every advance he has made. It has been a great embarrassment to him that the platform on which he was elected was filled with praise of the Republican party's record rather than with promise of reform, even the enthusiastic support given him by the Democrats has enabled the champions of the trusts to taunt him with following Democratic leadership. He has probably gone as far as he could without incurring the hostility of the leaders of his own party. The trouble is that the Republican party is in a position to apply effective and thorough going reforms because it has built up through special legislation the very abuses which need to be eradicated.

Before any intelligent action is taken against the trusts we must have a definition of a trust. Because no corporation has an absolute and complete monopoly of any important product, the apologists for the trusts some times insist that there are really no trusts. Others insist that it is impossible to legislate against such trusts as may exist without doing injury to legitimate business. For the purpose of this delusion it is sufficient to draw the line at the point where competition ceases to be effective and to designate as a trust any corporation which controls so much of the product of any article that it can fix the terms and conditions of sale.

Legislation which prevents a monopoly not only does not injure legitimate business but actually protects legitimate business from injury. We are indebted to the younger Rockefeller for an illustration which makes this distinction clear. In defending the trust system he is quoted as saying that, as the American beauty cannot be brought to perfection without pinching off ninety-nine buds, so that the one hundredth bud can receive the full strength of the bush, so great industrial organizations are impossible without the elimination of the smaller ones.

The policy of the trust magnates will be to insist upon reasonable legislation and then they will rely upon their power to corrupt legislatures and to intimidate executives to prevent the application of any remedies which would interfere with the trusts. Our motto must be, "a private monopoly is indelible and intolerable" and our plan of attack must contemplate the total and complete overthrow of the monopoly industry.

We need not quarrel over remedies. We must show ourselves willing to support any remedy which promises substantial advantages to the people in their welfare against monopoly. Something is to be expected from the enforcement of the criminal clause of the Sherman anti-trust law, but this law must be enforced not against a few trusts as at present, but against all trusts and the aim must be to imprison the guilty, not merely to recover a fine. What is a fine of a thousand dollars, or even ten thousand dollars to a trust which make a hundred thousand dollars while the trial is in progress? If the criminal clause is not good to be enforced it ought to be repealed. If imprisonment is too severe a punishment for the eminently respectable gentleman who robs eighty millions of people of hundreds of millions of dollars annually the language of the statute ought to be changed, for nothing is more calculated to breed anarchy than the failure to enforce the law against first criminals while it is rigidly enforced against the petty.

Recent investigations have brought to light that nearly all crookedness revealed in the management of our large corporations has been due to the duplication of directorates.

A far reaching remedy was proposed by the Democratic platform of 1900, namely, the requiring of corporations to take out a federal license before engaging in interstate commerce. This remedy is simple, easily applied and comprehensive. The requiring of a license would not embarrass legitimate corporations—it would severely inconvenience them—while it would confine the predatory corporations to the state of their origin.

The Tariff Question.

The tariff question is very closely allied to the trust question and the reduction of the tariff furnishes an easy means of limiting the extortion which the trusts can practice.

While absolute free trade would not necessarily make a trust impossible, still it is probable that very few manufacturing establishments would dare to enter into the rust if the president were empowered to put on the free list articles competing with those controlled by the trust.

Railroad Question.

The railroad question is also interwoven with the trust question. Nearly all the private monopolies have received rebates or secured other advantages over competitors. Absolute equality of treatment at the hands of the railroads would go far toward crippling the trusts and I rejoice that the president has had the courage to bring the question upon congress. While the law, as it was finally distorted by the senate, is not all that could be wished, it deserves a fair trial.

Rate regulation was absolutely necessary and it furnishes some relief from the unbearable conditions which previously existed; but we must not forget that the vesting of this enormous power in the hands of the commission appointed by the president introduces a new danger. If an appointive board has the power to fix rates, and can, by the exercise of that power, increase or decrease by hundreds of millions of dollars the annual revenues of the railroads, will not the railroads feel that they have a large pecuniary interest in the election of a president friendly to the railroads?

"I have already reached the conclusion that railroads partake so much of the nature of a monopoly that must ultimately become public property and be managed by public officials in the interest of the whole community in accordance with the well defined theory that public ownership is necessary where competition is impossible. I do not know that the country is ready for the change. I do not know that a majority of my own party favor it but I believe that an increasing number of the members of all parties see in public ownership the sure remedy for discriminations between persons and politics and for the extortionate rates for the carrying of freight and passengers. Believing, however, that the operation of all the railroads by the federal government would result in a centralization which would all but obliterate state lines, I prefer to see only the trunk lines operated by the federal government and the local lines by the several state governments."
