An Appreciation of the Irvin Cobb.

Of "Funabashi," the new musical comedy that Thomas W. Ryley will put on at the National theater, Washington, December 23, to run during the Christmas holidays, a New York special to the Washington Post says: "The book is by Irvin S. Cobb, of the New York World, and the music by Safford Waters. The comedy is drawn on sharp, political lines, and deals with the visit of an American secretary of war to the Orient. The leading character is a roly-poly giant built much on the proportions of Secretary Taft, and the itinerary of the secretary's to the Orient is closely followed as the comedy unravels. The play is named after a seaport town off Tokio, where the action takes place. It was at the suggestion of the author that the play was billed for its debut at Washington. All of the leading figures portrayed in the comedy will be easily recognized in the official life of the capital. Humor and satire balance in such attractive proportions that it is likely that Washington statesmen will find much amusement in continual allusion to the incidents and acts in the present administration. Irvin S. Cobb, the author, is a Southerner, and one of the youngest and most gifted of New York's humorists. He has scored success after success in his comedy writings here. "Funabashi" is his first effort at play writing. He is well known in Washington. The musical world knows a good deal of Safford Waters, but he has also won distinctive place in the architectural craft, his designing of the interior decorations of the Metropolitan club's home, in Washington, being one of the most noted bits of work. He has set the words for many of Mr. Cobb's songs to music, which is likely to create a considerable furor in the ranks of comic opera builders. Author and musician will attend the opening of the play in the capital.

MINIATURE MINT.

New York, Nov. 13.—But for the curiosity of two country boys in the Ramapo hills, Herman Henze would still be turning out counterfeit dollars and half dollars that defy detection at the hands of the most expert government officials. When arrested Henze said his desire for counterfeitfeiting was to realize funds to build a flying machine. He said he had solved the problem of aerial navigation and all he needed was the money to demonstrate it.
