

AN UP-TO-DATE DRUGGIST
 says it is surprising how many old-fashioned remedies are being used, which goes to show that it is hard to improve some of our grandmothers' old, time-tried remedies. For instance, for keeping the hair dark, soft and glossy, nothing equalling our grandmothers' "sage tea" has ever been discovered. Although, by the addition of sulphur and other ingredients, this old-fashioned brew has been made more effective as a scalp tonic and color restorer. Nowadays when our hair comes out or gets faded or gray, instead of going to the garden or garret for herbs and making the "tea" ourselves, we simply go to the nearest drug store and ask for a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulfur. This preparation is sold by all leading druggists for 50 cents and $1 a bottle, or is sent direct by the Wyeth Chemical Company, 74 Cortlandt St., New York City, upon receipt of price. For sale and recommended by W. J. Gilbert.

Henry Clews' Idea of the Situation Following Death of E. H. Harriman.

MONEY SITUATION IN EAST

New York, Sept. 26. (Special.)—News developments in the financial district have this week been unusually suggestive and important. They intimately concern the readjustment of financial relationships and point with particular emphasis to the strengthening of the community of interest principle in the railroad and banking world, thus promising a more complete and a more legitimate and lasting arrangement than has heretofore existed. This is a direct result of the passing of Mr. Harriman and is in essence a criticism of that noted financier or of his work. As the world progresses men arise from obscurity; they do work for which they are eminently fitted and which is seemingly bound up with them as a life work others that cannot do so well. Mr. Harriman was such a man—a man of the hour. Railroad transportation interests of this country required a leader for upbuilding and reconstruction on practical transportation and financial lines. Mr. Harriman accomplished more than should have been expected from a single embodiment of mind and muscle. He left many plans for farther expansion incomplete, but had he lived to the century mark, with his great energy, perception and self-reliance unimpaired, there still would have been plans incomplete. It may, therefore, be said without disrespect for the dead that that leader's plans were as nearly complete as they ever would have been and that the railroad development of the country can therefore spare him without great loss—even with some gain. Further upbuilding would have meant further concentration and the creation of a situation that neither our public nor their representative law-makers would have permitted. Jealousies of an insurmountable nature had already arisen; a man of such strength of mind and character must necessarily make enemies, for he was imperious to outside offers of harmony and co-operation; and as the leader of five other of the strongest and most influential capitalists and most courageous men in the community who trusted him implicitly and without question, he was a man all powerful. Without that backing he could have accomplished comparatively little. But now that he has gone the other five themselves become leaders and thinkers, and the jealousies and the stolid self-reliance of their leader have passed as a factor in the situation. The work of upbuilding that he began and carried to such a successful stage will now be carried on under new auspices; it will not be allowed to retrograde. Ex-Judge Lovett, who, possibly more than anyone else, has in mind the goals for which the dead financier was striving, has been chosen chairman of the executive committee of both the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific boards, and two important members of his syndicate backers have entered as directors both the systems named.

The Situation. These changes are significant of the strength of the hands in which these properties will remain and are accompanied with announcements of other changes in financial relationships that are hardly less important from the standpoint of general financial harmony. In the course of time some other leader quite as strong-minded, as independent and determined as Mr. Harriman will probably arise and demand recognition; but this is not an immediate prospect and until time shall produce him we have before us a period of harmony in financial and railroad circles that has probably never before so completely existed. This view is not without its larger significance. Our railroad and great industrial enterprises are demanding recognition as properties; less is thought of the financial leadership connected with them. This is a condition that is militating towards their solidity and their desirability as investments; and the greater the diversifications of the financial responsibility connected with them the freer they may be expected to invite investments on a purely commercial basis. An indication of the progress towards an enlarged and more comprehensive community of interests is the entrance at this particular time of Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, Jr., into the directorate of the National City bank, an institution associated very closely with the powerful Standard Oil's financial interests who were so prominent among Mr. Harriman's strongest backers. Pointing in the same direction is the election of Mr. James Stillman, chairman of that bank, as director in the Big Four railroad system and the announcement of a proposed $20,000,000 issue of bonds by that system. The re-entrance into active work of Mr. Stillman and also Mr. Jacob H. Schiff is also significant of a desire of the large interests to secure a proper readjustment after Mr. Harriman's death, since both these gentlemen have been endeavoring to cast off the cares and responsibilities of details, and their action may be considered temporary pending final readjustments which shall follow more mature and general consideration.

Money.
 The strength in the money situation will not be surprising to the readers of these articles last week. The agricultural sections are now actively calling on their eastern correspondents for funds to finance the great agricultural products and are severely depleting the bank reserves at this center; but it is still fair to assume that a large part of this money will be released before mercantile channels require its most extended use. On the other hand, our large banking interests and some of the most powerful market operators have again been borrowing in London and on the continent; and the

The kidney secretions passed very irregularly and their unnatural appearance gave proof that my kidneys were affected. advance in money rental rates that has taken place this week has materially increased our foreign indebtedness. Cable advices from all the prominent financial centers of Europe indicate a world-wide awakening to the real money situation, and best information suggests that the days of superabundance in the money supply have definitely ended for this season. The money situation, therefore, suggests prudence and discrimination. Remunerative interest rates for the banks are not necessarily a handicap to an upward movement of important dimensions, especially if such rates are the result of improved conditions in trade and industry. Aside from the iron and steel industry there is, however, slight indication of any general trade reoperation. But in the particular instance in question the improvement is taking on almost unbridled activity and may well be permitted to counteract deficiencies in other directions. The steel corporation is at the present time credited with operating virtually its entire capacity. The independent companies are participating in the general activity, and the steel situation as a whole may be considered in connection with the influence of steel securities as makers of general security values. The impression is becoming general that at their quarterly dividend meeting in October the directors of the steel corporation will restore the common stock to a 4 per cent basis, and there can be no question that the strength of the market during the week, manipulated though it unquestionably has been, has strengthened the rank and file of Wall Street operators to optimism. This means a popular disposition to exaggerate the influences that permit a favorable interpretation and to ignore as far as possible those of a different trend. Cautionary signals are at the moment unpopular but none the less necessary. When powerful market leaders who themselves own the great bulk of floating securities decide to put prices up with a view of distributing these securities during the excitement attending the manipulated advances, the market becomes one for the nimble trader. The most conservative description of the situation at the moment is that prices are unquestionably high—but they may go higher as the result of the new situation of control that has already been outlined. Meanwhile there can be no question that the higher money range will encourage the release of money tied up in low income yielding investments and long range investments should therefore be undertaken at the present time with extreme caution and discrimination. For the quick in-and-out trader the market is a favorable one.

WORSHIP IN NEW CHURCH EDIFICE

GERMAN LUTHERAN CONGREGATION RE-DEDICATION.

Sermon By the Rev. F. W. Herzberger, of St. Louis, Before Great Audience.

HISTORY OF ORGANIZATION

A large congregation that filled the German Lutheran church attended the re-dedicatory service yesterday morning, when the first service was held in the building for four months. Quite a change greeted the members, and instead of the old church, practically a new church was used for the service. Decorated with palms, the church presented an attractive appearance, and the entire membership was pleased with the improvement. The pastor, the Rev. William Grother, presided over the ceremony, but the sermon was preached by the Rev. F. W. Herzberger, of St. Louis.

"How Amiable Are Thy Tabernacles" was his subject, and in the sermon he held out that the beauty and the care of the church usually revealed the spirit in which the members held God. He said that the pioneer members of the church had struggled and denied themselves in order that the building might be erected and he thought it was eminently proper that the younger members of the church should see that it was kept in good physical condition. Words of compliment were showered upon the congregation.

Following the sermon, the Rev. William Grother gave a short history of the Lutheran church in McCracken county, and from the original charter read the names of the charter members. As far as he had been able to learn he said that Henry Beyer, Sr., in 1845, was the first Lutheran to reach McCracken county. Soon, however, he was followed by other immigrants, and on the veranda of his home the first service of the Lutheran church was held. A short time later the St. Matthew's church was erected, and the small church is still standing in the county. Members of the Lutheran church began to inhabit the city, and in 1869 the German Lutheran church was organized. Of the charter members only Henry Mammen and Louis Kolb survive. The congregation erected the present church in 1871 and it was dedicated September 13, 1871. Since its dedication the church has seen few changes, but the building has been inadequate for the increased congregation. The church has been increased in size by the removal of the rear wall, and made modern in many respects.

Five Years

of Heart Trouble Cured by Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy
 "Before I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I had been suffering from heart trouble for over five years. I had pains in my left side, and under my shoulder blade, could not sleep on the left side, and was so short of breath the least exertion would bring on the most distressing palpitation. I had scarcely taken a half bottle of the Heart Remedy before I could see a marked change in my condition. When I had taken six bottles I was cured."
 MRS. C. C. GORKEY,
 Northfield, Va.
 If there is fluttering or palpitation it is an indication of a weakness of the nerves and muscles of the heart. It is not necessarily diseased—just weak from over-work. The heart may be weak just the same as the eyes, stomach or other organs. You can make a weak heart strong by taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy. Get a bottle from your druggist, take it according to directions, and if it does not benefit he will return your money.

 A well-known advertising expert responding to the toast "Sartorial Progress" at the banquet of the recent convention of the Tailors' National Association, spoke somewhat as follows:
 "I am glad that you clothiers who advertise nowadays print pictures of men's and boys' fashions. Thus you smarten up the country and tend to abolish the dreadful custom of cutting down dad's suit to boy's size. I remember how in the distant past my little brother rushed whimpering into the fitting room one night.
