Her Liver.
A Liverpool lady had given her butcher her daily order over the telephone, and later in the day decided to change it a little and countermand an order she had given for some liver.

Ringing up her butcher she said: "You remember that I gave you an order for a pound of liver a while ago?"

"Yes," was the reply.

"Well, I find that I do not need it, and you need not send it."

Before she could put down the receiver she heard the butcher say to some one in the shop: "Take out Mrs. Blank's liver. She says she can get along without it."—TR-BITS.

T. G. Elder, of 1801 Monroe street, Paducah, carpenter at the Illinois Central railroad, says: "A friend of mine who had procured Doan's Kidney Pills at DuBois, Kolb & Co.'s drug store and used them in his family recommended them so highly that I gave them to a little girl of ours, 10 years of age. We had given her so much medicine for kidney weakness that she absolutely refused to take anything, but finally coaxing succeeded. Before she completed the use of two boxes we stopped giving her the remedy as she no longer required it."

NEW ACT FORGIVES TRANSGRESSIONS

Demurrer of Standard Oil to Indictment

Insist That Elkins Law Is Repealed By New Rate Law Passed By Congress.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY'S VIEW.

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 12.—The fight of the Standard Oil company against the ten indictments against the Standard Oil company of Indiana, which were returned August 29, was begun today in the United States district court before Judge Landis. The indictments contain 6,428 counts, and the Standard Oil company has entered a demurrer. It is upon the latter that the proceedings of today were based.

The attorneys for the Standard Oil company contended, in support of their demurrer, that section 10 of the rate law passed by congress, June 29, repeals the Elkins law under which the government is bringing the action against the company, and that the indictments are not sufficiently specific, because they do not comprehend all of the elements in the case.

The contention that the Elkins law is repealed by the rate law, and that the offenses alleged can not, therefore, be punished under the former act, was contradicted by United States District Attorney Sims, who declares that section 13 of the revised statutes covers the case, in that it states that the repeal of an old statute does not condone prior offenses unless the repealing act so specifies in particular.

A $30,000 Toothpick.

Charles M. Schwab was in a remissive mood the other night while conversing with several friends in the corridor of the Waldorf-Astoria. He pulled a toothpick from the pocket of his waistcoat and after glancing at it thoughtfully, said: "Do you know that I never look at a toothpick without recalling the time when an acquaintance of mine made a large sum of money—$30,000—and it was all due to a common little hotel toothpick. It was over three years ago when my friend was dining at his hotel, and after he had left the restaurant he directed his steps toward Broadway. He had walked scarcely a block when his tooth began to ache. A particle of food had wedged firmly between two of his teeth, and finding that he was without a toothpick he started back to the hotel to get one. When leaving the hotel the second time he overheard John W. Gates remark to a friend that he felt positive Steel common would be selling at 10 before the end of the summer. Now, my friend was not well posted on the steel market, but knowing that it was Gates who made the remark and also the great weight his word carried in such matters, he decided to take advantage of the tip and it did not take him long to place his order with a broker to sell 1,000 shares of steel at 42. Well, everybody knows what steel did in the summer of 1904, going down below 9, but my friend ordered his trade to be closed around 10, and he cleaned up a profit of $30,000, which he never would have made had it not been for the little toothpick."—New York Letter.

MAN NOT BORN TO READ.
Naturally Long Sighted and Eyes Not Adapted to Close Work.

Many persons when they see the multiplication of bespectacled school children are apt to conclude that the eyes of the race are degenerating, says the New York Times. Civilization, it is said, is responsible for the evil. We read too much, we use our eyes in ways that are "contrary to the order of nature" and we suffer the penalty. Did not Andrew Lang declare some time ago that "man was not born to read?"

It is reassuring to learn from Dr. C. W. Saleeby, the Spencerian interpreter and popular English writer on scientific and philosophical subjects that the talk of eye degeneration is "undiluted nonsense." It is not, he learnedly explains, a question of function, but of a radical change of function, of necessary adaptation to the needs of a different environment. It is literally true that "man was not born to read." The eye of the "natural" or unevolved man is "focused upon eternity"—let the symbolists note this fact.

The original man is long-sighted. "The eye which we have inherited from our ancestors," says Dr. Saleeby, "is one which is used without effort at long range, merely containing within it an apparatus enabling it at the cost of nervous and muscular effort to be used at short range." But every known civilization involves reading and writing—that is, the constant use of the eye at short distances—hence the need of appropriate glasses.

Dr. Saleeby admits that it would be an advantage to humanity, as it now is, to have an eye naturally focused upon near subjects, but, he adds: "If one started to make a list of the bodily characters of man which the amazing development of his intelligence has rendered more or less appropriate to his needs than originally one would require a volume."

High Price for a Cent.

A specimen of the first cent struck in the United States mint in 1793, with thirteen links in a circle on the reverse, was sold for $82 yesterday at the end of a two days' sale of coins held at the Hotel Bartholdi by Geoffrey C. Adams. Daniel R. Kennedy auctioned them off.

Some of the prices exceeded any ever paid before. Two half cents, struck in 1826 and 1852, brought $12.50 and $33 respectively. Of the cents struck in 1749 fifty-six varieties were disposed of; two minor varieties bringing $30 each. A flying eagle cent of 1856 brought $12. Six pattern trade dollars issued in 1873, brought $24. Much interest was shown by those present in the tokens that at one time passed for money in this country. One showing the head of Andrew Jackson on one side and the inscription, "The Bank Must Perish," on the other, which passed for a cent during President Jackson's administration in the late '30's, brought $22.50.

Several fine colonial pieces of this country were sold. An Annapolis shilling brought $4. A pine tree shilling, struck in Massachusetts in 1652, sold for $15, while a threepence of the same coinage brought $4.60. A twopence "Rosa Americana," struck in England in 1722 for use in this country, sold for $11, and a copy of the New York cents, which during the latter part of the eighteenth century were coined at a private mint in Newburg, brought $3.70.—*N.
