Young Man Breaks Arm at a Dance at the Park.

Two Small Accidents on the Railroad—Other Injuries.

Mr. Frank Melber, who runs a blacksmith shop at the Wallace park street car station, was seriously injured this morning about 7 o'clock while trying to shoe a kicking mule.

The mule had been "roped" and the shoe prepared for nailing. Mr. Melber had gone to pick up the animal's leg when it kicked forward and struck him just under the right eye. He was knocked down and rendered unconscious for about half an hour. Dr. Pendley was summoned and dressed the wound.

Jim Baldwin, colored, while riding a wheel on Seventh street between Jefferson and Broadway at noon today collided with a plasterer's wagon and was seriously hurt. He was thrown from his wheel and the wagon ran over him, breaking two ribs on the left side, one of which penetrated the lung.

Dr. J. D. Robertson and Dr. Adrian Hoyer attended him. He resides on Fourteenth street near Clay. His injury is dangerous, but it is thought he will recover.

William, the 12 year old son of Mr. W. W. Powell of West Broadway, fell from a seat in the Wallace park pavilion at the dance last night and broke both bones in his left arm. It is the third time the same arm has been broken. Dr. Vernon Blythe brought him to the city and Dr. Lightfoot assisted in dressing the injury, which will disable the young man for quite awhile.

Louis Townsend, aged 12, son of Mrs. Linda Townsend of Madison street, fell from his wheel at Fifth and Monroe streets last night and sprained a knee and skinned his scalp. He was not seriously injured, but his cries caused much excitement for awhile. Dr. W. C. Eubanks dressed the injury.

Mr. Hugh Atkins, clerk at Michael's, fell through the elevator shaft to the cellar yesterday afternoon and painfully injured an elbow. He was on the first floor and thought the elevator was also there, but it proved to be several feet below when he stepped down.

J. W. Russell, a negro brakeman of the I. C. of this city, was caught between two cars at Princeton last night and had his hip and back slightly bruised. He was fixing a knuckle on one car when another car backed on him. He is not seriously injured.

W. T. Woods, a foreman on the Illinois Central, had an arm broken last fall and the bones failed to properly knit together. He is now here in the hospital again, having had the member rebroken.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Burton of 519 Ohio street, a girl.

QUEUES ON PARADE

Chinese Cases Heard Before U. S. Commissioner Gardner.

Three Claim Nativity and One Claims He Was Naturalized—Chinese Lawyer Attends Trial.

DECISION EXPECTED TODAY

The cases against several Paducah Chinamen alleged to be living here unlawfully, and involving novel questions at law and a class of people not represented very extensively in Paducah, were taken up this morning by U. S. Commissioner W. A. Gardner at the custom house, and are in some respects different from any ever tried in this state, if not entire country, before. The four Chinamen who appeared in the role of defendants were charged with having come to this country in violation of the law requiring a certificate of admission. The accused are Ah Wing, Ah Pang, Jo On and Lin Sing. The attorneys for the defense are Attorneys Bagby and Martin of the city, assisted by Attorney Bernard Flexner, of the firm of Bodley, Basken and Flexner, of Louisville. The prosecution is being conducted by Mr. M. H. Thatcher, assistant U. S. district attorney, of Louisville. Mr. J. S. Plummer, of Chicago, the United States inspector who had the Chinamen arrested, and Charles Kee, of Boston, a Chinese lawyer and government interpreter, are also here in the cases. Kee's little son accompanied him.

Commissioner Gardner called the court to order shortly after 9 o'clock and the principle proof was presented in the form of depositions except one case, where it was necessary to call in Judge D. L. Sanders and Councilman J. S. Jackson to testify as to the good character and veracity of Ah Way, a local Chinaman who was introduced as a witness for the defense. There were two depositions taken in Memphis read and this, with the testimony of the defendants and Judge Sanders and Mr. Jackson, concluded the evidence, which was closed at noon. This afternoon arguments will be heard and a decision probably be rendered before night.

The cases are of unusual interest and importance as they may be the means of deciding points of law bearing on future international relations with China. They also signify a great deal to the defendants, for the result will mean one of two things to them, give up all they have here and return to their native country, or remain here and enjoy what their thrift and economy have brought them.

Lin Sing is the only defendant who is not a resident of the United States by birth, having come here when a boy and subsequently having taken out naturalization papers. The attorneys have made a clear case out for the other three, they think, as all evidence produced showed that Ah Wing, Ah Pang and Jo On were born in this country.

The attorneys at first took up the three former cases as one and were prepared to ask for a continuance in the latter's case, but subsequently decided to try them all at once.

Charles Kee, the Boston lawyer and interpreter, is a stylishly dressed and highly educated man. Some of the lawyers say he is one of the brainiest men they ever met. The Chinese as a rule are very reticent and timid, and profess utter ignorance of a great many things they know all about. Lawyer Kee is not that way, however. He came from the east, where the press is a power, and today when one of the Chinamen declined to give a reporter some facts inquired about, claiming he didn't know, the Chinese lawyer quickly turned and said inquiringly "Newspapara?" When informed that it was he said to the Chinaman, "Give it to newspapers," and the cautious Celestial who had only a few moments before pretended to be so ignorant quickly and unhesitatingly furnished the information sought.
