L. G. Mercer, a theatrical manager, at present with "Quo Vadis," told a story at the Grand the other day of a hotel experience which he had some years ago at Streator, Ill., says the New York Times.

"There was only one hotel in the town, and I either had to stop there or camp out. It was night when I registered. In assigning me a room the proprietor warned me that his service was not good. I discovered that he was truthful.

"My room was a double one on the top floor. Tired, I soon was fast asleep.

"About 10 o'clock I was awakened by rain falling on my face. Thinking it might be only a small leak, I moved to the other side of the bed. It, too, was wet. I rang for the porter and asked for a dry room. He said it was no use, that all leaked.

"Try the other bed," he added, "if that, too, is wet, ring and I'll bring you an umbrella."

"The other day I was fairly stumped," says a bookseller to a New York Times man, "when a party came in and asked me if I had 'Wait a Minute.'"

"Never heard of it," said I.
"That is funny," he answered, "it is being talked about, and I am anxious to read it."

"I looked all over my book lists and satisfied myself that there was no such book in existence, and he went away disappointed, and with an impression, I fear, that I was not keeping what I take pride in—a first class book store.

"The day following, however, he came back smiling and asked for 'Tarry Thou 'Till I Come.' He has taken the precaution this time to write the title down."

Sometimes the modest, diffident man appears to disadvantage, and wishes he had been more inquisitive. An instance was noted the other day in a local establishment. A well dressed man entered and inquired of the young lady who advanced to learn his business "Is the manager in?"

"No," she replied, "he is not in. Is there something I can do for you?"

He informed her in a manner indicating that he would disdain to transact business with a personage of less importance than the manager, that there was nothing she could do for him, so she proceeded to ignore him, and he took a seat near the stove.

After he had been there about an hour, he arose, and looking at the young lady, who was busy at her desk, asked, "Can you tell me when the manager will be in?"

"Yes sir," she replied, "he will probably be in some time tomorrow afternoon. He is out of the city today."

The man departed in anything but a pleasant frame of mind, and will doubtless ask more questions next time.

The Meropolis Herald thus pokes fun at a new contemporary:

"Golconda has a new paper. The old world will probably stop and take a couple of hitches at his suspenders when this startling information is heralded abroad. It isn't the first time Golconda has had a new journalistic career break in on its otherwise peaceful preserves. Golconda is used to such. But this new paper is different. That is I reckon it is. I have never seen anything like it.

"G. A. Rose, the managing editor, was formerly editor of the new paper's predecessor, Balie's Bugle, which bugled itself out of existence about seven weeks ago. He very gravely announces: 'I expect to do as I done before.' Who will dare dispute it? But not content with 'doing as he done before,' this seer of the pencil has taken another, a man hitherto unacquainted with the mysteries of the noble profession. This gentleman is frank, and in his introductory gets right to the point. He says: 'I will add it is my intention to embrace every opportunity to make the News the best independent, non-political, general, current and inspiring newspaper in Southern Illinois.'

"Say, don't that sound good? And I'll bet he does it, too. Law me; when you want a paper that'll astonish the natives and make the Ozar of Russia catch his breath in short jerks, you want to get some fellow in charge of the editorial department who never knew anything about newspaper doin'."

"Then listen to this final climax of the whole affair: 'We merely want to state our motto is 'live and let live,' and our office is over Pierce's Sons' store.'

"Notice how perfectly those two thoughts blend together! Isn't it just too sweet?"

"Rah for Golconda."

A peculiar occurrence was witnessed at Dave Martin's barber shop, on Broadway, yesterday. A rat that had ventured too far from headquarters found that it was discovered, and made a leap for a hole some little distance away. A string chanced to be stretched across the hole, and the rodent, in some inexplicable manner, struck it in such a way that the string closed around its neck in as neat a noose as human hands could have devised, and the unfortunate creature hanged by its own act, helplessly dangled and kicked until life was extinct. Some of the witnesses think it was a case of suicide, but others consider it only one of those peculiar accidents heard of only occasionally.

MEDICAL EXPERTS TESTIFY.

Washington, Dec. 12.—Three medical experts gave testimony yesterday at the trial of Mrs. Lola Ida Bonine, charged with killing Census Clerk Ayres, attempting to show the close range at which the fatal shots were fired. Dr. Sterling Ruffin testified that the chest wound inflicted on Ayres must have been from a shot fired when the pistol was from five to eight inches distant from the body. Drs. Carr and Bovero also gave testimony along the same lines, showing the results of experiments designed to prove the close range at which the fatal shots must have been fired.

At the afternoon session the defense announced its side closed. The case probably will go to the jury Thursday evening or Friday morning.

KILLING AT CAIRO.

Cairo, Ill., Dec. 12.—Harrassed by parties who had been annoying him many nights, William Hicks blazed away last night with a shotgun and instantly killed James Turner. Both men are colored. Hicks was watchman at the lumber yards of the C. C. Mengel, Jr., and Bros. Lumber company. The yards are located east of Syracuse street above Fortieth street. When the affair was over, Hicks stepped to the telephone and notified the police of what he had done. Officers Hoagland and Cowell went up and arrested him and brought him down to the city jail. They found Turner with his left breast almost torn away by the charge. The affair occurred about 8 o'clock.

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 12.—Incorporation articles have been filed in the office of the secretary of state as follows: The Seelbach Hotel company, of Jefferson county, with $200,000 capital stock, and Louis, Otto and Charles Seelbach as incorporators. The Danville Electric Power and Railway company of Boyle county, with $10,000 capital stock and Geo. Anderson, C. R. McDowell and H. W. Wiseman at its head.

The Russell County Oil and Gas company, with $2,500 capital stock.

The Merit Pants company of Graves county, increases the amount of its capital stock from $40,000 to $100,000.

AN ENJOYABLE AFFAIR.

The Retail Grocers' association entertained with a "smoker" about 100 people last night at Odd Fellows' hall and the occasion was a most enjoyable one. Mr. S. A. Fowler was toastmaster, and an address was made by Mr. W. H. Farby, explaining the purposes of the organization. Mr. Young Taylor responded on behalf of the guests. Refreshments were served in the same room after the speaking.

The Onion Tombstone.

In a cemetery near Evansville, Ind., is a stone known as the "Onion Tombstone." Drooping gracefully over one corner of the slab as if just pulled and laid there, is the marble semblance of a bunch of young onions. Beneath is the date of the birth and death of the woman who sleeps in this peculiarly marked grave. The only explanation the sexton has to offer is that Aunt Betsy liked onions to eat better than anything else and often said that she did not want flowers or verses on her tombstone, but just a bunch of onions.

No Tax Logics.

In the matter of taxation the Isle of Man is unique. There is no income tax, no succession duties chargeable against the estates of deceased persons, no highway or turnpike tolls. Roads are maintained by the revenue from two sources: A small tax upon every wheel and shod hoof, and a levy upon every male inhabitant, who must give a day's work on the road or its equivalent in cash. There are no stamp duties on receipts, shares, promissory notes, etc.; in fact, stamps are only used for postage.

LOWLY ORIGIN OF NOBLE QUOTATIONS.

Nothing in the curiosities of literature is so interesting as the "evolution" of popular quotations. Many of the finest and most beautiful aphorisms and sayings spring from mean and obscure literary parentage. Some are the result of ridiculous perversion of the intended signification, and a larger number are due to deliberate or unconscious misrepresentation. To accident, chance remarks of inferior writers or orators, we owe not a few of our grandest proverbial expressions.

This general fact is emphasized and abundantly illustrated by Prof. J. Churton Collins, the well known English critic and severe censor of contemporary book reviewers, in an article on "Popular Quotations" in the New Liberal Review. He begins with some instances of perversion:

"We all know the famous line in Shakespeare, 'One touch of nature makes the whole world kin,' and a most beautiful truth it seems, worthy to stand beside Terrence's equally beautiful expression of catholic sentiment, 'Homo sum; humani nihil a me alienum puto'—I am a man, and think nothing that concerns man indifferent to me." But misconception and the suppression of the context have given its beauty to it, for nothing could have been further from Shakespeare's intention than the meaning which has been attached to it. The line occurs in 'Troilus and Cressida,' and simply means that all mankind have this in common, that they delight in novelty.

'One touch of nature makes the whole world kin, That all with one consent praise newborn gawds.'

'Again, we all know the proverb, 'As the tree falls, there shall it lie,' supposing it to mean that a man's fate after death will be determined by his state when he dies, thus attaching to it a most solemn moral. But a reference to the source of it, that is, the eleventh chapter of Ecclesiastes, shows that nothing can be more remote from its true meaning. All that is meant is that the discharge of rain from the clouds and the inclination of a falling tree, in other words, the times and seasons, are in the hands of God, and out of the husbandman's control, and all that concerns him is to be diligent about the work which he has in hand. Another curious perversion, but a perversion made as early as Seneca, is the often-quoted 'Art is long and time is short. This is the first of the aphorisms of the Greek physician Hippocrates, and what he means is that the critical moment when medical assistance can be of avail is soon passed, but that medical science is slow and laborious, and so not up to time. The erroneous substitution of a future tense for a present has given us the celebrated 'Magna est veritas et praevalabit'—Great is truth and it will prevail. The quotation is from the Valgate version of the forty-first verse of the fourth chapter of Ecclesiastes, third book, where, it has no such meaning as we, by turning a present tense into a future, attach to it, but simply means, great is truth and mighty above all things. But perhaps the most extraordinary instance of perversion is the well known English proverb, 'First catch your hare and then cook it.' It has always been assumed that this precept is to be found in Mrs. Glasse's celebrated book on cookery, a work well known to our great grandmothers. But what Mrs. Glasse says is something very different. She is giving directions for what is called 'chasing' the hare, that is, for wrapping it in paper and basting it with gavy, and in describing this process in cookery she says, 'first catch your hare,' and out of this misconception has sprung the proverb.

The proverb, "Curses, like young chickens, come home to roost," is supposed to come from some Greek writer; it was uttered by a cracked, half-witted fellow named Tyler, a relative of Southey. "A poet is born, not made," comes from Roman historian of no note or consequence, who was incapable of so immortal a saying, but who simply said that "not every year is a king or poet born."

"The distance lends enchantment to the view," has its germ in a couplet to be found in Garth's "Dispensary." The line in "Lochiel's Warning"—"Coming events cast their shadows before"—was dictated to Campbell in a dream. On waking from sleep he found himself repeating "events that are coming cast their shadows before." Thus, allowing for a slight verbal alteration, a dream gave us what is now a household word.

Cincinnati, Dec. 12.—A meeting of state secretaries of the Young Men's Christian association, which is to last two days, began at the Grand Hotel yesterday. HEART TROUBLE.

Thousands Unduly Alarmed About That Dreaded Heart Disease.

Americans in their mad struggle for wealth or position—scheming, planning, executing or toiling, seldom give a thought to the great sacrifice they are making of their health. A gradual feeling of exhaustion comes on, the appetite fails, sleeplessness follows, then the blood is giving out, the memory becomes treacherous. At times the head becomes dizzy, the heart palpitates, burns, feels dull and sore. Don't make the heavy conclusion that you have heart disease—it's your stomach. The heart and stomach are controlled by the same great nerve—the sympathetic and pneumogastric. One form of poor digestion causes a gas and fermentation of half digested food—hence palpitation and short breath. The blood becomes thin and watery, irritating and weakening the heart. The surest, quickest way to relieve such trouble is to make perfect digestion with regular doses at meal times of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which can be had at most druggists in 50 cent and $1 bottles. It's economy to buy the dollar size. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will cure any form of stomach trouble (except cancer of the stomach). It is pleasant to take and in causing perfect assimilation of the food cures constipation (not by irritation) but by removing the cause. Book and sample for the eating. RENEWED PLEA FOR STATEHOOD.

Washington, Dec. 12.—The annual report of Gov. Otero of New Mexico, renews the plea for statehood and says the federal census returns for 1900 do the territory a great injustice. He says the population of the territory, based on careful estimates, should be at this time 213,191, including Indians. He likewise takes exception to the census statistics for mining, stock raising, agriculture, horticulture, timber, coal and iron industries and attributes the alleged discrepancy in the figures to inadaptability of the present system to sparsely settled mountain sections of this country.
