The Democratic Nominations.

As the time approaches for holding the Democratic National Convention political speculation, and the chances of the several prospective candidates are more actively canvassed. Five names are now on everybody's tongue as likely to be presented to the convention, and the probability of this or that one of the five being the favorite constitutes the staple topic of wise politicians and newspaper men discuss the situation. The five names most conspicuous for the candidacy are—Horton, Hancock, Hendricks, and Hoffman.

One of the most prominent of the nominations is that of Mr. Hendricks. He has been received by friends. He then made a statement to this effect: That the first time he fell into the river was by accident, but that he experienced enough at that time to satisfy himself that drowning was the easiest mode of death, that he was old and weary of life; of no benefit to himself or family; that he was suffering severely from wounds which he received in the Mexican war, and that the older he grew the worse his wounds became; and that it was to rid himself of his useless and helpless old age, that he had sought to destroy his life. Since that time, which was some months ago, his family and friends had all become satisfied that he was entirely dissuaded from the idea. In the meantime he had been to town several times, transacted business, and returned to his home in safety. On Monday last he was in town during all the day, conversing with various gentlemen, but nothing wrong in his manner was observable, further than he spoke very freely upon the subject.

It was understood that he was preparing to go home. At 10 o'clock he committed the fatal act. At 10 o'clock his friends became uneasy, and commenced a search for him, when his coat, hat, and spectacles were found in a skiff, just behind Robinson & Keith's old warehouse. On Tuesday morning, parties commenced fishing with hooks for the body, and it was found about one hundred yards below the skiff. He had a cord ten or fifteen feet long tied round his neck, and to the end of the cord a large iron bolt weighing five or six pounds.

The deceased was about 68 years old, was strictly temperate, a hospitable and worthy citizen, and was highly respected by all. He was born and raised in Sumner county, Tenn., and emigrated to Kentucky in 1831. He was a soldier in the Florida war, and also during the Mexican campaigns. In the latter war he was a Major in the 1st Tennessee Infantry, known in history as the "Bloody First," of which Gov. Wm. B. Campbell, was the Colonel. In this he received a severe wound, from the effects of which he never entirely recovered, and the long continued suffering from it was no doubt the immediate cause of his sad fate. In 1854, he thought it was Major Alexander represented this and Hickman county in our State Legislature, standing high in that body, and reflecting much credit upon himself and his constituents. During our civil war he was too old and feeble to take any part in the conflict, but was a devoted friend of the "Lost Cause," and as a consequence had most of his property destroyed and taken from him. During the late years he has had much trouble, but his relation with all surrounding was most pleasant and agreeable.

In the death of Major Alexander our people have lost a valued citizen—one who has spent much of his life for the good of his country and people, and one who was greatly respected by his neighbors and our citizens generally. Truly, may it be said of him, that he lived as he died, in honor to his family and to his country.

Next week we shall publish a sketch of Major Alexander's life, prepared by one intimately acquainted with his history.

KILLED.—A man by the name of Nathaniel Swenney, a citizen of this county, was killed in Madrid Bend, on the 6th instant, by three strangers from Illinois, named James Stewart, Henry C. Alman and James Henry. Stewart and Alman were arrested by constable Larry Everett, and on Wednesday last brought to this place, and lodged in jail. James Henry, the other party to the affair, made his escape and is now at large. We do not know the cause of the difficulty.

Chief Justice Chase—His Principles.—The Herald prints a private letter of Judge Chase, in which he says he was not a partisan on either side on the impeachment trial. He says he shall adhere to his old creed of equal rights. They may denounce and abuse me," he says, "but I will stand by me."

Development.—The development of the future may be known not. I do not expect or desire to be a candidate for office again. It would, however, gratify me exceedingly if the democratic party would take ground which would assure the party against all attempts to subvert the principles of universal suffrage established in eight, and to be established here in all of the southern constitutions. Then, I think, the future of the great cause for which I have labored so long would be secure, and I should not regret my absence from political affairs.
