The election passed off quietly and harmoniously Monday, and to the satisfaction of the majority, and to the voice of the majority, the minority bows gracefully.
Contractors would do well to read the advertisement in this paper from the jail commissioners. Some one will get a job that it will pay reasonably wages.

In Hickman county, Mr. E. H. Johnson was re-elected Sheriff over Samuels by about 700 majority; Elder Willis White re-elected School Commissioner; and the new road law defeated, says the Hickman County Times.
"I tell you Bill no girl can fool me. If I call on a girl and she doesn't say much and acts like she wants me to leave, and don't shake hands with me when I leave, and don't ask me to call again, its very seldom I ever call back again to see her."
Hon. C. M. Vaughan, State Senator from this District, died, at his home in Hickman county, Friday last. He had held many places of public trust and confidence, sheriff, member of the Legislature, State Senator, &c., and had always proven himself faithful, energetic and efficient.
The per capita for 1884 is $1.55 for white and colored children alike. After the liberal provision of the Legislature last winter, it was expected to be higher than this, but the necessity of equalizing the colored and the white prorate, and the increase of the number of school children in the State, has limited it to the sum above named.
Mrs. R. D. Thomson, formerly of our town but now a resident of Hickman, Kentucky, arrived here last Monday night on a visit to her sister, Mrs. Wannie Coffey. Mrs. T. is not looking so well as when she left here and reports considerable sickness in the locality of Hickman. We hope her visit may be a pleasant one and that a few breaths of our west prairie atmosphere will fully restore her health.—[Malden Clipper.]
Mr. Thomas V. Wallace was elected city Marshal at the election Monday, distancing his competitors by handsome majorities. We are led to believe that he will make an excellent officer, and should have the support of all good citizens in the discharge of his duties. This is an important office so far as the peace, good order and well being of the town is concerned, and more than one Marshal has felt the lack of proper support from the business men and general citizens.

Mr. C. H. Hughes Wilson Dead.
We are deeply pained to announce the death of Mr. C. H. Hughes Wilson, who died at the residence of his father, near Hickman, Wednesday night last. Some two weeks ago he was engaged in helping in the hay field, became overheated, something like sunstroke, inflammation of the brain set in, and his death was the result. The deceased was a young lawyer, born and raised in this community, widely known, and well beloved by his associates and friends. As a young lawyer he was rapidly acquiring practice, and was withal a young man of the most indomitable energy, industry and perseverance, that we ever knew. Kindly in his sympathies, accommodating to all, poor Charlie will be missed and mourned by the good people of this community, most of whom have known him since childhood, and especially by his sincere sympathizers who go out to the heartbroken mother who idolized her boy. The deceased was a member of the Royal Templars, held a prominent place in the State organization of that Order, and was an active, zealous and consistent temperance worker, and his earnest efforts, as a young man, in behalf of temperance, will be a pleasing memory to those who cherish and love his memory. We sincerely trust that in that Great Beyond he now enjoys a peace which surpasses all earthly understanding.
He will be buried to-day, at 9:30 A. M., by the Royal Templars.
A Lawyer's Opinion of Interest to All.
J. A. Tawney, Esq., a leading attorney of Wisconsin, Minn. writes: "After using for more than three years, I take great pleasure in stating that I regard Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, as the best remedy in the world for Cough and Colds. It has never failed to cure the most severe colds I have had, and invariably relieves the pain in the chest."
Trial Bottles of this cure for all Coughs and Lung Diseases may be had free at FORTUNES' Drug Store. Large size $1.00.
What do you say to a grand old-fashioned Democratic barbecue at Hickman during the Presidential campaign, with Hendricks, Thurman, Voorhees, or some Democrat of national reputation as the orator of the day. We want it on a scale to entertain, free in the old-fashioned way, thousands that will come. Don't let it be any town affair, but a grand up rising of Democrats in all this section. If we announce that Hendricks will be here, let's be sure that he will come, so that the people will not be disappointed, and let's be sure that the arrangements can be made to entertain all who may come. Let it be a Presidential campaign barbecue, with no bearing whatever on the local differences of Democrats. Those in favor of it say "aye," and send word to the COURIER so that an item can be obtained as to whether all the Democrats, big, little, old and young, male, and female, will help make it a grand success.
A tramp came through Cayce, this county, last week, with a sprightly little boy in his charge, claimed him as his son, and offered to sell the little fellow for enough money to pay his railroad fare to Columbus. He struck a trade with a Mr. A. Britton, who gave him seventy-five cents for his boy. The little fellow, is a bright faced, smart little fellow, and has secured a good home, as Mr. A. Britton is spoken of as a clever gentleman. The reputed father's heartlessness appears unnatural, but it is reported to us as an actual fact.

Wickliffe has again won the county seat over Blainville by from 300 to 400 majority. The Hickman county Times thinks this will forever settle this question.
Some feeling was in some instances engendered between friends and opponents of the road law. Gentlemen the election is over, and good will ought to return. The people have pronounced against the law, fairly and squarely, and all good citizens will submit to the majority cheerfully.
A little boy, the son of Mr. Charles Reese, was accidentally poisoned last week by taking morning glory by mistake for quinine. The family went to the river for quinine, and the young clerk made the mistake of sending morphine. It was a sprightly little boy, about 8 years of age, and he died before relief could be obtained.

We suppose there are, or will be candidates for Congress in this district, but no paper in the district contains an authorized announcement of any of the aspirants.—[South Kentuckian.]
Candidates believe, or affect to believe, that special newspaper support is a positive injury to their chances, and it is to be hoped that the local papers will let all such severely alone. It's the fair thing any how for candidates to do their own fighting. If the candidate wins he gets the laurels, the office and the spoils; and if he is defeated, "some fool editor caused it." Discuss public issues, print news, vote as you prefer, &c., but let local candidates do their own fighting.

The Issue for Congress.
From Paducah News.
Mr. Houston, candidate for Congress, says that the tariff will be the question put in issue in this District this fall; that he will force the question at all points and make the issue with other candidates as sharp as the English language can make it. Mr. Houston is solid on protection tariff, i. e., he is for protection in all it means.
THERE are several Presidential tickets nominated and now in the field as follows:

Written at My Mother's Grave.
BY AN OBITUARY.
The trembling dew-drops fall
Upon the slumbering like souls at rest.
The stars shine gloriously and all,
Save one, my dear, my dear, my dear.
Mother, I love thy grave!
The violet, with its blossoms blue and mild,
Thou'st 'neath thy head when shall it wave
Above thy child!
The sweet flower, yet most
Bright leaves to the coming tempest low;
Dear mother, 'tis thine emblem; dust
Is on thy brow.
Add I could love to die
To have unquieted thy dark, bitter stream.
By thee, as erst in childhood, I'll,
And share thy dream.
Add must I linger here,
To stain the pillow of my slumber years,
And assure the hope to childhood dear
With bitter tears?
Add, must I linger here,
A lonely branch upon a withered tree,
Whose last fall leaf, untimely ere,
Thou'st laid down with thee?
Oh, from life's without town
In all communion with the past, I turn,
And muse as thou, the only flower
In Memory's urn.
And, when the evening pale,
Dews, like a mourner, on the dim, blue
stars,
Stray to hear the night-wind wail
Around thy grave.
Where is thy spirit now?
I see above—thy lock is imaged there;
I hear—and thy gentle tones
Are on the air.
Oh, come, while here I press
My brow upon thy grave, and in those mid
And thrilling notes of tenderness,
Bliss, bliss thy child!
Yes, bliss thy weeping child;
And o'er thine urn—Belgium's holiest
shrine—
Oh, give life spirit, sustenance,
To bleed with mine.

Mosquitoes.
Among living creatures, can we find one that so belittles its appearance as the mosquito? What an innocent little thing it looks like! Bloodthirsty? Impossible! See—its alights before you, a diabolical, in bulky compared with it; the floating globe of the dandelion is coarse beside the slender outlines of this airy gossamer. None of the gauzy-winged or hooded insects that are frolic in the sunshine appear less capable of inflicting pain. As the nimble mosquito sings and dances airily over your head, he seems innocent compared to yonder black spider. And yet at your slightest movement the spider scuttles off, only anxious to get out of the way, while the little singer, so graceful in the airy curves of its flight, retreats a circle higher only to renew his attack at your first unguarded moment. His movements are as light as if scarcely elements had formed some of his component parts, or as if he might live on mist or dew, or as if his ethereal frame found its support in the moisture inherent in the air.
What a mistake! There is nothing more bloodthirsty, and more persistently intent upon satisfying his craving for blood, than this innocent-looking hypodermic. The honest fly, alighting on your face and tickling you with his six rough, spongy feet—had he a like power to inflict pain, to what annoyance would you be subjected! If the domestic animals were given, in proportion to their strength and size, the power and will of the mosquito to inflict torment, what a world that would be; the lion and tiger would be comparatively harmless. Surely these innumerable and ubiquitous little pests were given to teach us some lesson. We find their prototype in the tormenting and harassing nothing that worry our every-day life; the sharp sting given under cover of a transparent, gauzy, and seemingly of malicious tongue—the hints, the innuendoes that seem such trifles and yet do so much to poison our happiness here—the mosquito that stings the heart. You who find cause for complaint that God should give life to such tormenting things in the animal world, in your conscience clear that you have not acted the same part in a higher sphere? Have your words and acts been always so full of love and tenderness that you have never willingly inflicted pain on any creature? If you are careless of hurting the feelings of others, look at yonder insect devouring its ephemeral existence to the very center at the expense of yours, and say if you are not imitating the mosquito with your greater powers, and carrying the annoyance of the lower into the higher life.—[Christian Intelligencer.]
Aaron Burr's Gallantry.
Col. Aaron Burr wore a lighthouse of men that could not pose unnoticed by a stranger. His reputation was polished and courtly. The appropriate civilities of the drawing-room were performed with a grace peculiar to himself. His words were innocuously fascinating. He acted upon the principle that the female was the weaker sex; that they were all susceptible of flattery, and that great art consisted in adapting it to the grade of intellect he addressed.
Such traits of character would appear to be incompatible with an elevated and lowering nature, yet they frequently have troubled one of the most extraordinary men of the age. A volume of anecdotes might be related as evidence of Col. Burr's quickness of perception and tact in reply. After his return from Europe, in 1814, he met a friend, a maiden lady, in Broadway. He had not seen her for many years. As she passed him she exclaimed, "Colonel Burr, you do not recollect me?"
"I do not, madam," was the reply.
"Want?" said she. "Miss K. yet?"
The lady somewhat piqued, retorted, "Yes, sir, Miss K. yet?"
Feeling the delicacy of the situation, and the unfortunate error he had committed, he gently took her hand and placidly remarked: "Well, madam, I can assure you that I do not recollect me?"
Sanitary Effect of Lightning.
The Bangor Commercial says: A gentleman who visited one of the ponds in this vicinity last Sunday returned during the storm. He related his experience as follows: "Before I got home I made up my mind that I should not get on my feet, for between a home that took to stone walls every time it thundered and lightning which seemed to strike all around me, I thought there was little left for me in this world. Consequently I left off all my bad habits, including rum and tobacco, but have taken up part of them since, though I don't think I chew quite so much as I did."
A NEW and fascinating amusement has been introduced in Chicago by small children whose parents live at hotels. It consists in scattering the blocks used in building play-houses along the stairs leading from the upper floors of the hotel. The game is for the boarders to get down stairs alive.
THE NEW CAPITAL at Albany is an unfortunate edifice. The other day a tank full of water, used for running the elevators, burst and flooded the building with six thousand gallons of water. If there is anything in a New York legislator's hat it is water.
PERHAPS it is called the "upper crust" because you have to pass it to get to the real meat and strength of society.
