Devotion.

The Woman took her small visiting niece to church with her. The city service was much more ritualistic than that of the village church which the little girl had been in the habit of attending, but the Woman was pleased to notice that she seemed very interested and very devout.

After church, on the way home, the Woman asked:
"And did you like the service, dear?"

"Oh, yes, auntie, it was very interesting," the little girl answered politely. "Course I was sort of confused at first, but I just watched you, and every time you lumb-ducked I did, too!"—Chicago Journal.

PROPOSES BARK FOR FUEL

Properly Prepared, According to One Who Should Know, It Could Be Substituted for Coal.

In a report to the Technical Association of the Pulp and Paper Industry, which has been holding its annual meeting at Detroit, George D. Bearce, engineer for the News Print Service bureau, described experiments on the substitution of wood bark, properly prepared, for coal, stating that the "enormous quantity of pulp wood which is used in the paper business is evidence of its potential fuel value to the industry."

The quantity of bark in pulp wood, said Mr. Bearce, amounts to approximately ten per cent of the volume and weight of the rough wood, or 250 pounds of dry bark per cord of wood. One hundred cords of pulp wood represents approximately 25,000 pounds of dry bark that has a fuel value equal to eight tons of coal. If the moisture of the bark is reduced by one-half, the heating value, Mr. Bearce stated, increases greatly if the moisture content of the bark is lessened.

A large number of mills using pulp wood were visited or questioned by Mr. Bearce and the committee which he headed. Many stated that they considered the bark of little value. Tests made for the committee showed that two types of processes were able to reduce the moisture content to about 60 per cent, and that it would be necessary to have at least 50 per cent of the moisture removed if the bark were to serve as a suitable substitute for coal. Special draft conditions, a grate surface giving correct combustion, and refractory walls to dry out the moisture are required, said Mr. Bearce.

Under these conditions it was held by the committee that the bark could be used as fuel and thus effect a saving of a large amount of coal.

Oldest American Newspaper.

The New York Globe was founded on December 9, 1783, by Noah Webster, as the "American Minerva." It was renamed "The Commercial Advertiser" on October 7, 1797 and was again changed to "The Globe and Commercial Advertiser" on February 1, 1804. This is the oldest daily newspaper still in existence in America. A weekly paper, the New Hampshire Gazette, was established in 1756 and is still published. The Hartford Courant was established as a weekly, the Connecticut Courant, in 1764, and is now a daily.

LIVERADE MEDICINE CO. WILL MOVE TO LOUISVILLE, KY.

Has Doubled Capital Stock of Corporation.

IS NOW A $200,000.00 COMPANY

Fulton People Regret to See Concern Leave Town.

Having heard it rumored for several days that the Liverade Medicine Company would move to Louisville, Ky., a representative of this paper called on Mr. S. J. Barnett, the General Manager, and asked him for particulars concerning this move.

Mr. Barnett stated that while the Liverade Medicine Company was a comparatively small company, it had by hard and conscientious work on the part of himself and all the directors of the company, judicious and well planned advertising and a product that was so far ahead of any in its line now on the market, attracted the attention of nationally known patent medicine men. With a distribution growing from 22 in number two years ago to about 2100 in fifteen states handling Liverade at the present time, this phenomenal growth was sufficient to attract the attention of a Louisville chain of drug stores, who are said to be the largest sellers of patent medicines in the world. It is said that the sales from this chain of stores will exceed $1,250,000 per year.

Mr. Barnett spent a week in Louisville looking over the situation, and the result of this trip was an increase of capital stock to $200,000 and the securing of this firm of wholesale and retail druggists not only as stockholders in this company, but as officers and directors in same.

Thursday night, Dec. 7, at a banquet given by the Directors of the Liverade Medicine Company at the Usonia Hotel, Mr. Barnett made a full report to them of what had been accomplished in Louisville, going into details as to plans which had been outlined, regarding the future policy of the company, guided by men who NOT EXPECTED to make a success, but who had ALREADY made a success, and were known well and favorably as being leaders in their profession by practically ever druggist in the United States. He also outlined the method of advertising which, while conservative, would attract the attention of almost every man, woman and child in the territory in which this advertising would be done. Each territory would be taken up separately and worked thoroughly until Liverade was as well or better known than any other preparation of its kind in existence today.

After hearing these plans, each and every director expressed himself as heartily in approval of them and unanimously voted that the company move to Louisville, Ky., January 1, 1923, and the following were made officers and directors in this company:

C. R. Wallace of Fulton, president; Ernest H. Bennett, of Louisville, vice president, president of the Taylor-Bennett Drug Co.; S. J. Barnett of Fulton, secretary, treasurer and general manager; H. A. Taylor of Louisville, director, vice president of the T. P. Taylor Chain of Drug Stores; Lon Jones of Fulton, director; E. G. Isaacs of Louisville, director, president of the Taylor-Isaacs Chain of Drug Stores; H. T. Smith of Fulton, director.

While nothing in this world but death is sure, still with the company composed of such men as above, the success of the Liverade Medicine Company in its new quarters and under this management seems so sure that parties now owning stock in this company feel that it is today worth five times what it was one week ago.

A vote of thanks for efficient, energetic and honorable management of this company during the past two years and full faith and confidence in its future management, was extended Mr. Barnett by the entire board of directors.

While we hate to lose Mr. Barnett and this company from our city, we feel sure that it is a great step upward in the right direction and he will carry with him the best wishes of this paper and the entire community.—Fulton Daily Leader.

We publish the above article from the Fulton Leader as it will give the stockholders of this company in Hickman the reason for their moving to Louisville. We believe it is a wise move and that the company will grow rapidly in their new home.

Don't keep meat scraps in a warm, moist place.

The best medicine for poultry of any age is good care.

The floor of the poultry house should be dry. It should always be well bedded with straw.

A platform under the roosts keeps the floor clean and increases the capacity of the house.

Old stone piles which are a breeding place for weasels are dangerous to the poultryman's profit.

Look out also for moldy wheat or grain mash of any kind left in the bottom of the hopper. This will quickly kill.

When selecting breeding cockerels, choose the birds that matured early and show bright intelligent heads with short bills.

Patch the leaky poultry house roofs. This will improve the condition of the litter in the houses and help to prevent colds and roup.

Isolate the first hen that shows signs of a cold and it will help to prevent other cases. Place the sick bird where he will not be forgotten and neglected at feeding time.
