MONTANA LAD TO FRONT AS WAR CORRESPONDENT

Carl Dickey, Graduate of State University, to Represent Times.
Carl Dickey, a graduate of the University of Montana, and a Montana boy, has been sent to Europe as war correspondent for the New York Times according to news received in Missoula by his friends. After graduating from the university Mr. Dickey went to the Columbia school of Journalism at New York and was placed on the editorial staff of the Times upon completing his post-graduate course. He was sent from New York to the Mexican border during the disturbances there and was recalled to go to Europe.
Mr. Dickey has many friends in Butte who are happy to know of his advancement. While at the university in Missoula he was editor of the Kaimin, the student publication, and is remembered as one of the most active students. He was graduated from the institution before a department of Journalism had been installed. His appointment as war correspondent is a distinct recognition of his ability as a news writer.

The passengers and crew are all reported safe.

NEW MACHINES NOW SUPERIOR

German Aeroplanes are Faster Than the English and French Types.

London, April 2.—The superiority of the English and French aircraft, which was frequently asserted in official statements from the entente side last year, is less pronounced this year, according to the British correspondents at the front. This is due to the appearance of several new types of German machines, chiefly modelled, it is said, on French and British designs, and known as the Albatros, Halberstadt, Ago, Roland and the new Fokker.
The majority of them have fixed cylinder engines, giving about 150 to 200 horsepower. The latest German rotary engines with which the Germans achieved some success in the Fokker two years ago, but these rotary engines are seldom of more than 120 horsepower.
The new German machines have a speed of about 120 miles an hour, but their chief feature is their ability for climbing. Ordinarily they frequent the 14,000-foot levels, and they have been observed on pocket duty as high as 20,000 feet. The latest German order for airplane engines is said to have specifications designed to give their machines a radius of action up to at least 30,000 feet.
Meanwhile the British air service is putting forth strenuous exertions to keep ahead of its rival. Only in part is this a question of planes and engines. It also involves the problems of more skillful pilots, and in this direction of training the British service has expanded extraordinarily.
After a class of military aviators have passed through their course of training on the slower types of school machines, those who show special aptitude are passed on to the "scout schools," where they are given a special course in what is commonly called "aerobatics," which involves the use of the highest speed machines and handling them acrobatically in the air, as is necessary in air fighting. The instructors carry on sham fights in the air with their pupils, armed with cameras instead of guns.
Then there are the post-graduate aerial gunnery schools. The most expert pilot in the world is useless as a fighting man if he does not thoroughly understand his machine gun, for a perfect flyer with a jammed gun is of little use against a merely moderate pilot who is a crack shot and a real gun master. A combination of the two is the desideratum, as, for example, in the case of a young pilot recently mentioned in dispatches, whose engine stopped dead at a height of 15,000 feet when he was being attacked by two German aeroplanes. Despite this loss of motive power, forcing him to descend constantly, he shot down one enemy machine, drove the other away, and glided into his own lines unharmed.
The work of the aviator has become highly specialized in the course of the last 12 months. At the British aviation camps along the front in France there are separate squadrons of machines for reconnaissance, infantry contact, photography, artillery spotting and bomb dropping and, in almost every instance, squads of these machines may only accomplish their duties successfully when they are protected from enemy attack by machines of a type comparable to the torpedo boat destroyers of a naval fleet.
For these "destroyer" machines, high speed, high climbing ability and high fighting and maneuvering power are essential. Some of the newer British machines of this type are said to show a speed of over 150 miles an hour.

HIGH LICENSE STOPS GREEN TRADING STAMPS

After Aug. 1 Premiums Offered by Merchants Will Cost $6,000 a Year.
Aug. 1, 1917, will mark the passing of the old-time, widely-known and unethical mercantile bait known as the green trading stamp with its galaxy of premiums, except for those merchants who wish to and can afford to pay a license of $5,000 a year in accordance with the provisions of a law passed by the last legislative session. That law and the eight-hour law for women effective today are the only pieces of legislation passed during the winter which affect Butte merchants.
It is expected that the high license fee will put a stop to the practice which is declared by many merchants to be unethical. The Montana law is fashioned from the Washington law.

The wedding is the culmination of a happy romance which began while both were ministering to the aid of miners who were hurt in an accident here several years ago.

TAKE WAR REFERENDUM IN WISCONSIN TOWN

Monroe, Wis., April 2.—Sentiment for or against war will be expressed in this city of 5,000 persons tomorrow by marking a "yes" or a "no" to the single question "under existing conditions, do you favor a declaration of war by congress?"
The correlated questions originally propounded have been eliminated. In three of the city's wards the referendum will be held by official consent of the election boards of these wards. In case the board of the First ward bars the question, it will be voted on informally, according to present plans.

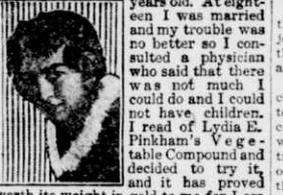

SOUTHERN NEGROES ARE MOVING NORTHWARD

Atlanta, Ga., April 2.—A growing scarcity of labor is being felt in every industrial center of the south as a result of the exodus of negroes to northern manufacturing centers under promises by labor agents of higher wages and social advantages. Official cognizance of the northward movement of negroes, which began a year or so ago, was taken today in the April report of the Atlanta district federal reserve bank's board. Thousands of negroes have gone north, the first from the farms, but later departures are those from mining and other industrial centers.

Omaha, Neb.—"I suffered from female troubles when I was seventeen years old. At eighteen I was married and my trouble was no better so I consulted a physician who said that there was not much I could do and I could not have children. I read of Lydia E. CAPITAL TAKES ON WAR APPEARANCE

No Visitors to the Gun Works Now—Broomsticks for Members.

The Post's Washington Bureau.
Washington, D. C., April 2.—Grim reminders of war times are now seen on every hand at the national capital and the city of Washington is virtually on a war footing.
Plainclothes men and secret service operatives are more in evidence than ever before, unless perhaps during civil war times.
Visitors who come to Washington these days find three of the usual objective points entirely barred from them—the white house, the war, state and navy building and the navy yard.
The gates of the white house remain closed. The inhabitants of Washington—most of them at least—do not recall a time herebefore when these gates were not wide open. At the side entrance to the low, squatly executive structure of the white house, there always has been a hiatus in the iron fence, leaving an open space perhaps 30 feet wide. This hiatus has been filled in with an iron fence, which makes the fence around the executive grounds continuous.
The war, state and navy building is necessarily the most elaborately guarded of all the government structures. With thousands of persons passing in and out a large force of guards is required to keep out suspicious characters. No one can secure entrance to the building unless he exhibits a pass. The employee who cannot produce his red admission card is barred, even though the guards may know his face perfectly well. The guards are standing on the strict letter of their instructions and are taking no chances. In this building is housed the original Declaration of Independence and other historic keepsakes of utmost interest and visitors are disappointed when they learn that admission is denied.
The worst blow to sight-seers, however, is the order that bars them from the navy yard. This order is inexorably enforced. Senators of the United States, who are supposed to have big pulls, have tried in vain to secure suspensions of the order so as to admit their constituents to the big gun works. Naturally in these war times, especially the average American who comes to Washington is consumed with a desire to see the mammoth guns which are to belch forth our anger to Germany should we become involved in war. Secretary of Navy Daniels explains that if the rule against admission of visitors were suspended in one instance it would be certain not to suspend it in all instances, and so he is heaving strictly to the line.
Uncle Sam is too busy just now getting ready for war to do his washing. The principal work of this sort done by the federal government is the laundering of paper money. On account of the rush of work at the bureau of engraving and printing and the treasury in getting millions of dollars in new notes ready to meet any emergency strain upon the currency supplies, sharp developments in the international situation might bring at any time, the government is unable to keep up the money washing. Consignments of soiled notes sent in by the banks are being returned unwashed.
Notwithstanding the serious business of preparing for war on a large scale, the situation has its humorous phases. The idea of peace-loving Uncle Sam buckling down for a scrap sticks the risibilities, especially when it is recognized that he is not a bit prepared, notwithstanding the congress has been appropriating for years more for its army and navy than even militant Germany thought of appropriating.
Three hundred broomsticks which have been used since last May by members of the officers' reserve corps on Governor's Island, New York, will be distributed to the senior member of representative and to senators of the 65th congress.
The 300 broomsticks, made in a Louisiana sawmill, were discarded five days ago with the arrival of 300 heavy wooden guns and were dispatched at once to Washington as an object-lesson in unpreparedness. Each of the broomsticks bears a tag, a paragraph of which reads:
"This historic broomstick is sent to you as a reminder for the lives of the men and boys of the United States that they may when war comes have a sporting chance. Untrained men are as broomsticks in the hands of a trained foe, but by the passing of the universal training act you can save the lives of hundreds of thousands of our boys and give us a sure means of defense."

SINGLE FELLOWS PITY UNFORTUNATE MARRIED

Dish Up a Pleasant Dinner as an Aid to Forgetfulness.

Harry Lauder's song, "It's nice to get up in the mornin', but it's nice to lie in bed," might be paraphrased into "It's nice to be single and happy, but it's nice to have a wife." At least that would seem to be the proper interpretation for the members of the Butte News-writers' association. For, yesterday, the single men, vicariously dubbed "The Virgins," showed their appreciation for the married men by tendering them a delightfully enjoyable dinner party at the Francis.
"The Virgins" made a good start by selecting Eddie Hamner as their chairman. He was first class and presided as well as any married man might be expected to. The fun was fast and furious. Whether the married men were carried away by the apparent opinion of the single men that all married men are happy; or what, the dinner was a most pronounced success. With the aid of a graphophone, "Spikie" Haines, "Percy" Stone, formerly from the country, and others, the music was "sustained" with and without pain. All the married men were called upon to explain why they seemed so happy and they did to their own satisfaction. It was up to Hamner as chairman to make the selections, and he selected the wittiest of the crowd, meaning the married folks.
"Spikie" Haines preached the sermon. Charley Cohan explained his relationship to George M. Cohan. Charley Stevens made several apologies, of which he has a habit. Jim Berry sang "The Soldiers of the Queen" sotto voce. Harry Sultzer thrilled with a story, and from "His Easy Chair" Byron Cooney explained how a daily paper should be run. Hi Smurgen recited "My Wife's and Best Cook in Town," and all agreed with him. Mr. Stevens conducted the newswriters through the Francis building, showing a wonderful knowledge of turns and corners. "Jim" Cummins, the well-known Irish tenor, with wit and song, kept the gathering in a very happy mood until the formal part of the program was reached. Charles Copenhagen, the dean of the Butte newswriters, brought the speech-making to a close with a typical newspaper story.
The party was a delightful one in every way and "Monsieur" Francis is to be congratulated on his service. May the young men always remain so kindly disposed towards the unhappy married men. Thanks.

"I was impressed," he said, "by the extraordinary unanimity of sentiment in favor of a republic."
Mr. Boynton reported travel conditions were excellent and food abundant. He said he had been told that an improvement was noticeable immediately the new government took control.

ARMY RECRUITING NOT UP TO HOPES

But Shows Some Improvement Under Plan Adopted by Government.

The Post's Washington Bureau.
Washington, D. C., April 2.—Recruiting for the army under the new recruiting plan is not producing the results that were hoped for in some states, according to reports received at the office of adjutant general of the army.
The new plan, which was put in operation about Dec. 1 last, is framed on the theory that it would be capable of producing a maximum of 100,000 recruits per year in the United States, or one for every 1,000 of population. At the rate of recruiting now going on the system is producing about half the number it was designed to produce, or about 50,000.
This result is not entirely discouraging, however, as it is an improvement over former recruiting conditions, taking the country as a whole, and the officials derive comfort from the fact that inasmuch as much of the time of recruiting officers and postmasters has been taken up in getting the new system in working order better results may be expected hereafter.
Based on the quotas necessary to produce one recruit per year per 1,000 population the Ohio recruiting districts show up as follows in the results for January:
Cincinnati, 77.9 per cent.
Cleveland, 57.7 per cent.
Columbus, less than 50 per cent.
Toledo, less than 50 per cent.
When a district falls below 50 per cent the war department declines to give the exact percentage.
The best producing district in the entire country, in proportion to population, is the one that has its headquarters at Denver. Its showing for January was 107.5 per cent, or 7.6 per cent more than its quota necessary to yield one recruit per annum per 1,000 population. The recruits obtained from the Denver district make top-notch soldiers, being hardy, courageous and used to roughing it when necessary. The department is proud of the showing made by the Denver district under the new plan.
Ten recruiting districts scattered throughout the country, three of which are in Indiana, are on the department's roll of honor on account of having exceeded the quotas in January necessary to make up the showing of one recruit per 1,000 population per year. The list of 10 is as follows:
Denver, Colo.; Fort Wayne, Ind.; San Francisco, Cal.; Salt Lake City, Utah; Indianapolis, Ind.; Terre Haute, Ind.; New York City, Joplin, Mo.; Omaha, Neb.; Portland, Me.
The department finds that recruiting conditions at Seattle are not favorable. In January there were only 27 recruits there and only 28 at Spokane, both stations falling below 50 per cent of the quotas necessary to produce one recruit per 1,000 population per annum.
Conditions sometimes vary in states. Louisville, Ky., produced only 26 recruits in January, which is below 50 per cent of the quota assigned under the new plan. Lexington, Ky., made a better showing. It produced 58 recruits, or 61.5 per cent of its quota.
The southern states, as a rule, make a fair showing. Florida produced 42 recruits in January, which was 66.7 per cent, or two-thirds of its quota.
The department is making energetic efforts to interest postmasters and to induce them to serve as recruiting agents. Under the law on recruiting books a postmaster is allowed $5 for each recruit he secures, if the recruit is accepted. Only a few postmasters are showing actual hostility to the army and many are arranging to lend their co-operation. Postmaster General Burleson is encouraging postmasters to assist in this work.
So far the best reports of work by postmasters in bringing in recruits have come from Indiana. An announcement by the adjutant general's office of the war department says:
"Postmasters are becoming more and more valuable as recruiting agents for the regular army. The number of recruits procured by them increased from 30 for September, 1916, to 229 for January. Four hundred and ninety-five in all were obtained prior to Feb. 1 in Indiana, the postmasters have procured 74 recruits; in Georgia, 64; in Oregon, 46; in Arkansas, 31, and in New Jersey, 27. Smaller numbers were obtained in 48 other recruiting districts.
"It is believed the postmasters are assisting the recruiting service entirely through motives of patriotism. The premium of $5 for each accepted applicant is insufficient in amount to explain the great interest now being shown by many postmasters in obtaining recruits. Under the terms of the law, however, the war department is prepared to distribute premiums aggregating from $15,000 to $25,000 per month until the required number of recruits shall have been obtained—this, in some measure, compensating the postmaster for the time and labor spent by them in assisting in the preparation for national defense."

For, yesterday, the single men, vicariously dubbed "The Virgins," showed their appreciation for the married men by tendering them a delightfully enjoyable dinner party at the Francis.
"The Virgins" made a good start by selecting Eddie Hamner as their chairman. He was first class and presided as well as any married man might be expected to. The fun was fast and furious. Whether the married men were carried away by the apparent opinion of the single men that all married men are happy; or what, the dinner was a most pronounced success. With the aid of a graphophone, "Spikie" Haines, "Percy" Stone, formerly from the country, and others, the music was "sustained" with and without pain. All the married men were called upon to explain why they seemed so happy and they did to their own satisfaction. It was up to Hamner as chairman to make the selections, and he selected the wittiest of the crowd, meaning the married folks.
"Spikie" Haines preached the sermon. Charley Cohan explained his relationship to George M. Cohan. Charley Stevens made several apologies, of which he has a habit. Jim Berry sang "The Soldiers of the Queen" sotto voce. Harry Sultzer thrilled with a story, and from "His Easy Chair" Byron Cooney explained how a daily paper should be run. Hi Smurgen recited "My Wife's and Best Cook in Town," and all agreed with him. Mr. Stevens conducted the newswriters through the Francis building, showing a wonderful knowledge of turns and corners. "Jim" Cummins, the well-known Irish tenor, with wit and song, kept the gathering in a very happy mood until the formal part of the program was reached. Charles Copenhagen, the dean of the Butte newswriters, brought the speech-making to a close with a typical newspaper story.
The party was a delightful one in every way and "Monsieur" Francis is to be congratulated on his service. May the young men always remain so kindly disposed towards the unhappy married men. Thanks.

AMERICAN DECLARES THE RUSSIANS WANT REPUBLIC

Petrograd, April 2 (via London).—Charles H. Boynton, president of the American-Russian Chamber of Commerce, who arrived here today after a journey across Siberia, said that the revolution had been greeted with enthusiasm at every town through which he had passed. Twenty returning exiles, chiefly socialists, were on board the train and were welcomed by immense crowds.
"I was impressed," he said, "by the extraordinary unanimity of sentiment in favor of a republic."
Mr. Boynton reported travel conditions were excellent and food abundant. He said he had been told that an improvement was noticeable immediately the new government took control.
