SHOW DEALINGS WITH JAS. HYDE

Butte and Superior Company's Records in Court in Big Trial.

preceded that against the Butte and Superior. Much of the morning session of the trial was devoted to examination of the correspondence between Hyde and the Butte and Superior company, the contracts between Hyde and the Butte and Superior and the checks and vouchers which figured in the company's transactions with Hyde. These were subpoenaed by the Minerals Separation company and upon being produced by J. Bruce Kremer, attorney for the Butte and Superior, they were introduced in evidence by Lindley M. Garrison, representing the Separation company. Introduces Hyde Contracts. Among the documents furnished by the Butte and Superior in response to a subpoena were contracts between Hyde and the company for introduction of the oil flotation process in question, on which Hyde claimed a patent. The original contract, signed on July 22, 1911, according to statements by Mr. Kremer in making objection to its introduction, was drawn with Hyde as an independent mining engineer. It provided that for directing installation of an oil flotation process for reducing the company's complex ores Hyde was to receive as full payment one and two thirds times the excess profits resulting from the process for any 30 days of a 90-day period he should select after the process was placed in operation. To illustrate—Prior to introduction of the process recovery from Butte and Superior ores under the then known method approximated 68 per cent. After installation of the process this recovery was run up to a figure approximating 92 per cent or more. Hyde under the terms of the contract introduced in evidence was to receive one and two thirds per cent of the profit resulting from the additional recovery for a period of 30 days mill run, selected from any 90-day period he saw fit to choose. A limitation of $30,000, however, was placed upon his compensation. Were to Defend His Patent. The second contract was drawn after Hyde had secured a patent on what he claimed as his process. It provided in substance that the Butte and Superior company was to pay him for a license to use the process a sum equivalent to the cost of defending his patent against the litigation of the Minerals Separation company. Hyde on the witness stand during trial of the suit against him testified that he was paying costs of defending the suit from the proceeds of sale of a license to use his patent in the Butte district to the Butte and Superior company. Introduces Checks. In pursuance of its contention that the Butte and Superior has already had its day in court as the real defendant in the Hyde case, the Minerals Separation company also introduced into evidence today three cancelled checks, subpoenaed from the records of the Butte and Superior company, which were issued to Hyde, apparently in payment for his services in accordance with terms of the first contract. No correspondence between Hyde and his attorneys with reference to the suit was asked for, although Judge Garrison this morning made it clear that his client is demanding all correspondence, servants or attorneys for the Butte and Superior company and Hyde with reference to the oil flotation process and defense of the action against Hyde for infringement. Kremer in Dual Role. In this connection the position of Mr. Kremer in the litigation developed as that of one of a dual role, counsel for the Butte and Superior company and also counsel for Hyde. A fine line of distinction was drawn in connection with Mr. Kremer's and Hyde's correspondence in this matter. The court suggested that it was in the nature of a "twilight zone" as to just where Mr. Kremer's relations with Hyde as attorney for the Butte and Superior left off and where his correspondence and dealings with him as his attorney began. This matter was the subject of considerable quibbling as to just what documents were demanded between the counsel for the plaintiff and counsel for the defense. Introduce Hyde Case Record. The Minerals Separation company has already presented in support of its case the record of the Hyde case, including the testimony of its expert witnesses and the like. It has disclaimed claims Nos. 9, 10 and 11 of its patent, the supreme court in the Hyde case having disallowed these three claims, which sought to broaden the patent to cover use of oil in any quantity. Claims Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, 7 and 12, which were sustained by the supreme court, limit the patent to use of oil in a quantity of less than 1 per cent of ore treated. Evolution of the process has demonstrated that use of a quantity of oil less than 1 per cent effects the greatest recoveries, although Butte and Superior officials say that by use of more than 1 per cent satisfactory results are obtained. The company's main contention, however, appeared today to be that the Butte and Superior company as the real defendant in the Hyde case has been adjudged by the supreme court an infringer and that all that remains now is an accounting and a decree awarding damages. New Line of Defense Likely. Efforts of the defense in consequence are directed just now towards resistance of this contention. From the number of experts it has subpoenaed, however, it seems apparent. Introduce Hyde Case Record. The Minerals Separation company has already presented in support of its case the record of the Hyde case, including the testimony of its expert witnesses and the like. It has disclaimed claims Nos. 9, 10 and 11 of its patent, the supreme court in the Hyde case having disallowed these three claims, which sought to broaden the patent to cover use of oil in any quantity. Evolution of the process has demonstrated that use of a quantity of oil less than 1 per cent effects the greatest recoveries, although Butte and Superior officials say that by use of more than 1 per cent satisfactory results are obtained. The company's main contention, however, appeared today to be that the Butte and Superior company as that validity of the Minerals Separation patent itself may be again attacked by the defense in far more elaborate manner, made possible by greater knowledge of the process, than it was in the Hyde case, before the trial of which the process was little known to American chemists and engineers. The final decree signed yesterday by Judge Bourquin merely conforms to the supreme court's findings, establishing validity of all but three claims of the Minerals Separation patent and perpetually forbids Hyde, his employees, agents, attorneys or servants from infringing or aiding or abetting infringement of the patent. NOTICE. Owing to the price of hay and oats all single horses and buggies from this date will be $4.00 per day except Sundays $5.00 per day. All double will be $8.00 per day from this date on except Sunday will be $10.00. F. J. GROGAN, JIM DAVIS, MACK McDONALD, J. D. MILLER, MAURICE EGAN.—Adv. NEW POSTMASTER. Ralph R. Bulford has been appointed postmaster at Ethel, Mont., according to advices received from the post-office department today by Postmaster Phil C. Goodwin.
