EIGHT MORE FOR ARMY AND NAVY

Recruiting Officers for Land and Sea Forces Have a Busy Day.

Eight men applied for enlistment in the army and navy at the local recruiting offices in the courthouse today. Four applicants for admission to the army are undergoing physical examination this afternoon and will sign enlistment papers tonight. Three applicants for the navy are also qualifying this afternoon, while one, John M. P. Valparic, a 16-year-old Austrian boy, qualified for enlistment as an apprentice seaman.

Chief Gunner's Mate W. R. Stevens arrived from Salt Lake this morning to assist in recruiting here. He has been in the service for 14 years.

Both D. R. Harlan and J. Stover, the local army recruiting officers, were kept busy today answering inquiries concerning enlistment, and they anticipate that ere the day is over at least eight or ten recruits will have been enlisted.

Advancement is Rapid.

In support of their contention that the United States army now offers more opportunities to enlisted men than ever before in its history, local recruiting officers today cited the recent action of the war department in picking 100 non-commissioned officers from six companies now on the Pacific coast, and commissioned them as second lieutenants, first lieutenants and captains. These men had previously been reported for commissions by their captains. The men advanced were particularly proficient as drill masters, and the army just now is short of commissioned officers.

P. D. Dorn, who was discharged 16 years ago yesterday from the Thirty-fourth infantry, a volunteer regiment, re-enlisted last night as a private.

More than enough men to form a regiment are being enlisted daily for the regular army, according to the war department, records of which show that for the five days ending Saturday night a total of 7,171 men were recruited. Enlistments in the navy Saturday and Monday totaled 1,655 men, bringing the combatant force up to 71,696 men.

under him had nothing to do but follow instructions to the letter.

Infantry Sweeps Forward.

As soon as the result of the battle between Solismis and Rheims was known the order was given to attack. Punctually at 4:45 the French infantry "went over" well supported by a powerful mass of artillery. They swept forward in magnificent style and in two hours the first line system had been captured. Later news came that the French soldiers were carrying all before them and taking prisoners by the score. They seized Montearmillet, Mont Haut and all the crests commanding the region.

Difficult Positions.

From their new positions the French now look down upon Moronvilliers and Nauroy. This Moronvilliers chain of hills was regarded by all French soldiers as a virtually impregnable and its capture caused the liveliest satisfaction to everybody. The 75's followed up the infantry rapidly and were soon in action. They caught large bodies of the enemy massing with the object of making a diversion and decimated them. According to onlookers, such carnage had not been seen since the action of Charny Gap at the beginning of the war.

On the Other Front.

On the right wing the struggle was equally to the advantage of the French. Auberville, on which the left wing of the French offensive of 1915 broke, fell speedily, as well as all the surrounding works. The French made especially good progress north of Auberville. In the section east of Naudesincourt, Hill 112 was stormed, as well as a small wood east of the hill, which was a regular nest of German machine guns.

Go Four Miles Forward.

At certain points the advance was close upon four miles in depth. The latest news reaching Paris says the battle continued well into the night, the Germans counter attacking without success and the French reconstructing the trench systems under the cover of their artillery.

According to information from a reliable source the double offensive of the British north of Arras and of the French on the Aisne disarranged the German plans. Field Marshal von Hindenburg, it is declared, was preparing an offensive against Riga and another against Italy, while on the western front he was considering an attempt on Calais on the one hand and on Paris on the other. The allied western offensive spoiled all this by obliging him to bring back a large part of the effectives intended for the Russian and Italian fronts.

GERMANS CLAIM 3,000 PRISONERS AND ALLEGE THEIR LINE HELD FAST

Berlin, April 18 (via London).—The number of prisoners taken by the Germans on the French battle front yesterday, according to the official statement issued today by the German army headquarters staff, was increased to more than 3,000 officers and men.

French attacks in the Champagne yesterday over a 12-mile front, the German statement adds, were prevented from piercing the Teuton lines by the German barring positions. Part of the wood between Moronvilliers and Auberville was wrested with considerable violence from French troops which had reached there. During the fighting on April 16 26 of the numerous French armored motor cars were destroyed.

German forces in Macedonia, the German official statement says, drove the French from positions one kilometer wide on the Crvena Stena which were captured by the French last March.

BRITISH HOLD GROUND AS SUPPLIES COME UP

British Headquarters in France, April 18 (via London).—(From a staff correspondent of the associated press.) Operations on the British front may be said to have reached a temporary holding stage along the line of the recent advance. Toward Lens and St. Quentin the process seems to be one of absorption. Minor assaults here and there are improving the British positions, but the general battle scheme is awaiting the development of its next stages.

War operations involving such numbers as are now opposed on the western front necessarily move in waves. The work of bringing up supplies, guns and munitions during apparent lulls often is more strenuous than the actual assaults and it is of equal importance. The British plunge forward in Easter week reached a greater depth in a shorter time than any attack on such large scale since entrenched warfare began on this front. The total of 227 guns brought in, together with ammunition by the thousands of rounds and other supplies, exceeds any haul made during a similar period of the war.

What Germans Expected.

All German documents which have been captured show that the enemy knew an offensive was being planned about Arras because of the massing of troops and batteries.

It is evident, however, that the Germans expected their first or second lines to hold. This was particularly true of their conditions on Vimy Ridge, which was the northern Gibraltar of the Hindenburg line. The operations about Lens are proceeding. The British already hold positions on all the western approaches, although the city itself has not been penetrated. Lens is the central point of the great mining district which straddles for miles in all directions. It is an ideal place to defend against ordinary attacks, each slag heap and factory building being an individual fortress.

London, April 18.—The British forces have made further progress north of St. Quentin and have captured the village of Villers-Guislain, according to an official statement given out by the war office today. The statement follows:

URGENT YEARNING FOR PEACE AND FOOD AMONG MASSES IN GERMANY

The Hague, Tuesday, April 17 (via London, April 18).—How urgent is the yearning for peace among the German people and how great is the increased strain just imposed on them in consequence of the reduction of the bread ration may be judged from the exhortations and the pictures of woeful alternatives published in provincial newspapers on the inauguration of the curtailment of the bread supply. The Courier of Hanover, for example, represents that a quick but unsatisfactory peace would not lead to a better food supply. The people are told that Great Britain, France, Italy and even the United States are reckoning with a world famine for the coming year and that instead of solving the food problem by a premature conclusion of peace the demands of these countries for their own needs would prevent the supplying of Germany with foreign foodstuffs.

More Sacrifices. The Courier portrays the British people as paying the highest grain prices of a century and declares that the Germans are situated more favorably than those who planned to starve them, not being menaced by a bad world crop and rapidly sinking ship tonnage. If, however, the blockade of Germany should succeed through lack of economy, the newspaper says, "our people would have not only a time of bitter hunger, but also a long period of lowest wages and the most painful unemployment. Then while France, Italy and Russia carried off Alsace-Lorraine, Triest, the Trentino, Constantinople and big Austro-Hungarian provinces as the price of peace, Great Britain will undertake the long planned assassination of our economic rights. Bread would be dear, and wages low for our entire laboring population. We must therefore muster all of our strength, clinch our teeth and, remembering the sacrifices and sufferings of our men folk in the field, hold out and take up this new food sacrifice."

HIS CONVICTION BASED UPON FALSE TESTIMONY

Chief Justice Fickert and Edward Cunha, assistant prosecutor, as having had knowledge that he was testifying falsely to support Oxman's story. In signing the warrant, Police Judge Matthew Brady said: "It is customary in such a case to get the approval of the district attorney to such a warrant as this, but in this case I don't think it will be necessary."

Fickert planned to bring Rigall's charges before the grand jury but Chief White refused to adopt that method, preferring to bring the evidence into open court. Oxman arrived here last night. Rigall arrived this morning. Oxman's bail was fixed at $2,500 cash or $5,000 bond. Rigall in his statement to Chief White detailed conversations he had with Oxman after his arrival here Jan. 6 during the Mooney trial in response to letters and telegrams from Oxman.

Their Conversation.

"All you have to do is to say you saw me in San Francisco July 22," Oxman told Rigall, according to the latter. "But I wasn't here then—I was never here." "You were as much here as I was," Oxman replied, according to Rigall. "They will prove my testimony false," Rigall said. "Never mind—that the state will take care of its witnesses," Rigall said Oxman replied. Rigall did not testify, but he said District Attorney Fickert gave him $100. Oxman had promised him $250 personally, Rigall said. When the warrant for Oxman's arrest was asked of Judge Brady, a representative of the district attorney's office opposed its issuance. "I want to say to your honor," said Thomas O'Connor, attorney for the bomb defendants, "that the district attorney's office is a party to this conspiracy."

"Smith is certainly stuck on himself, isn't he?" remarked Brown. "He sure is," agreed Jones. "Why, if he ever tried to swallow his pride he would choke to death."
