ENCOURAGE PROHIBITION AMONG THE SOLDIERS

London, May 24.—In reply to an appeal from temperance societies that "totalitarians serving in the army should not be given orders which involve the breaking of their pledge," Arthur Henderson, labor member of the war cabinet, sent a statement on behalf of the cabinet, saying:

"As regards the army, both from what I have seen and what I have heard, I am satisfied that the standard of sobriety and good conduct among the men generally is higher than it has ever been before and compares favorably with that prevailing among the civil population. There is no reason to fear that a young man of good principles and careful training will be exposed to special temptation as a soldier, or that he will find himself unsupported in standing to his convictions."

SPANISH PRETENDER NOT NOW A GERMAN PARTISAN

Madrid, Spain, May 24.—Don Jaime of Bourbon, who has been repeatedly classed among the Spanish partisans of the German cause, is said now by his former secretary, Don Francisco Melgar, to entertain quite opposite sentiments. Senior Melgar declared recently:

that coldness prevailed between Emperor William and Don Jaime, despite the statements to the contrary by the so-called Carlist papers that are Germanophile.

In a letter to Senior Melgar, Don Jaime says: "You know that the kind of friendship shown me in Berlin on the occasion of my last trip there consisted in having me arrested and in behaving with incredible rudeness toward me."

BRITISH WAR OFFICE KNOWN AS "THE MAZE"

London, May 24.—"The Maze" is the colloquial name for the great architectural pile in Whitehall which houses the British war office. The building contains more than a thousand rooms, and visitors often find themselves lost in the bewildering twistings and turnings of the long corridors, with their ante-rooms, offices, corners and stairways. The second floor contains the principal offices, those of the minister of war, the military secretary and others. Many of the war office departments which have expanded enormously since the war began maintain annexes, some in very distant parts of the city.

GREAT CROWDS GREET ENVOYS

Joffre and Viviani Receive Big Demonstration on Their Return to Paris.

Paris, May 24.—Enormous cheering crowds welcomed the French mission to the United States on its arrival here from America. Premier Ribot, Minister of the Interior Malvy and other members of the cabinet were at the station to welcome the envoys.

"Why, this is like New York," said Marshal Joffre as the automobiles which conveyed the members of the mission from the station were halted on account of the density of the cheering crowds. The police lines were broken through by the throngs of spectators, who surrounded the automobiles waving flags and handkerchiefs.

Premier Ribot congratulated the members of the mission upon the results of their trip to America, as did the other cabinet members. After the official reception was over M. Viviani, discussing his departure from Washington, said:

"I told President Wilson how deeply touched I was by the manifestations of the sympathy of the American people. The president replied simply: 'We are brothers in the same cause.'"

MONSTER BABY IS PUZZLING SCIENCE

Child of Two and a Half Years Weighs One Hundred Pounds.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A 100 pound baby, just 2 years and 9 months old, who moves furniture as a pastime with the ease of a piano mover and who eats as much as two adults at each meal, is baffling science.

Doctors from near and far have studied him. He has been X-rayed and examined. They cannot find anything abnormal about him except his weight. They cannot explain his growth. His enormous weight is not due primarily to fat, because his bones are as large as an adult's 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighting 154 pounds.

The baby is "Billy" McCarthy, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. McCarthy, 127 Elmwood avenue, Narberth.

When he was born, Aug. 23, 1914, in New York City, he weighed nine pounds and twelve ounces.

Kept on Growing.

He immediately began to gain at such a phenomenal rate that when he left the hospital with his mother 21 days later he weighed 36 pounds. A 3-week-old baby weighing 36 pounds was an unheard of thing even in New York City. He kept right on gaining until at 9 months he weighed 89 pounds, and today, although he will not be 3 years old until August, he stands 3 feet 6 inches in his stocking feet and weighs 100 pounds.

Billy has a brother, Frank, who is nearly 5 years old, with whom he plays like a doll, and Frank wears "3-year-old suits" himself. Billy holds Frank on his lap like a plaything and pushes him around the McCarthy lawn in the "Irish Mail" cart with the faculty of a baby elephant playing with a kitten.

And the interesting thing about "little" Billy is that his mind is away above normal. It has not been hurt by his growth. He talks about things, reasons and asks questions which a child of 6 or 8 would not think of. His mother says all the doctors who have examined him say that he is away above normal mentally and to just let him grow as long as he is healthy.

Four Quarts a Day.

"You see I was a trained nurse before I was married," said the mother, "so I know a lot of doctors. They have heard about Billy and a great many of them have examined him for reasonable fees, although we have spent into the thousands of dollars to find out if there is anything the matter with him. I just let him eat everything he wants now. I found that when I tried dieting him he put on more flesh than when I let him have what he wanted. He almost eats us out of house and home. Even at his age this baby eats as much as two adults."

He eats meat, but not much except chicken, steaks and chops. His mother orders chicken three times a week for him. The milk order is four quarts of milk daily.

Getting the ordinary comforts of baby life for young Billy is a problem in high and frenzied finance, according to his mother.

His shoes cost $12 a pair. They have to be made to order, and he grows out of them in three months. His entire wardrobe has to be renewed every three months because he grows so fast. His last shirts cost $4 apiece.

Has Regular Auto Springs. And his baby carriage—well, it has to have regular automobile springs—and it had to be made to order, too. The parents paid $42 for that baby carriage.

Billy is even outgrowing that carriage now. But he would have it if he begins to walk. His parents feared he never would be able to walk because he is so heavy.

But two months ago he surprised everybody by beginning to walk and now he toddles around with as much ease as a child of 5 or 6.

He has a wonderful disposition—never gets cross and is happy as any normal healthy baby should be. And he has a grip like a vice. When the reporter bade the young lad farewell and extended a hand for a handshake the "baby" took it with a Jess Willard hold and gave a grip worthy of the champion. He thought it a good joke when the reporter said, "Ah, Billy, your fate is cut out for you—you are going to be a furniture mover." This remark came as a result of the information imparted by the mother that she was unable to keep her furniture where she placed it. "That baby is no respecter of furniture," she said with a laugh, "whether it is the buffet or the dining room table or the sideboard. It is all the same to him. He just moves them wherever he wants to." Moving Billy is another matter. His mother has "some job" taking him up and down stairs and lifting him into the bathtub.

GOOD PROSPECT. "Some say the authorities are up in the air in the defense preparedness." "I suppose the aviation department authorities must be."

HOW HE OBTAINED AN APPROPRIATION

Practical John Wanted to Be Shown What it Amounted to, Anyway.

The Post's Washington Bureau. Washington, D. C., May 24.—Congress has made an appropriation in the sundry civil bill for scientific observations of the total eclipse of the sun that is to take place in 1918, and as a result numerous scientific gentlemen will point their telescopes to the heavens out in Colorado and perhaps other western states when the proper time comes to make observations.

The story of how these scientific gentlemen wrung an appropriation of $2,000 from a very reluctant and utilitarian committee on appropriations makes an interesting chapter in congressional annals.

C. G. Abbot, a distinguished scientist and director of astrophysical observations of the Smithsonian Institution, was put forward as the spokesman for the scientists at the hearing before the appropriations committee.

"We are asking," said the eminent doctor, "for $2,000 to observe the total eclipse of the sun in the year 1918. The last time we asked for an appropriation for this purpose was in the year 1900. This total eclipse, which is coming in 1918, will be visible from Oregon across the country to Florida. It will pass through the nearly cloudless regions in Colorado and other of the western states, where it will be very favorable for observation."

In response to a question from the committee as to where the observation is to be taken, Dr. Abbot said: "The best place for the one which is proposed would probably be in Nebraska or Colorado, but the path of totality extends from Oregon across to Florida."

At this point practical John J. Fitzgerald, chairman of the appropriations committee, began to butt in. He wanted to know if one governmental party would not be sufficient to make the observations.

"I think that several parties would be better," answered Dr. Abbot, "because totality lasts only for two minutes or thereabouts, and you know how often a cloud covers one region for two minutes, so that if there are a dozen observers engaged at different places along the path they have a much better opportunity of observing the thing."

Fitzgerald was still from Missouri. "What value is there in observing these eclipses?" he asked, sharply. "What do we get from it?"

The good doctor, somewhat stunned, proceeded to exhibit some photographs of a similar observation made in 1900 at Wadesboro, N. C. Pointing with pride, he said to Fitzgerald:

"You will see there the very interesting and curious formation of the solar corona at that time. Here is a composite photograph of a number of photographs taken by the naval observatory in 1905, where you see this appendage of the sun had an altogether different appearance. This change in the appearance of the solar corona passed through a sort of cycle along with the sun-spot cycle."

Practical John, being a practical disciple of Tammany Hall, which is a very practical organization, still had to be shown.

"Of what value is it, practically or scientifically?" he demanded.

The good doctor, at last realizing that practical John was a Tartar, nevertheless controlled himself in patience.

"In the first place," he proceeded to explain, "we have found that there is a variability of the sun and a variability of its heat; that variability is associated with the variability of the form of its corona and, therefore, it is interesting to correlate the two to see how they go along together."

"But of what value is it, either scientifically or practically, now that we know there is a variation in the heat of the sun?" persisted Fitzgerald. "We may think, but we may not be sure," replied the doctor, smothering his wrath, "that the corona in 1918 will be similar in form with what it was in 1905. We should like very much to know positively."

"Having found that out, of what good is it?" shot back Fitzgerald. "The good doctor was too hot under the collar to contain himself any longer. In a rising tone of voice that made a dent in practical John's ear-drums he shouted:

"Well, what good is it when Beethoven writes a sonata? Perhaps somebody who does not understand it or care for it would not care whether he wrote or not."

The doctor finally got his appropriation but not until after practical John had submitted various other caustic comments to the effect that the world don't care a cuss what the sun's corona looks like.
