Fort Benton, Aug. 6.—Straw used to repair a road near here caused the loss of a valuable automobile owned by Mrs. C. E. Duer. The straw caught fire and the automobile was destroyed. Earlier in the season a bad mud hole was filled with straw by the road supervisor. The recent hot days dried out the straw. Yesterday the Duer automobile became stalled in the depression. The driver of the car was severely burned trying to rescue the car. The other passengers escaped without injury.

ON COLLEGE MAN RESTS A BURDEN

Institution at Bozeman is Rendering an Excellent Service.

Bozeman, Aug. 6.—The direct service which the Montana State College of Agriculture and its experiment station rendered during this the first phase of war activity, in co-operation with the state war defense board, and their thorough preparedness for this service, have made a profound impression upon the people of the state who have become familiar with the participation of the college and the station.

One prominent man, a former governor of Montana and one of the best-known public men in the state, after he had made a careful personal survey of the work which the State college and its experiment station had done, said: "I never realized that we had truly an agricultural college in Montana until I had studied the results that have been attained this season."

Dean F. E. Linfield of the experiment station, discussing the demands which the war crisis has made upon the trained agriculturist, makes the following timely statement:

"It is upon the college type of man that the responsibility to answer the call of the nation and the consciousness of that responsibility rest most heavily. However, there are many young men of the college type who are younger than the minimum age for service and there are many of those of the eligible age who will not be needed at present. The very best way that those can serve their country is by getting the best training while they remain at home.

"When the war is over the nation will need, as never before, the man with the trained mind and the broad outlook which comes from and as a part of a college education.

"It is the patriotic duty of every young man and woman who can do so to continue the work of education through college; it is the duty of every parent to make supreme effort to enable sons and daughters to gain the college training. Such training will never be more urgently needed than during and after the war.

"The problems growing out of food production and distribution demand the attention of the best minds this nation can command. Never before in the history of the world has there been such a demand for trained workers in agricultural problems.

"The colleges of agriculture and the experiment stations were never so well prepared as now to do effective work for the training of men to solve these problems.

"The Montana State College of Agriculture at Bozeman with its experiment station is ready and prepared to train Montana young men—to train and put them in the field of service—real service to the nation now and after the war is over."

FOREST FIRES IN MONTANA SUBDUED

At Least, Most of Them Are Under Control, Says Mr. Gardner.

That the forest fires in the state of Montana are practically under control, was the statement today of E. D. Gardner, representing the forestry service in Butte. A fire of some intensity is reported today from the Nine Mile vicinity near Missoula but men are fighting it and promise to have it under control before night. The fire back of Butte and across the main range is still burning but has been confined to one area, it is reported. The fire in the Pipestone country, near Whitetail peak and about 10 miles from Butte. It will be safely handled unless high winds combine with the dry weather to make a new outbreak.

Many of the fires starting this year were blamable to the continued dry spell, says Mr. Gardner. But a few of the blazes, especially the big fire along the Yak river, were undoubtedly of incendiary origin. The worst fire now burning in the state is along the Kootenai river near the Idaho line. Small rains in the past few days have helped put the fires under control.

"Big fires that break out at this time must be patrolled until snow flies, says Mr. Gardner. "The fires may be extinguished as far as immediate danger is concerned, but are liable to break out from smoldering stumps at any time."

"One good feature is that most of our fires this year have been in slashings. I am still taking applications from men who want to help in fire fighting but so far have sent out no crews from Butte. But the men are liable to be called at any time, the outbreak of a new fire being a possibility at any moment."
