TROOPS ARE SENT TO SMELTER CITY

Federal Government Takes Steps to Preserve Order at Anaconda.

Unloading a big truck they had rolled into the camp grounds. In a quarter of an hour or less they were at work making camp.

The force is under command of Maj. Ernest H. Williams, Battalion Adjutant Lieutenant Burke, Captain Anderson and Lieutenant Spaulding.

The coming of the soldiers was a surprise to most of the people of the city, but the news was everywhere welcomed most heartily.

The business of making camp was an interesting spectacle to many citizens who visited the site.

Guard lines were promptly thrown out, but there was abundant room for the spectators, who watched as squads were detailed at unloading the freighters.

Major Williams has established headquarters at the Montana hotel and a telephone was installed there this morning for his use and to connect him with all parts of the city.

GIANT AIRPLANE A NEW DEMAND

America Must Produce Machine to Carry Tons of Explosives.

New York, Sept. 15.—Italy's experiences in military aeronautics which she entered practically a newcomer, in 1915, and which have enabled her now to produce the most powerful airplane in the world, a craft driven by a 900-horsepower motor and capable of sustaining three tons besides the craft's own displacement and the weight of its operator and fuel, are an indication of the possibilities which the recently energized activities of this country may accomplish.

In an address delivered at the Automobile club under the auspices of the Aero club, Major Peretti extended the thanks of Italy to the United States for the assistance given in the development of Italian aeronautics, and, after an explanation of the efforts of Italian aeronauts to develop motors of especially high power, made a plea that the United States assist itself to the creation of very large engines.

"Italy has made tremendous progress in the technique of airplane construction," said Major Peretti. "She has created a range of types which represent the fastest airplane in the world, with a speed of 135 miles an hour, the fastest seaplane, with an speed of 112 miles an hour, and the largest airplane, the Caproni triplane, with a 900-horsepower motor and capable of carrying three tons. But we and the United States must make more progress.

"Since the beginning of the war in 1914 we have seen the land armies attain a sort of balance which would be difficult to upset without great sacrifice of life. But it must be upset, or some other solution must be found, for the extensive use of the submarine is threatening the supply of materials essential, not only to sustain life, but to conduct the war. We must find a method which will drive the enemy back, not a mile or two, but for tens and hundreds of miles. To accomplish this the important supply bases of the enemy must be destroyed, or rendered temporarily useless, and the airplane seems to offer the only immediate solution.

"Until now the chief factor in military operations has been the gun designed to discharge large quantities of high explosive for scouting. Now the airplane must be used as an instrument for carrying and discharging explosives beyond the range of land batteries and the supply of explosives each plane carries must be large.

THE First Planes.

"The possibility of accomplishing this is apparent when one studies the history of the airplane in war. The first planes were equipped with motors of 100-horsepower and under, and they had a comparatively short cruising radius because of inability to carry both fuel and explosives, one or the other had to be sacrificed.

"Today we have reached a point where the 1,000-horsepower motor may be turned out capable of carrying three tons and more of useful weight and with a cruising radius of 300 to 350 miles. It is along these lines that Italy has been conducting experiments. The big Caproni triplanes are already in use by the government for transportation of men and supplies between military centers, and their carrying range, both in weight and distance, will be increased as development proceeds.

"Besides this, Italy has manufactured a large number of the famous semi-rigid Farlanini dirigibles, which are more efficient than the Zeppelins, half of the weight of the Zeppelin aluminum frame having been eliminated in the Italian model. For two years the Farlanini have conveyed ships nightly from Italian ports and not a ship so conveyed has been sunk."

"But, successful as his nation has been, Major Peretti stated that the combined aerial resources of the allies were inadequate to the program which he proposed, and he urged the United States as the most valuable immediate step it would take to begin the construction of vast numbers of airplanes and the development, especially, of great motors.

STOCKS ARE WEAK TRADING IS LIGHT

Day's Developments Not Favorable for Bull Side of Market.

New York, Sept. 15.—Reactionary tendencies were uppermost in the stock market today. The trend was attributable to a variety of unfavorable influences, including the less satisfactory Russian news, the rumored presence of the hostile submarine in the western Atlantic and reports that industrial taxation would be increased largely. In the face of these factors, possibilities of the bear side became more promising for the moment and special issues were sold very freely.

The coppers were the main points of weakness. Inspiration lost more than three points.

Toward the close the list stiffened on a demand for coalers and motors, but subsequently yielded again on increased weakness of steels and copper.

The closing was heavy. Total sales amounted to 185,000 shares. Bonds were irregular. Liberty bonds sold at 99.96 to 100.

COPPER STOCKS IN A SLIGHT DECLINE

Rumor on Wall Street That U. S. Price Will Be 20 Cents is Cause.

The market was quiet today, with quotations on the leading stocks somewhat on the decline. No official announcement has yet been made as to the price the government will pay for copper, but a rumor on Wall Street to the effect that it will not be over 20 cents a pound caused a slight decline in the copper stocks.

The railroads showed little activity, and the prices which prevailed for the past few days did not show any improvement today. The total sales on the New York exchange for today were only 102,500 shares.

Anaconda was down as low as 69 1/2 after opening at 71 1/2, but recovered slightly and closed at 70 1/2.

Among the railroads Canadian Pacific opened at 155 1/2 and closed at 154, while New York Central closed at 78 1/2 after opening at 78 1/2.

Among the dispatches received by the Heilbronner company today were the following:

"We hear that the next dividend on Inspiration is likely to be cut."

"The market is so limited that 200 or 300 shares affects it either way. A little selling movement came in the coppers on the rumor that the price would be nearer 20c than 25c for the metal."

"Rallying tendencies are expected to continue along the lines of the last day or two. On reactions we think purchases for returns will give fair results. Professionals show a diminishing bearish sentiment and are talking of the German peace proposals, signs of the ending of copper strikes and betterment in the Russian situation as inducing covering movements."

"Copper Petroleum is being pulled in some circles. American Smelting is well bought. Southern Pacific's floating supply has been materially reduced."

"The market for copper sold off today on the rumor that copper prices would not be over 20c. This, however, was not verified. Persistent talk of reduction in inspiration had a weakening effect upon that issue and it sold to its former low—49 1/2. Evening up was in order, but news was scarce. We should hear the reply of Germany to the pope's peace note very shortly. Money conditions remain about the same. Bankers are keeping their accounts well liquid, and a tightening up tendency will probably occur later on. Would rather sell on bulges for the present at least."

"The dispatches to the Laurier-Wolcott company had among them the following:

"Until the situation becomes more irregular, the tendency may be rather irregular with the possibilities favoring gradual depreciation."

"It is said proposed excess profits tax on inspiration will work out disadvantageously, for the reason that the company was not a money-maker in the pre-war period."
