MUST CONSERVE FOOD SUPPLIES

It's the Nation's Business to Help Mr. Hoover, Says A. R. Currie.

"Help Hoover!" This is the message brought back by A. R. Currie, who was called to Washington, D. C., together with 29 other jobbers from all parts of the United States, to attend a conference with Mr. Hoover and his assistants in formulating his plans for a proper conservation and distribution of the food products of the United States. Mr. Currie today said:

"Mr. Hoover says we must all help to win this war, and do everything we possibly can to eliminate waste. Use fresh fruits and vegetables as much as possible and conserve our stocks for our allies, and when our president and his men bearing the burden of another Lincoln, ask us to be sparing of the foodstuffs so we can share with our allies, all of us should do our bit."

"Mr. Hoover and his assistants will control 75 per cent of the United States food supply. Most amazing is the fact that the control has been made voluntarily, and all those engaged have volunteered their services without compensation. The United States food administration, by virtue of its power of licensing food industries, will govern the prices on the staple food products of the world. Through these licenses the food administration will stabilize prices. Mr. Hoover stated it is not the intention of the administration to fix prices or disturb the present system of merchandising where legitimate methods are used or a necessary function performed, but merely to maintain fair competition and prevent speculation and hoarding. With licenses necessary for the operation of a food industry, operators will speculate and hoard only at the risk of revocation of their licenses.

"In our deliberations the speculator or hoarder was clearly defined, and with the proposed plan worked out by the administration the man who attempts to take advantage of the situation brought about through our struggle for freedom and liberty by speculating in food products will submit himself to the full penalty of the law."

"It was Mr. Hoover's desire that on our return home we request our press to invite every American citizen to cooperate with his department to the fullest extent to conserve in every way possible the food products of our nation. He stated: 'I possibly can better illustrate the necessity of conservation by a cablegram received by my office this morning. France is asking for delivery of 150,000 tons of sugar by Dec. 31.' He further stated we haven't got the sugar to give them, but they must have it in order to live. France already has put her people on an allowance of 16 pounds per capita per annum, which is less than the amount required to insure good health, while the consumption in this country is 34 pounds per capita per annum. We simply must cut down our requirements to meet the demands of our allies. We must sacrifice, and without sacrifice there is no patriotism."

"Yes, the preparations for war in Washington are very much in evidence. That is true all through the east. I only wish that our people in the western states could get the idea that we are 'head over heels' in war, and that it behooves every man and woman to do 'their bit' in whatever way they see best."

"A considerable number of radical labor leaders and their followers seem to have no sense of their responsibility to the country, to the men whose lives they are sacrificing on the battlefield, or to the cause of a world's peace and democratic progress."

"The delays caused by strikes must be paid for in blood of their countrymen. To press for excessive or untimely advantages at such a time as this is as bad as for the hoarder or speculator to wring extortionate profits out of war. Both are a coining of selfish profit out of the nation's necessity and the delay of war preparation is turning blood into money."

A Strenuous Objection—

If your coal dealer delivered only three-quarters of a ton of coal and charged you for a full ton, you would object—and refuse to pay the bill. The same principle applies in the fuel consumption of a heater—why use a heater that wastes one-quarter of your fuel?

Great Western Oak

consumes all carbon and gases—none escapes up chimney. Scientific flue system discharges heated air through slotted openings right over fire, and through mica door you can clearly see the shooting flames—representing the burning gases. In actual use, you can feel the increased heat—and decreased amount of coal used. Be convinced by an inspection.

TWO REFERENDUMS FOR MERCHANTS

Secretary Austin Has Special Communication From National Chamber.

The two referendums which have been presented to the Butte Chamber of Commerce concerning food regulation and railway control are well explained in the following paragraphs from a letter received by Secretary Charles Austin this morning from the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States:

"The principles which are now used in the regulation of American railways, and the form which any new federal legislation on the subject should take, have been actively before congress and its committees for several years. Accordingly a report which has been made by the National Chamber's Railroad Committee, with recommendations concerning the policy which it believes should be adopted by the federal government, is very timely. Submission of its recommendations to referendum gives the organizations in the membership of the National Chamber an opportunity to arrive at a consensus of business opinion regarding policies of national legislation which have a direct interest for every community."

"The policy of the federal government regarding control of prices is immediately before congress. Various bills and proposals are pending. Concerning the policy which should be adopted a special committee has made a report with recommendations. Because of the immediate importance that each organization should make its position known regarding control of prices, you are asked to place your position before your representatives in congress, both senators and representatives, at the same time you file your ballot with this chamber."
