JUVENILE COURT TODAY

Widows Granted Financial Aid—Girl Charged With Stealing.

The juvenile court session this morning presided over by Judge John Sawyer had two widows in attendance asking for support for minor children under the financial aid act. One widow had one child and she was awarded $20, while the other widow with five children was allowed $40 a month. Three boys were before the court charged with truancy. They were allowed to go home with their parents on promising to go to school regularly hereafter. A girl, aged 14 years, was charged with stealing money from a neighbor. Her case was continued until next Friday and she was allowed to go home with her parents.

GOOD-BYE BACKACHE, KIDNEY AND BLADDER TROUBLES

For centuries all over the world GOLD MEDAL Haaren Oil has afforded relief thousands upon thousands of cases of back, lumbago, sciatica, rheumatism, neuritis, gravel and all other ailments of the kidneys, liver, stomach, and allied organs. It acts quickly and completely cures the distressing disease of the kidneys. It makes a new man, a new woman, of you. It drives away all attacks of the dread disease of the kidneys. It completely cures the distressing disease of the bladder and kidneys. Bloody urine, sediment, or "brick-bat" is an unhealthy condition.

Do not delay a minute if your back aches or you are sore across the loins or have difficulty when urinating. Go to your drugist at once and get a box of imported GOLD MEDAL Haaren Oil Capsules. They are pleasant and easy to take. They dissolve in the stomach, and the kidneys soak up the oil like a sponge does water. They thoroughly cleanse and wash out the bladder and kidneys and throw off the inflammation which is the cause of the trouble. Your drugist will cheerfully refund your money if you are not satisfied after a few days' use. Accept only the pure, original GOLD MEDAL Haaren Oil Capsules. None other genuine.

MARSHALL FIELD, WORTH $350,000,000, ENLISTED MAN, IS PROMOTED TO NON-COM

Marshall Field III., Uncle Sam's $350,000,000 sergeant, and a comrade making the best of their leisure hour at bustling Camp Logan, Houston, Texas.

"I Saw All My Friends Going to Officers' Training Camps and I Thought the Country Might Need a Few Privates. So I Enlisted," He Says.

BY EDWARD A. EVANS. Camp Logan, Houston, Tex.—There was nothing about the young sergeant to distinguish him from the other soldiers near. He lay stretched on a camp cot, reading diligently in a blue-covered manual of army drill. And he provided what is to me the best proof that our army now training to fight the battle of democracy is a really democratic army. The young sergeant is Marshall Field III., grandson of the great Chicago merchant and heir to $350,000,000. We found him in the section of Camp Logan that is occupied by Battery B, Second Illinois field artillery, of which he is a member. Among members of the same organization are former employees of Marshall Field & Co., workmen from the Chicago stockyards, clerks, a chorus man from a Chicago theater and even a cabaret singer. The other artillerymen, I found, have a wholesome respect for Sergeant Field as an efficient non-commissioned officer. As a multi-millionaire, they simply don't think of him. "He won't let us," one of them explained. "He doesn't spend more money, wear better uniforms, eat better food or have any easier times than the rest of us. The only difference seems to be that he studies more."

I asked him why he hadn't entered an officers' training camp. "I saw so many others trying to become officers that I thought a few privates would be much needed. So I enlisted and served two months as a private before I was made a corporal and later a sergeant. "I enjoyed it, hard work and all." "That's the kind of army Uncle Sam is getting ready, here in the training camp of the Illinois national guard as well as in the many other camps and cantonments scattered over the country. "It's an army in which one man is just exactly as good as another man; its officers as well as its soldiers are drawn from all ranks of civilian life. We saw a group of these new officers today gathered under one of the big pines of Camp Logan to hear a lecture from an older officer. It's my opinion that the history of America's share in this war against kaiserism will have much to say of the part played by these boys from the officers' training camps. Most of them have had only three months of intensive training. On trains going to the encampments I've seen them skulking like college freshmen. But here at Camp Logan, and in other training camps we have visited, I've found them serious and earnest, facing with grave determination their tremendous task of moulding untrained men into a great modern army. "We realize that we haven't learned all there is to know about modern warfare," one of the reserve officers told me. "We're willing to learn, and I believe it's that very willingness that's going to help us succeed." Camp Logan, eventually to hold more than 50,000 men, is in a dense forest of southern pines. Today the Illinois men are cutting down many of the trees, laying out streets, pitching tents and going through the many activities of army life. We saw army engineers digging out a roadway, artillerymen numbering and repairing saddles, infantrymen washing their uniforms and other infantrymen cleaning up their company streets. The soldiers are doing much thinking about the folk at home. I remarked to one of the camp Y. M. C. A. secretaries upon the number of men who were writing letters at the desks in his building. "You should have seen them on payday, standing in line, waiting their turns to write," he said. "There were less than 4,000 men in camp then, and this is only one of six Y. M. C. A. buildings, but at this building alone we sold more than $50 worth of money orders to be sent back home. "So, you see, these boys are not only doing their duty to their country; they're continuing to do their duty toward their families." In that section of Camp Logan most distant from the city of Houston we found one company of negro soldiers from Illinois. They are the only negroes now in the camp. They have been segregated because of the feeling stirred up by the Houston riot, in which negro soldiers of the regular army took part on Aug. 23. Maj. Gen. George Bell, Jr., commander of the camp, told me there is no danger of further rioting. But I find it the belief of many in southern cities where training camps have been located that negro troops from northern states should not be camped in the south. This belief is shared by many negro soldiers. "We've shown our patriotism by enlisting," one of them told me today. "We think we should be left to train in the north, where we understand the people and their ways."

MONTANA BOY PAYS OWN WAY TO ENLIST AT CAMP

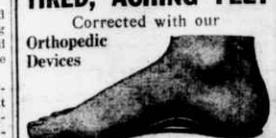

Takes Unusual Steps in Effort to Be in Same Company With Brother.

Tacoma, Wash., Sept. 28.—The war department was asked by officers at Camp Lewis to cut the official red tape which forbids volunteer enlistment in the national army on the plea of Charles Syberson, 24 years old, of Great Falls, Mont., that he be permitted to enlist in the same company to which his brother, Clarence, 22 years old, has been assigned. "Charles" arrived on the troop train with his brother, paying his own way, that he might enlist and be assigned for the duration of the war to the same company with his brother. Clarence was drafted from the Montana city and when he was informed that he was to be sent to Camp Lewis with the present contingent Charles asked the regular recruiting officers in Great Falls if he might not be permitted to enlist here. On receiving a favorable reply he came along to find that war department orders were that no one would be accepted in the 91st division unless drafted. With a break in his voice he asked the officers in charge of the receiving station if he would not be permitted to enroll some place where he could be near his brother. The case is so uncommon that a telegram, reciting the circumstances that egram, reciting the circumstances that Charles had paid his own way to enlist in the same company with Clarence in the same department and it is expected that a reply will give the necessary permission. It was said that Clarence probably would be transferred so that the two men could be in one company.

SAYS MILK PRODUCTS WILL "SOAR WAY UP"

Salt Lake Man Says Northwest Will See Unprecedented Prices.

Salt Lake.—In most cities west of the Rocky Mountains a milk shortage is being experienced, and in certain locations milk and its products are expected to go to unprecedented prices this winter, according to E. V. Ellington, assistant in the dairy division of the bureau of animal industry. Information received from El Paso, which is in the jurisdiction of the local federal officials, is to the effect that milk is now selling at 17 cents a quart. The announcement was made that butter has probably reached its highest point, and cheese is not expected to go any higher, the average price for the former in the western states at present being 55 cents. The high prices which have been paid farmers by livestock men for hay have caused the greater part of the dairymen throughout the intermountain country to sell off their dairy cows in order that they might sell the hay direct instead of feeding it to their own cattle. As a result the supply of milk has decreased, not only in Utah and Idaho, but in Montana and Wyoming.

CONDEMN SENDING OF TOBACCO TO SOLDIERS

Freeport, Ill., Sept. 28.—The practice of sending cigarettes and tobacco to soldiers was condemned in resolutions adopted today at the state convention of the Keystone League of Christian Endeavor of the United Evangelical church. The convention resolved to present a pocket Bible to each Keystone league member going into the army, and to keep in touch with them by personal letters, prayer and by sending them church and Sunday school literature.
