FIRST OSTEOPATH DIES IN MISSOURI

Dr. A. T. Still, Founder of Famous School of Osteopathy, Succumbs.

THE LATE DR. A. T. STILL.

Kirksville, Mo., Dec. 12.—Dr. A. T. Still, founder of the Osteopathic School of Medicine, died here today.

Dr. Still was a practicing physician and surgeon before the civil war. During the war he served with the Union forces as a surgeon. Following the war he moved with his family to Kansas, where he started practicing.

In the second year after the war an epidemic of spinal meningitis came in the territory where Dr. Still was practicing. His wife and all his children succumbed to the disease, although Dr. Still and a number of other physicians used every means possible to combat the disease.

The loss of his family impressed upon Dr. Still's mind the belief that there must be some method of treatment beyond that in the power of the medical world at that time. For years he studied the subject, finally evolving the practice of osteopathy. He announced his discovery to the world in 1871. The medical profession of Kansas refused to recognize the new system of treatment.

Dr. Still practiced osteopathy in Kansas, Illinois, Iowa and Missouri until his patients grew so large in number that he could not handle the work. He opened a school of osteopathy in Kirksville, Mo., and began the teaching of the new science. He has lived in Kirksville ever since. Three sons by a second wife are practicing in Kirksville.

DRAFT RECORD IS MATTER OF WORK

Data on Questionnaire Must Be Copied to Forms in the Board's Files.

In addition to the questionnaires which will be submitted by every registered man to his local board next week, the boards will keep a separate record of each man and the disposition made of his case. While the data will be obtained from the questionnaire, it will also be kept in form beyond the date of the return of the questionnaire and will include data on the date of examination of each man, his classification as set by himself and set by the board, his physical standing and his liability to service. There is also a blank to show that the man is a deserter through face of having been called for service and having failed to respond.

As the questionnaires are returned to the boards, they will be listed as to class. The class claim made by the registrant will be considered and compared with statements in the form, after which the board will either confirm the classification set by the registrant or make other classification. As the classification is determined upon, the questionnaire will be placed in the files. It is expected that the handling of the questionnaire will take about the same amount of time as the handling of an exemption claim.

All men falling under class I will be grouped by their questionnaire numbers in the files. Order numbers as given under the first draft will apply to classes in the second draft. When the board is called upon to furnish a number of conscripts, that many questionnaires will be selected from the men in the first class to order number. Men who wrote the questionnaires will then be summoned for physical examination. No exemptions beyond the possible physical rejections will be allowed.

Both the city and county boards are ready for the beginning of work under the new draft Saturday noon. Many of the questionnaires are already placed in envelopes, addressed and packed in mail sacks ready for delivery. The fact that registrants are allowed seven days after the date of mailing the questionnaire to return the filled out forms to the board requires that the mail be sent out promptly. The date of mailing the questionnaire and Sundays are not counted as part of the seven days.

FIRE WOMEN ARE NEXT PREDICTS FIRE CHIEF

Philadelphian, Dec. 11.—"Firewomen" are next! According to Fire Chief William H. Murphy, the day is not far distant when women will be taken into the bureau of fire, not only for clerical duty but for active work on the engines, trucks and ladders. Chief Murphy painted an attractive picture of daring, heroic hose-women.
