ATTRACTION FOR THE VISITOR

Most of the Tourists Who Go to Washington Insist on Seeing the Mint.

"You can have no idea," said a man who has formerly been a guide about Washington, "as to the sights many strangers who visit this city want to see, and all within a few hours' of time. One thing that made an impression upon me was that the great majority consider it time lost if they do not see the bureau of engraving and printing. They want to see where the government makes its bonds and bill notes and everything else that goes on in that important office. That has a preference beyond all else with a whole lot of folks.

"Though I am not now in the business, I have had several opportunities that I thought might have panned out well if I had been disposed to renew my old occupation. One happened recently that recalled to my mind how many of the people who have only a day or two to spend in the city want to see the money-making processes of the government.

"I was walking along F street, near Ninth, when a well-dressed man, carrying a handbag and accompanied by a little boy, approached me and courteously asked me the name of the interior department and old general post-office department buildings, and I took pleasure in telling him.

"Then he pointed to the treasury department, where it fronts on F street, and, of course, I told him that from the west portico he would have a good view of the White House and other great buildings. All this seemed very good to my newly met friend, and he asked me if it were in the treasury that the bank notes were made. I told him about the bureau of engraving and printing, and he made up his mind to take that for his objective point right away. I suggested that he get a guide, but he said he knew a man in the treasury and would hunt him up and get him to go with him.

"He further told me that while he had only a few hours to pass in Washington, he wanted to have his son, who was a little fellow about ten years old, to see the government making money.

"Now," remarked the ex-guide, "I have met many in my experience just like this man. They cut out other more interesting places to visit the engraving and printing bureau. But many others who have more time to spare want to take in everything, and go to Washington's church at Alexandria and Mount Vernon, as well. I'm almost sorry I got out of the guide business, for there's lots of fun in it, and profit, too, when you happen to be escorting a happy and generous crowd."

The President's Desk.

If the thousands who sit in the president's reception room in the White House waiting for an audience, only knew it, they might make the time less monotonous by contemplating the principal article of furniture, the executive's desk. It is handsome and massive, with a wealth of carving, but its chief interest consists in its historic origin. You all know that Sir John Franklin went to discover the north pole and never came back. His good ship Resolute drifted in the currents of the Arctic ocean, spared from destruction in some mysterious manner, until she reached the waters off the shores of Alaska, where some American whalers boarded her and claimed her. When she reached San Francisco the United States bought her, repaired and refitted her, manned her with an American crew, and sent her to England with international compliments. The old ship was broken up about 30 years ago, and from the soundest of her timbers a handsome desk was made, by direction of the queen, to be presented to the then president of the United States. That is the desk that stands in the president's reception room, and on it the papers of at least eight administrations have been written.

Turned Down.

There is a certain Washington maid, who is rich in her own right, and whose natural generosity has on more than one occasion been imposed upon by impecunious friends of both sexes in the set whereof she is a member.

At a dance not long ago an acquaintance of hers was, quite by chance, in a position to overhear a portion of a rather delicate conversation between the aforesaid young woman and her cousin Jack.

"Caroline," the young fellow was heard to say, "you know that I have long been fond of you. Now, I'm going to ask you for the . . ."

"Really, Jack, I can't do it," interrupted the young woman, hastily. "I've been so unlucky that way!"

"What are you driving at?" came from Jack. "I'm about to ask you to marry me."

Caroline heaved a sigh of relief. "Mercy, Jack!" she exclaimed, "I thought you were going to ask a loan!"—Harper's Weekly.

Answer This Question

When thousands of women say that they have been cured of their ailments by a certain remedy, does this not prove the merit of that remedy?

Thousands of women have written the story of their suffering, and have told how they were freed from it by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—for thirty years these reports have been published all over America.

Without great merit this medicine could never have gained the largest sale of any remedy for woman's ills—never could have become known and prized in nearly every country in the world.

Can any woman let prejudice stand between her and that which will restore her health? If you believe those who have tried it you know this medicine does cure.

Read this letter from a grateful woman, then make up your mind to give Mrs. Pinkham's medicine a chance to cure you.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I am a firm believer in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was a great sufferer from organic female troubles for years, and almost despaired of ever being well again. I had bearing-down pains, headache, and pains in my abdomen, and tried Mrs. Pinkham's Compound as a last resort. The result was astonishing, and I have used it and advocated it ever since. It is a great boon to expectant mothers. I have often said that I should like to have its merits thrown on the sky with a search-light so that women would read and be convinced that there is a remedy for their sufferings. "My husband joins me in its praise. He has used it for kidney trouble and been entirely cured."—Mrs. E. A. Bishop, 1015 Atlantic Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.
