STOP BURYING ALIVE

Campaign Started in England to Prevent Premature Burial.

Appointment of a Professional Verifier of Deaths in Each Coroner's District Suggested in Report to Home Secretary.

London.—The appointment of a professional verifier of deaths in every coroner's district to remove the haunting fear of being buried alive experienced by many nervous and aged people was one of the interesting suggestions made by Dr. Walter Hadwen in his evidence before the departmental committee appointed by the home secretary to inquire into the law relating to coroners' inquests.

The establishment of waiting mortuaries where the professional verifier would watch for positive proof of death was another of Dr. Hadwen's propositions. These would be pleasing places, with ornaments and flowers, like those in Munich and Berlin.

The evidence he had collected went to show that there was no definite, undeniable proof of death apart from incipient putrefaction. There were instances, Dr. Hadwen told the committee, of persons who had come to life after they had been placed in the waiting mortuaries.

Curious cases of death counterfeits were narrated by Dr. Hadwen from his own experience. During the Gloucester smallpox epidemic of 1896 a child believed to be dead of confluent smallpox was removed from hospital to the mortuary. Next day a gardener passing by the window of the mortuary heard the cries of the child. The little one was carried back to the ward and recovered.

In another case Dr. Hadwen had been attending a child of three suffering from convulsions with subsequent exhaustion. There seemed no hope of recovery, and he left the little patient one night thinking he had seen him for the last time.

Next day when the doctor reached the cottage the blinds were drawn and the broken-hearted parents were weeping by the side of the little body, which lay covered with a white sheet, and the undertaker was expected to bring the coffin in a few minutes. Looking down at the supposed dead child, the doctor fancied he could detect the slightest movement of the chest. He tried the pulse, but failed to detect a beat. A stethoscope revealed a heart beat, and after hot flannels had been applied and the body massaged for three hours the child was able to take nourishment.

FORGETTING ART OF WALKING

Invaluable Therapeutic Effects of Pedestrian Exercise a Discovery of Recent Hygiene.

London.—"Walking is going out of fashion; if something is not done it will soon become a lost exercise," declared a physician who, supporting the Lancet's contention, affirms that the ill effects arising from a lack of healthful exercise—due to laziness and to the motor car, tube, and other conveniences of travel nowadays—form one of the greatest problems of the moment as regards public health.

"Young men are forgetting how to walk," he added. "Yet walking is undoubtedly the exercise for city men. However busy they are they can find the short time daily which is the only demand this exercise makes. Its very simplicity makes some people discount it and turn to elaborate exercises. Yet it is nature's exercise."

"One of the most striking discoveries of quite recent physiology is connected with the therapeutic effect of walking. The action of walking—not to use too technical terms—pumps energy through the frame as does no other means known to science. The walkers are the health winners, and it may be said that walking has a moral effect not less distinct than its physical effect."

"A great employer of labor has said that all his foremen over a long succession of years were country-bred men, and he attributed their success solely to the fact that they walked to their work, with the result that they arrived beyond comparison more fit and vigorous, not to add more punctually, than the 'trammers.'"

"Bouts of a most praiseworthy zeal for exercise—Swedish exercises, Japanese exercises, American exercises—come over people, and these play their part. But they are rarely regularly practiced, largely because they are dull, and at the best they are no proper substitute for the natural, and it is now discovered, the irreplaceable, exercise of walking."

NEW CUSTOMS LAWS

Amended to Conform to Requirements of Payne Law, Issued by Treasury.

Acting Secretary Reynolds Sends Out Regulations Governing Free Entry of Domestic Exported, and Then Brought Back Here.

Washington, D. C.—The customs regulations governing the free entry of domestic products exported and afterwards brought back to this country, amended to conform to the requirements of the Payne law, have been issued by Acting Secretary of the Treasury Reynolds.

As a result of a recommendation made by the attorney general about a year ago, exporters of domestic whisky will have to produce a sworn certificate declaring the whisky to be in the same condition as when exported in order to obtain entry of the goods free of duty.

The new law exempts domestic animals from the duty-free provisions when returned to this country. They will have to pay the same duty when reimported as foreign animals. The regulation permitting the entry free of duty of domestic animals exported for racing and exhibition purposes is not affected by the other provision.

Moving picture films of American manufacture are entitled to free importation, after having been exported, only if they are damaged or light struck, so as to be unsuitable for their original purpose than the recovery of the constituent materials.

The new regulations also provide for the entry duty free of iron or steel drums used for the shipment of acids, of either domestic or foreign manufacture, which shall have been actually exported from the United States.

Preparatory to the collection of the tax placed upon foreign built yachts by the Payne tariff law, Acting Secretary of the Treasury Reynolds forwarded instructions to the collector of customs at New York to inquire of owners of such yachts whether they desire to pay the tonnage tax of $7 a ton annually or the ad valorem duty of 35 per cent. of the appraised value of the yachts at the time the duty is collected.

Yachts chartered or owned by Americans for a period of six months or more will hereafter be appraised at the first collection district in which they arrive. The next tax is to be collected on the 1st of September, and the customs officials are now preparing a list of the foreign built pleasure-boats owned or chartered by Americans.

Internal revenue collectors have been instructed to canvass their respective districts and obtain for the treasury department a list of the corporations which will be subject to the new corporation tax embodied in the Payne tariff law. Included in the list will be information regarding the amount of the capital stock of the corporations and their places of business. The corporations are divided into five classes—financial and commercial, industrial and manufacturing, public service, mercantile, and miscellaneous. This information is to be gathered preliminary to the determination of the regulations of the collection of the corporation tax.

TREATS SICK BABY ON CAR

Father of Eighteen, Familiar with Children's Ailments, Saves Infant's Life.

New York.—James Maher is the father of 18 children and what he doesn't know about convulsions, measles, mumps, whooping cough, and such things wouldn't take a doctor long to learn. Maher also is inspector for the Coney Island & Brooklyn railway.

A young mother had a young baby in a street car the other afternoon and the infant got convulsions and the mother got hysterics, and the other women in the car got into the street. The motorman stopped the car.

"Here," yelled Maher as he got aboard and took in the situation, "get to that drug store on the corner quick and bring back some mustard and a dishpan of hot water."

The motorman soon was back with them.

Maher swiftly took the baby's clothes off and had its feet in a hot mustard bath, while the women gattered about and wondered why none of them had thought of it.

"You've saved the kid's life," said a surgeon from Seney hospital.

A Question of Grammar.

Hetty's uncle, who was a school teacher, met her on the street one beautiful May day and asked her if she was going out with the Maying party.

"No, I ain't going."

"Oh, my little dear," said her uncle, "you must not say 'I ain't going,'" and he proceeded to give her a little lesson in grammar. "You are not going. He is not going. We are not going. You are not going. They are not going. Now, can you say all that, Hetty?"

"Sure I can," she replied, making a courtesy. "There ain't nobody going."

AFTER DOCTORS FAILED

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Her.

Willimantic, Conn.—"For five years I suffered untold agony from female troubles, causing backache, irregularities, dizziness and nervous prostration. It was impossible for me to walk upstairs without stopping on the way. I tried three different doctors and each told me something different. I received no benefit from any of them, but seemed to suffer more. The last doctor said nothing would restore my health. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to see what it would do and I am restored to my natural health."—Mrs. ETTA DONOVAN, Box 209, Willimantic, Conn.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills, and suffering women owe it to themselves to at least give this medicine a trial. Proof is abundant that it has cured thousands of others, and why should it not cure you?

DEFIANCE STARCH easiest to work with and starches clothes nicely

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine of known composition, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Ingredients printed on wrapper.
