THE DRINKS OF CUBA.

BEVERAGES THAT ARE PALATABLE AND WHOLESOME.

A List of the Distinctively National Drinks Which Delight the Citizens of Havana—The Ever Welcome Lemonade and the Divine Horchata.

There is not even a sentiment against liquor-drinking in Cuba. Yet in Cuba you will not find a drunkard. I leave this for the discussion of others, setting down the bare fact. All liquors that we know are used freely. But what is a drink of liquor here would not flavor the breath of the average American.

The panales are the base of a universal drink in Cuba. They are simply little snow-white loaves made by quickly baking whipped whites of eggs to which sugar has been added. Two of these are temptingly laid upon the top of your glass of water, and a long, slender spoon is also served. The delicate panales are dropped in the glass, thoroughly stirred until diluted in the water, when "panales" is ready for drinking.

ESQUISITE IN FLAVOR. Tamarindo is from the fruit of the tamarind, the tree being considered the most beautiful of any on the island. Enormous quantities of preserves made from the tamarind fruit are exported to Europe. It is exquisite in flavor, possessing both sweet and acid properties, which give it great demand for use in a form of a beverage.

Joseph E. Gary, presiding judge in the most important of recent American criminal trials, is a native of New York state, born in St. Lawrence county, in 1801. He received a superior education, showing remarkable aptitude for learning, and, at the close of his academic days read law with characteristic diligence.

An Important Treaty.

DETROIT, Aug. 26.—The Indian commissioners have just arrived from Red Lake in time to take the evening train for Brainerd on their way to Leech Lake. They have concluded an important treaty with the Red Lake Indians, which is independent of the treaty they are negotiating with the rest of the Minnesota Indians for removal to White Earth. The Red Lakers agree to their reservation surveyed and sold for forty-acre lots, the amount to be invested by the United States at 5 per cent, they receiving the income annually. They receive Red Lake and sufficient land for their homes. If this very valuable reservation realized fair prices, every family of Red Lake Indians will be worth $30,000, the income of which will make them independent. An immense amount of valuable land will be sold in small lots. If the commissioners succeed with every tribe as well as they have at White Earth and Red Lake, the Indians will be concentrated at White Earth and Red Lake and their future abundantly provided for. Rev. Gillilan, with his knowledge of the language and customs and enjoying the confidence of the tribe, has been of valuable assistance to the commission.

Pierced With Bullets.

CALGARY, N. W. T., Aug. 26.—The body of Chinkler Scott, a well known explorer and mining prospector, was found four miles west of town in a clump of trees, pierced with bullets. The motive was robbery, as he had a large sum on him at the time. He was married two months ago. The crime is supposed to have been committed by the same parties who held up the Edmonton stage a few days ago. Scott is thirty years of age, and was the discoverer of gold at Silver City. The mounted police are scouring the country for the murderers.

Why Mr. Clem Came to Town To-day.

There was yesterday, received from New Orleans a draft for $15,000, the sum drawn by William Clem of Monroeville, in the drawing of the Louisiana State Lottery. Mr. Clem will be in the city to-day to receive for his newly and easily acquired fortune. Many persons were skeptical and did not believe that the money would be forthcoming. The Louisiana State Lottery was sold as a National Bank and prizes were invariably paid in full.—Fort Wayne Journal, July 21.

TO THE MEMORY OF H. H.

O soul of fire within woman's clay! Lifting with slender hands a race's wrong. Whose mute appeal hushed all things early song, And taught thy passionate heart the lotterier way; What shall thy place be, in the realms of day? What disembodied world can hold the long, Binding that turbulent pulse with spell more strong? Dwell'st thou, with wit and jest, where poets may?

Or with ethereal women (born of air And poets' dreams) dost live in ecstasy, Teach new love-thoughts to Shakspeare's Juliet fair,

New moods to Cleopatra? Then, may be, The woes of Shelley's Helen, thou dost share, Or weep with poor Rosetti's Rose Mary.—Thomas Wentworth Higginson.

A Sugar Plantation in Cuba.

Went to the sugar plantation, "The Toledo," near the seacoast town of Marianao, a bathing place much resorted to in the summer by the Havaneses. The sugar factory is about three miles from the railroad station. A ride through an undulating country—a limestone formation—the road rough, and in many places out through the rock. The stone walls reminded one of New England, but the royal palm and cocconut trees did not. The former is very absurd-looking, with varying shapes. Imagine a palmetto, for it is of the same species, but instead of being uniform in size it is sometimes larger in the middle, swelling out twice as large below or above. In other instances the largest portion is near the ground. Others look like a gigantic carrot, with the point in the ground. Then the gray trunk about six feet from the top suddenly becomes smaller and of a smooth, bright green, as round and polished as possible to conceive. Just at the juncture of the green and gray there projects at right angles a brush of green and red flowers.

At the mill we witnessed the whole process of making sugar, from the grinding of the cane to the coarse brown granulated sugar, which was packed hard in bags to be shipped to New York to be refined. This sells for two or three cents per pound. No money is made in sugar-making now, and some years it is even made at a loss. At dinner I tried the wine most in use in Spain, the Val de Penas. It is rough, strong wine—and tastes—well, my daughter was informed in Spain, that it is put up in hogskins instead of barrels, and thus brought to the market. After this explanation, no one need doubt how it tastes. Yet the Spaniard considers that peculiar taste to be a great recommendation. Just as the Greeks prefer the wine put up in cedar casks, or the Scotch the smoky taste of their own whisky.—Dr. E. M. Hale in Inter Ocean.

Experience with a Slave Breaker.

Frederick Douglass had something in him that was not the best material from which to make a good slave. He was therefore sent, when a young man, to one Covey, a noted "slave breaker," to have his "spirit broken." Of his experience, there he writes: "I was somewhat unmanageable at first, but a few months of Covey's discipline tamed me. He succeeded in breaking me—in body, soul and spirit. My natural elasticity was crushed, my intellect languished, the disposition to read departed, the cheerful spark that lingered about my eyes died out, the dark night of slavery closed in about me—and behold, a man transformed into a brute! Sunday was my only leisure time. I spent this in a sort of beast-like stupor, between sleeping and walking, under some large tree. At times I would rise up, a flash of energetic freedom would dart through my soul, accompanied with a faint beam of hope that flickered for a moment, and then vanished. I sank down again, mourning over my wretched condition. I was sometimes tempted to take my life and that of Covey, but was prevented by a combination of hope and fear. My sufferings, as I remember them, now seem like a dream rather than a stern reality."—Boston Herald.

Is It Food or Climate?

Nor is it by any means impossible that the improved physique of our American backwoodsmen, especially their vertical increase, so confidently ascribed to climatic influence, may have a good deal to do with a change of diet. The average size of the Prussian army officers considerably exceeds that of the Prussian privates, so much indeed, that man for man, the descendants of the well-fed and sport-loving German country squires are an inch or two taller than the men enlisted at the recruiting depots of the United States army, though the medical commissioners of those depots reject about eight applicants in a dozen. Squat John Bull is a pawnbroker, and as numerous in Baxter street as in the old Jewry. British lords, British tourists, and British sportsmen are as tall and bony as any New Englander. The truth is that we are too apt to underrate the influence of personal habits and overrate that of external circumstances. A liberal diet combined with a fair amount of outdoor exercise will produce tall men in any climate; starvation and indoor drudgery will stunt the children of the stoutest race, in America as surely as in the Silesian weaver towns.—Dr. Felix L. Oswald.

Manufacture of a Terra Cotta Lumber.

A terra cotta lumber has recently been added to the list of mineral building materials. A kaolinite of good quality is mixed with sawdust, worked by machinery into slabs, and is then burned, sawed, and dressed. It is, in this condition, ready for market, and is said to be indestructible by fire, water or gas. It is a poor conductor, and snuffers but slight expansion or contraction by changes of temperature. Its weight is put down at one-half that of brick. It can be worked with edge tools, hewed, and sawed, and holds nails as readily as timber. It is also made into hollow tile and fireproof casing.—Scientific American.

The Danger of High Living.

It is not astonishing to people who knew Hancock to hear that his death was largely caused by high living. His every air was that of a bear vivand. He liked good wines and rich food, and his system was in such a condition as to be ready for the attack of disease.—Cor. Cleveland Leader.

First Black Parrot in this Country.

A New York naturalist has received from Madagascar the first black parrot ever brought to this country. The bird stands nearly fourteen inches in height and its plumage is a deep purple black.—Exchange.
