

Justice Harlan Anecdotes

ANY anecdotes of the late John Marshall Harlan, associate justice of the United States supreme court, are recalled by those who knew him. He had a keen sense of humor. Even when struggling with complex legal problems this appreciation of the humorous flashed out to illumine the situation, and he dearly relished a joke to the end.

THE LATE JUSTICE HARLAN. supreme court last spring Justice Harlan told one of the tobacco trust lawyers who was addressing the court that all the tobacco he bought these days was either spoiled or adulterated. The story was published, and the justice received samples of chewing tobacco for many weeks.

EXTRACT OF WHALE. New Food Supply From Hitherto Neglected Sources. Experts in the United States are giving careful study to the methods in vogue in certain fish factories in northern Europe, with a view to the economical preparation of products from fish that hitherto Americans have regarded as useless.

SAFETY DEVICE FOR ELEVATORS. A person is entering or leaving or when one is standing so near the door as to be in danger of injury from the movement of the elevator.

Why Prairies Are Treeless. Professor B. Shimek of the State university of Iowa has been studying this question in Iowa, where the treeless prairie originally covered more than seven-eighths of the total area of the state, says the Scientific American.

Reversible Floor. The floor in the Apollo theater in Paris is reversible, one side being made for dancing, the other being the usual inclined floor equipped with the folding seats of a theater auditorium.

The Durability of Steel. It has been shown that nearly all the failures of steel occur very early in its history, says Harper's Weekly. If a plate or bar of mild steel lasts for a year in service it may be trusted to last for many years.

TROUBLES OF AMATEURS. Good Reasons Why the Performance Was Delayed. "A-H-H-M, ladies and gentlemen," began the village handy man, advancing to the front of the stage at the conclusion of the first act of the thrilling marine melodrama which was being perpetrated by local talent.

On account of the delay this caused, which was considerably augmented, as you might say, by the swoon the young lady had here and the fit the gentleman pretty nearly fell into over at the hotel when each discovered at about the same time, though, of course, in different parts of town, that he or she, as the case might be, was attempting to don garments that were never in the livin' world made for him or her.

Also b'cuz of the trouble we had to induce the orchestra (they gents, permit me to say, are mighty talented and all that, but at the same time awful hostile toward innovations) to crawl under the green cloth which represents the Indian ocean, and by agitating the same act out a typhoon at sea, and likewise the succeeding fact that the constable didn't know the villain with his makeup on, and mistook him for a fellow that stole something or rather about four years ago, and has just finished coming up here into the wings and arresting him and dragging him around a good deal before we could get him separated from him, which delayed the first act somewhat, for there was quite a spell during which the villain was badly needed on the stage and couldn't come, and the actors had to say things that didn't sound sensible while waiting for him—and—er—

Well, for these and other reasons, we find that in order to get through with the performance at a reasonable hour it will be necessary for the actors and actresses to skip and run when they ought to walk with dignity, and talk fast when they should be talking slow, which we trust you will pardon under the cir—

"Aw, that's all right!" interrupted a pessimistic voice from the audience. "But in addition to talking fast, why not let 'em all talk at once? That would shorten it up still more."—Tom P. Morgan in Puck.

Why He Stayed Away. "It's been four years now," said the deserted woman, "since he left me and his happy home. I remember just as well as yesterday, how he stood at the door, holding it open till six flies got in the house."—Indianapolis Press.

What Hurt Him. "My dear," said the minister, turning to his wife, "I've just made a horrible discovery. The ten dollar bill I got for marrying that couple this morning is counterfeit."
